HASTE TO PAY EXPERTS BARED IN COUNCIL QUIZ

Employe Tells of Protesting Bills.

BY OSCAR E. HEWITT.

Some bits of information, bordering on sensational, were gathered yesterday by the council subcommittee appointed to investigate expert fees. The committee will continue the trail tomorrow morning.

For five months the finance committee has tried to ascertain how the two building experts got warrants through the controller's office for $1,004,000, when there was only a specific appropriation for that purpose of $200,000, and how the real estate experts obtained $1,738,000 when there was only an appropriation for $235,000. They asked repeatedly. As often they failed to get the information.

Auditor Sheds Some Light.

But the subcommitee, Ald. Schwartz, Guernsey, and Woodhull, obtained testimony yesterday which developed the following:

Joseph Harvey, chief auditor of the controller's office, refused to approve of vouchers for the experts to be charged to the blanket appropriations reading: "For such other expenditures in connection with the improvement as may be ordered by the city council." The council had not ordered "other expenditures." There was a conference between Harvey, Deputy Controller Gosselin, and others. Harvey was told to give his approval. These facts came from Harvey himself.

Then along came R. J. Battis, who gave testimony which showed that the payments to the experts were given "special attention" to get them through in a short time. When the committee indicated to Battis that he had "put his foot in it" he hastened to change his testimony.

Bills This Year; Voucher 1920.

It was also developed by the lawyers for the committee, Louis Hart and Lawrence Cohen, that a large number of the bills of the experts are dated this year, but that the vouchers approving of them, and also the warrants paying them, are dated Dec. 31 of last year.

The subcommittee wanted to see the warrants and sent Battis for them. He returned with a receipt showing and thirty-three warrants had been withdrawn, and told the committee he understood that it had the warrants. Each alderman, their secretaries and the lawyers denied ever having seen the warrants. They had to be located, if possible, and produced at the committee session Monday morning.

Heretofore city officials have given the impression that the warants and vouchers for the experts went through in the ordinary routine of the controller's office. Even yesterday Chief Clerk Battis appeared and said that he did not know when they went through, but heard about it indirectly later.

Knows "Little" About It.

"You know little or nothing about the payment of the experts," Attorney Hart suggested.

"That's right," replied Battis.

Then Attorney Cohen began asking extremely general questions. The result was that Battis said several times it would take ten days to get a bill through the controllers' office, without "special attention." Then he was shown that a number of the vouchers of the experts were put through in less than ten days.

Battis saw the light and then said that he had intended to say that it might take as much as ten or fifteen days to get a voucher through without "special attention." He added that a voucher for a printing bill for the election commissioners had been put through in one day yesterday "without special attention," but it was known in the room just exactly what "attention" had been given that voucher, therefore his illustration was not impressive.

Controller and Gosselin Absent.

For yesterday's session Controller Harding and Deputy Controller Gosselin had been asked to appear. Neither showed up, nor sent the committee the reason for their absence. The committee then sent for Harvey. In the early part of his testimony he gave the impression that it had been decided at a conference between himself, Deputy Controller Gosselin, and other employés to charge the experts' bills to the blanket appropriation. Near the close Ald. Schwartz did the questioning:

"You never in the world would have passed these warrants, would you, unless you had some information fro-

330 Trapped; Ship Fast in River Rapids

Ogdensburg, N. Y., July 16.—Strenuous efforts were being made tonight to remove 330 passengers from the steamer Rapids King of the Canada Steamship line, which was disabled in the Long Sault rapids of the St. Lawrence river late today.

The rudder chain breaking, the tiller was used to beach the vessel in seven feet of raging waters. No boats were able to approach because of the swiftness of the current.

An improvised platform was constructed by farmers in an attempt to get the passengers ashore, but at a late hour their efforts had not been successful.

When midnight approached all efforts to remove the passengers from the steamer had been unsuccessful. The steamer was said to have a large hole in her hull and the pumps were working steadily.

When the rudder chain broke three men at the wheel narrowly escaped serious injury. A near panic ensued when the news of the mishap spread among the passengers, and it required the united efforts of the crew to quiet them. Most of the passengers are said to be tourists from various parts of the United Staes and Canada.

ONE KILLED, TWO SAVED, AS BLAST WRECKS SALOON

Firemen Rescue Pair Locked in Icebox.

Trapped in an icebox and surrounded by flames and smoke, two men had a narrow escape from death yesterday in a mysterious explosion which wrecked the saloon of Joseph Bebargal at 1301 Marianna street. Bebargal himself was fatally injured. He died last night in Alexian Brothers' hospital.

Lieut. Arthur J. Brady of truck company No. 55 heard the rescued men pounding on the walls of their prison and with his men broke down the galvanized iron door of the icebox. When the door was broken down both men were unconscious and had to be carried to the street by firemen.

The two men were Joseph Bebargal Jr., son of the saloonkeeper and bartender in the saloon, and Frank Scheffman, 24, of 1437 West 13th street, a patron. Both were severely burned on the hands and shoulders.

"Home Brew" Explosion?

The explosion is believed to have been the result of an effort to make "home brew." It occurred about 8:30 o'clock in the morning, apparently in the basement of the saloon, and was followed immediately by a fire.

Both the Bebargals and Scheffman were in the basement. The younger Bebargal and Scheffman were in an icebox about ten feet square in the front part of the basement, and the father was in the rear, where the ceiling is only three feet high.

Berbagal Sr.'s injuries were caused almost entirely by the explosion, which shattered from thirty to forty jugs. He was able to make his way to the upper part of the saloon unaided.

Raid Tavern; Seize Owner.

A raid on the Jeffery tavern, East 83d street and South Chicago avenue, Friday night netted one of the largest hauls of contraband whisky made recently by prohibition agents.

Frank Ahearn, owner of the tavern, and Charles Rupert, a bartender, were arrested. They waived preliminary hearing when arraigned before United States Commissioner Glass yesterday afternoon and were held to the federal grand jury under bonds of $5,000 each. The confiscated liquor was itemized as follows:

Thirty-two five gallon jugs of Scotch whisky, fifty quarts of Johnny Walker whisky, twenty-nine gallons of other whisky, two fifty gallon barrels of real beer.

OWEN OLIVER has written an unusual short story in which the ending is so weird, unexpected and original that it comes almost as a shock. THE RED FISHER is one of the best short stories of the year and you won't want to miss it.

THE RHYME OF THE RESTLESS ROVER

Being a Poem First Printed in The Tribune and Now Slightly Altered Apropos of the Author's Vacation Plans, Which, However, Can Hardly Extend as Far as This.

[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

McCUTCHEON

I sit at my desk in the sizzing heat
Of a blistering summer day,
And think of the places I'd like to go
If I only could get away.

It might take more than a couple of weeks
For such an extensive tour,
For some of the places are far away
And connections might be poor.

I'd leave a call for 7 o'clock;
I'd sleep with my clothing on;
I'd do my packing the night before,
And start in the cool of the dawn.

I'd then go aboard of a clipper ship
Engaged in the China trade,
And we'd clear the bar by the morning star,
As soon as the anchor's weighed.

I'd tell the skipper the course to set,
He'd pipe all hands aloft,
And away we'd go for Borneo,
Lunching at Tranby Croft.

Perhaps I'd dock at the Inchcape Rock—
Perhaps at the Farallones—
We'd raise Luzon in the rosy dawn,
While the lazy trade wind drones.

I'd dance to the tune of the rigadoon,
And if the canvas fills
We'd eat our tiffin at Annandale,
In the shade of the Simla Hills.

The Persian Gardens at Ispahan,
The Reef of Norman's Woe,
Sierra Leone, and San Antone
Are places where I would go.

I'd steer a canoe in the Great Karroo,
And rollick in Bantry Bay;
By the golden moon, from old Rangoon,
I'd journey to Mandalay.

And Malabar Hill is not too far
If you go by the Andaman Isles;
I'd sniff the breeze in the Celebes,
Where the Indian Ocean smiles.

Van Diemen's Land and Samarcand,
St. Albans and Singapore—
You may easily reach on Rockaway Beach
From Bingen to Bangalore.

For it's always fair off Finisterre,
On the way to the Barbadoes;
And it's not too far to Kandahar,
If a steady monsoon blows.

Through creamy seas and sparkling skies
I'd follow the Spanish Main;
I'd touch Stamboul and Stanley Pool,
If it didn't begin to rain.

It's never too late to pull your freight
For Rio and Argentine;
With a fav'ring breeze off the Hebrides
You can dock at the Engadine.

The Barbary coast I like the most,
But the Ivory coast is fine;
I'd shed my cares in the Aberdares
And dine on the Brandywine.

We'd heave the lead at Diamond Head,
And if the holding's good,
We'd visit the shore "to look them o'er."
As all good sailors should.

We'd drop the hook in the Zuyder Zee,
We'd touch at the Cameroons,
We'd drink a toast on the Congo coast
To the Inniskillen dragoons.

Mashonaland and Yucatan,
Cashmir and the Hindu Kush,
Are places that I should surely go
To escape the tourist rush.

The Friendly Isles and the Tonga Land,
Bagdad and the River Plate,
Cockburn Land and the Rio Grande,
Gaboon and the Golden Gate.

The Orkney Isles and Lockerbie street,
Peshawar and Mozambique,
While Far Cathay and Hudson's Bay
I'd view from the mizzen peak.

Grundelwald and Brandenburg,
Savanna and Ootacamund,
Connemara and London Town,
Bombay and the Shanghai Bund.

Zanzibar and the Chilkoot Pass,
Glengarry and Broken Hill,
The Ballyshannon and County Clare,
Calgary and Bougainville.

I'd stop in Lapland—it sounds to me
Like a friendly sort of a place;
I'd study the moon with Lorna Doone—
Dining at Chevy Chase.

Majorca, Malacca, and Malvern Hill,
Manila and Fuji San,
The County Tyrone and the Arctic Zone,
Carnarvon and Turkestan.

The Isle of Pines and the Dardanelles,
Kowloon and the Caspian sea,
Cawnpore, Cracow, and the Khyber Pass,
Crimea and Kimberley.

We'd follow the tide on the Hongkong side—
I'd go out on the Bubbling Well Road;
I'd go chop-chop to a curio shop
Which I know in the Queen's High Road.

I'd look at the glass in Limoon Pass,
And if the weather is fine
We'll steer for Delhi and Bonnie Dundee
By way of the River Rhine.

Delagoa, Samoa, and Shenandoah
Are names that please the ear;
Victoria Nyanza strikes my fancy,
And so does Monastir.

Ping Yang, Hankow, and Hyderabad,
Lucknow and the Fair Touraine;
The Caribbean and Far Kashgar
Are places I'd visit again.

Wind River, the Tana, the Yangtze-Kiang,
And the Plains of Abraham;
Siberia, India, Amazon, Oude,
Benares and Bethlehem.

Antilles, Azores, Loch Lomond, and Rome,
Indiana and Tennessee,
The River Rhone and the Frigid Zone
Are spots that appeal to me.

I'd finish the cruise at Newport News,
I'd wish no longer to roam;
I'd settle down for a couple of weeks
Contentedly at home.

Now, such a trip, I honestly think
Would benefit any man;
He'd put more force in his work, of course,
And have a beautiful tan.

MRS. WEEGHMAN AND THRESHER WED IN ROCKFORD

Mrs. Bessie Webb Weeghman, divorced wife of Charles Weeghman of arm chair restaurant fame, and Charles Joyce Thresher, a department manager in Marshall Field's wholesale store, and also divorced, were married yesterday in Rockford, Ill.

The ceremony took place at the Second Congregational church, and the Rev. John Gordon officiated. Mr. and Mrs. William R. Tucker of Chicago were witnesses.

Last Monday, when asked about rumors of his approaching marriage to Mrs. Weeghman, Thesher laughed and said: "That's funny—it's the first I've heard of it." Friends also scouted the rumor on the ground Thresher was not divorced until Aug. 30, 1920, and another marriage within a year would not be considered legal.

Mrs. Weeghman at the time of her divorce was given $400 a month alimony and the custody of her 8 year old daughter, Dorothy Jane.

Chicago Girl to Make Parachute Jump Today

Miss Mickey Domes, a young Chicago girl, will today make her first parachute jump. The jump will be made with a Floyd Smith life pack from an airplane piloted by Lieut. Ed[illegible] J. Hedrick over the landing field on the Milwaukee road near Palatine, about 4 o'clock this afternoon.

FIREMEN RESCUE BOY CAUGHT BY HEAD IN PILING

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Max Rochester, 15, got tired of swimming off Ocean Parkway, Brooklyn, today. He climbed up on a breakwater and played among the stones and piling. Bending over, his head became caught between two pieces of piling. Meanwhile the tide was rising.

Max called to his playmates. They tried to pull him out, but had to quit when it seemed his neck would not stand the strain. Then a crowd gathered, but Max "stayed put." Autoists greased the piling and the boy's head, but that did not help. Two policemen came with axes and started to chop down the two pieces of piling.

They chopped until they were tired and then called the fire department. The firemen cut down the pieces of piling and let the boy out. He had been there more than an hour, but was only bruised.

His New Job Costs Him His Life; Falls 6 Floors

A few hours after being employed by the Booth Cold Storage company, Patrick Glynn, 332 North Michigan avenue, fell into a cinder chute yesterday while working on the seventh floor of a building at 121 West Kinzie street. After ripping open the side of the building firemen found his body wedged in the chute between the second and first floors. Efforts to revive him with an oxygen machine were unsuccessful.

LINER PALACE IS SALVAGE FROM FOUR BILLIONS!

Leviathan's Rescue Dream of Lasker.

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Chairman A. D. Lasker of the United States Shipping board came here today and made a personal inspection of the mammoth former German liner Leviathan, which lies in the Hoboken docks.

In the course of a talk on board this 50,000 ton vessel, which has become a white elephant to the American government, Mr. Lasker remarked that the losses in the United States through the shipping board in its three and one-half years of war and postwar existence amount to almost $4,000,000. This is the highest figure ever placed one our shipping orgy.

Mr. Lasker reiterated that the new board, of which President Harding made him the head, inherited the greatest commercial wreck of all time.

Its "Assets" "Liabilities."

"It inherited assets that were mostly liabilities," he said. "The wood ships alone cost $240,000,000 and will be sold, salvaged, or sunk before Oct. 1. They are commercially impractical."

Several facts about the Leviathan were learned as a result of Chairman Lasker's visit. A plan to recondition the vessel and place it in the trans-Atlantic service will be put before the new board at once. A decision as to what to do with it is to be made in thirty days. If Chairman Lasker has his way it will be operated.

The project for reconditioning the boat has progressed so far that forty draughtsman are at work with boards and ink on drawing tables placed in the grand salon.

May Put Leviathan in Service.

The International Mercantile Marine company has not merely an option on the boat's services, but a contract to operate it for the board for a term of five years.

The plan of the International Mercantile Marine is to place the Leviathan in service between here, Southampton and Hamburg, along with the new Majestic, formerly the German Bismarck, which it has acquired. The Leviathan will be under the American flag in the American line; the Majestic under the British flag in the White Star line. This will give the I. M. M. the largest two vessels in the world.

The shipping board will pay for the refitting of the Leviathan. Estimates of the cost to put it in shape vary from $8,000,000 to $10,000,000.

Huge Cost of Great Liners.

To replace the Leviathan would cost between $25,000,000 and $30,000,000. Chairman Lasker mentioned those figures and nodded for approval to P. A. S. Franklin, president of the I. M. M., who was on the big ship. The exact figure the Leviathan cost never was made public. It was believed to have been around $10,000,000. That was before the war.

The upkeep alone lying idle in Hoboken cost $60,000 a month for a time, but has been reduced to $36,000.

Capt. John C. Jamison, veteran commander of the American line ships, who has been in command on the Leviathan, denied the boat was in the mud. He had made soundings all around it that showed forty feet of water on all sides, and the vessel is only drawing thirty-five feet.

The engines have been kept in fine condition. The main turbines will have to be opened for examination. But the big ship could be fired at once and steam away under its own power.

Soldier and Tourist!

The passenger accommodations will have to be rebuilt. On F deck all the staterooms were torn out. This was to make the troop capacity greater during the war. The capacity was increased from 3,500 passengers to 14,500 troops.

If the work of reconditioning is started within a few weeks, the Leviathan cannot make its first trip before the winter of 1923.

"The Leviathan will be the finest ship in the world for luxury and comfort," Chairman Lasker said. "We will show what can be done in America in the way of turning out a ship. They say the cost will be between $8,000,000 and $10,000,000. I should say between $10,000,000 and $12,000,000.

Favor One Extravagance.

"It is the one thing we are going to be extravagant in. It has been costing $46,000 a month, or $500,000 a year, of the taxpayers' money merely to keep this ship and get no use out of it. Now we must either recondition it and place it in service or salvage it.

"We have not settled with the Germans for it yet. I take it that in the reparations arrangements we may have to pay for its hull."

Packing Firm Aid $150,000 Shy; Admits It

Austin, Minn., July 16.—Formal announcement was made today by George A. Hormel & Co. and R. J. Thomson, controller of the company, that Thomson had admitted defalcations totaling "at least $150,000." Thomson is assisting auditors in ascertaining the exact amount of his shortage.

The Hormel company, which does a packing business of approximately $30,000,000 annually, has notified its correspondents of the defalcation. It is taking steps to avoid any financial embarrassment that might result.

Reveal Shortage Here.

No legal action had been taken tonight against Thomson and it was indicated none is planned until it is definitely known what the shortage is. The company expects to announce the total next Wednesday, when a directors' meeting will be held in Chicago.

"I must have been crazy; I know I was crazy," was the only explanation for his peculations forthcoming from Thomson.

Thomson is well known throughout this section of the country as "Cy Thompson," and he is president of the Oakdale poultry farm at Leroy, Minn., near here, and the Oakdale Holstein farm near Blooming Praire, Minn.

Rise in Business Rapid.

From a $12 a week clerk in a confectionery store here, Thomson's rise was rapid. Every week he announced some new project for making money, and his neighbors looked forward eagerly for each announcement.

One day he announced he had inherited a forty acre farm near Leroy, which he converted into a chicken ranch. He spent $50,000 upon it. It became a Mecca for travelers.

Thomson laid out beautiful parks on the farm; erected a dancing pavilion at an expense of $30,000 with a dancing floor to accommodate 1,000 couples. Two thousand electric lights were installed.

A hotel with fifty beds and a dining room to care for seventy-five diners was built. Then he constructed a fire station and installed two chemical engines with a permanent fire fighting force.

Remembered the Children.

A ten acre playground for children was laid out and an artificial lake built.

On a farm north of Austin he spent thousands of dollars on buildings to house his $300,000 herd of Holstein cows and his $20,000 Duroc hogs. His cows were cleansed with vacuum cleaners. Electric fans were installed in the barns and so arranged as to drive all flies to a room at one end of the building where they were destroyed by chemical gases. His hog barn was steam heated.

He erected a dormitory for his hired men, spending $10,000 for rugs and draperies. There was a billiard, sun room, and a dance hall. Every man in Mower and Steele counties wanted to get a job on Oakdale farm.

Helped Chicago Trail.

The Oakdale trail from the Twin Cities to Chicago was another project aided by Thomson. He named it after his farms and planned an artistic cut stone gateway to be erected at the Iowa state line where the trail passes Oakdale farm.

His subscriptions to public affairs and charity always were large. Thomson talked calmly tonight about his trouble and declared his only present concern was to get his accounts straightened out.

Mrs. Thomson is loyal in her support, of her husband and said she is ready "to start all over again" with him. They have one son, Gerald.

200 MILE AERIAL DERBY IS WON BY JAMES IN 1:14

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 16.—James H. James won the aerial Derby today with Mars I., nicknamed "Bamel." The course was 200 miles, consisting of two 100 mile circuits around London, starting at Herdon, with turning points at Brooklands, Epson, West Thurock, Epping, and Hertford. James' time was 1 hour 14 minutes. He received a trophy and £400 for the fastest time and a trophy and £200 for winning with a handicap. W. H. Longon was second and Samuel Butler third. In the inter-university race Cambridge beat Oxford over the smaller course.

Lord Curzon, "Press Shy," Snubs American Journalists

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

LONDON, July 16.—Lord Curzon, the British foreign minister, who is now trying to force a boycott on Lord Northcliffe's newspapers because the London Times dared to call him "pretentious, pompous, and incompetent," has this week shown his disregard for newspapers by refusing to see three American newspaper representatives, Capt. Joseph Medill Patterson of THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE, Frank Munsey of the New York Herald, and Lewis Wylie of the New York Times, on the plea of "press of business."

LONDON HEARS DOMINION RULE IS ACCEPTABLE

Ulster Claim Crux of Controversy.

[Chicago Tribune-New York Times Cable.]
[Copyright: 1921.]

LONDON, July 16.—It is almost universally agreed in political circles, where every scrap of information available regarding the Irish negotiations is eagerly discussed, that on Friday morning Lloyd George managed to obtain from De Valera a statement of Ireland's claims that waived the demand for an independent republic.

In other words, the report is that if Ireland obtains her claim for self-determination, she will determine to remain within the commonwealth of British nations.

Question of Concessions.

Most informed discussions on the situation finish with the remark that everything depends on Ulster. How much will De Valera concede and how much will Craig accept?

In this connection importance is attached to a report in the Belfast News Letter from its London correspondent, which reads:

"If what I hear of De Valera's attitude be true, the crux has been reached. His compromise demand, it appears, is dominion home rule for Ireland on Canadian lines. Ulster can have all self-governing powers with such safeguards as may be required, provided she derives them from a central Irish authority.

Firm on Irish Unity.

"On the unity of Ireland, the Sinn Fein leader is insistent. Furthermore, he takes the view that it is for him and Lloyd George to arrange the terms and for the latter to settle with Ulster, and he has intimated that any settlement which he might regard as satisfactory would have to be submitted for ratification by Dail Eireann."

The Irish office today issued the following statement:

"Reports to the effect that Mr. de Valera has offered Ulster all powers possessed under the home rule act should be accepted with reserve. But at any rate nothing has occurred to destroy hopes of an eventual settlement which is the desire of all parties."

ULSTER HEADS MEET

BY JOHN STEELE.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

LONDON, July 16.—The conference of Sir James Craig, the Ulster premier, with his cabinet was the outstanding feature of the Irish situation today. The Ulster cabinet members were hastily summoned from Belfast last night and arrived in the British capital this afternoon.

After the meeting Sir James refused to make a statement as to what took place or what his position was, saying the matter was too serious to be discussed, many lives depending on the way the question was handled, and that any indiscretion might do incalculable harm.

"Lives depend upon the way in which the matter is handled," he said today, "and the slightest indiscretion or misrepresentation might cause serious harm."

Craig Has Irish Terms.

However, it is admitted Sir James is in possession of Mr. de Valera's peace terms and these were discussed at the meeting. The Irish leader's terms are said to include dominion status for all Ireland, with provincial autonomy for Ulster.

Both Downing street and the Irish republican headquarters in Grosvenor hotel are resting during the week end. Mr. Lloyd George went to Chequers, his country home, and Mr. de Valera went motoring in the country with members of his party, while Arthur Griffith remained with friends in London.

The entire Irish party plans to attend mass tomorrow at St. George's Cathedral, Southwark, whose bishop, Dr. Amigo, is a friend of Ireland and an opponent to Cardinal Bourne's policy.

Three Leaders to Meet.

Mr. de Valera will meet Prime Minister Lloyd George late Monday and perhaps he will have an informal talk with Sir James Craig at the same time. On Wednesdy it is expected that Mr. de Valera will take back to Ireland Mr. Lloyd George's terms for submission to Dail Eireann or possibly for plebiscite by all Ireland.

Desmond Fitzgerald, the Sinn Fein minister of publicity, who has been interned for some months, was released from Curragh Camp last night and is on his way to London to join

Mr. de Valera. He has been on bread and water and has been sleeping on the camp floor for the last month as a punishment for leading a mutiny.

PEACE OR WAR.

DUBLIN, July 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—Commenting upon the conference between Eamonn de Valera and Prime Minister Lloyd George in London, the Irish Bulletin today declared:

"If a peaceful settlement should be denied, the Irish people will resume armed resistance to foreign domination. They possess the will, and, by endurance, the power to bring their fight eventually to success."

CRAIG TALKS TO SOLDIERS.

BELFAST, Ireland, July 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—Sir James Craig, Ulster premier, in a message to a war memorial meeting in Castle Dawson, County Londonderry, today, declared that the British empire, for which the soldiers in whose honor the meeting was held made the supreme sacrifice, would never be weakened by any action of his.

"You may all rest assured," said Sir James, "that I will see to it that the empire in whose cause they so nobly laid down their lives is not weakened by any action of mine. They trusted us to give nothing away, and their trust will never be betrayed."

MUST SATISFY ENGLAND.

Only the matter of satisfying English statemen that Irish independence would be no menace to Great Britain now stands as a bar to peace in Ireland, in the opinion of Thomas W. Walsh, assistant national secretary of the American Association for the Recognition of the Irish Republic.

In a statement issued from the association's headquarters at 163 West Washington street yesterday, Mr. Walsh said many reports as to what is transpiring in the conferences between Premier Lloyd George and Eamonn de Valera must be regarded as speculative.

"It is certain, however," reads the statement, "that the outstanding questions of the conference are the claim of Ulster for special consideration and the alleged necessity for safeguarding England in the event of an Irish republic.

"The Ulster contention has apparently been disposed of by the declaration of President de Valera that it is a matter for internal settlement in Ireland, and does not properly figure in peace discussion between Ireland and England. It would appear, therefore, that there remains only the question of protection for England, and undoubtedly the government of Ireland is ready to give the strongest guarantees that the independence of Ireland will be no menace to England or the British empire. De Valera has at all times contended the Irish republic is ready and willing to formulate a treaty with England for their mutual protection.

MILK MEN FACE QUIZ ON 'PLOT TO RESTRAIN TRADE'

Investigation of an alleged conspiracy in restraint of trade, entered into by milk wagon drivers, will be started by the state's attorney's office tomorrow.

In making this announcement yesterday, Ernest S. Hodges, acting first assistant state's attorney, said many housewives recently have made complaints charging drivers have an "understanding" that prevents a customer from changing from one milk delivery service to another.

"We have not yet enough evidence to form conclusions," said Mr. Hodges. "There is indication that the effort complained of is to have as few drivers as possible covering a given territory. A man makes a better showing if he delivers to six apartments in a building instead of to one or two. Our task will be to find out whether the delivery men have agreed among themselves not to cut in on territory claimed by any of their number."

He said drivers and employers, principally from the smaller concerns, would be summoned and if evidence warranted the matter would be presented to the grand jury.

CAN THE OLD WEST "COME BACK"? YOU TELL 'EM, COWBOY!

Leonard Stroud on the hurricane deck of his bronk, giving 15,000 spectators at the opening of the world championship cowboy contests in Grant park yesterday an exhibition of fancy horsemanship. The plainsmen roped, bulldogged, and rode in thrilling fashion for the benefit of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society, under the auspices of which the event is being staged. Persons of social prominence patronized the contests liberally.

U-BOAT OFFICERS SENTENCED FOR SEA ATROCITIES

Men Who Sunk Hospital Ship Jailed.

LEIPSIC, Germany, July 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—Lieut. Dittmar and Lieut. Boldt, charged with murder in the first degree for firing on lifeboats after the Canadian hospital ship Llandovery Castle had been torpedoed in the summer of 1918, were each sentenced today to four years' imprisonment. In addition to his prison sentence, Lieut. Dittmar's dismissal from the reichswehr defense force was ordered.

Lieut. Boldt, who a short time ago retired from the navy, was ordered deprived of his civil rights.

The men were sentenced for manslaughter, not murder, on the ground that the "officers acted on the impulse of the moment."

An excited crowd filled the courtroom today. Many women and numerous friends of the prisoners were present. The accused officers looked more cheerful than at any time since their trial began, but their appearances changed when the sentences were announced.

No Hard Labor.

The sentences did not, however, carry hard labor with them, as demanded by the public prosecutor. The case of Dittmar and Boldt differed from the others which had been heard by the Supreme court here in connection with trials growing out of violations of the rules of civilized warfare, inasmuch as the two lieutenants were brought to trial by the German public prosecutor.

Great Britain only had demanded the trial of Commander Patzig of the submarine which torpedoed the Llandovery Castle. He fled the country. The public prosecutor, however, after an examination of the evidence, ordered that Dittmar and Boldt be placed on trial.

Dr. Schmidt, president of the Supreme court which is trying Germans accused of violations of civilized warfare, in reviewing the case, declared the Llandovery Castle was torpedoed against the law of nations.

Judge Scores Act.

"Everything aboard was in perfect order," he said, "and, furthermore, the sinking was against all regulations of the German admiralty, as the ship was in waters where the torpedoing was forbidden.

"At least three lifeboats got clear. There was no reason why all could not have been picked up. All three must have been afloat when the submarine began firing and two of them must have been hit.

"The court finds these boats were fired on intentionally, with the object of removing witnesses who could testify to the misdeed by the submarine commander."

"The court finds that both of the accused took part in the firing and in the effort to cover up the deed; therefore both share Commander Patzig's responsibility. Furthermore, the court finds the officers acted on the impulse of the moment, that the deed was not premediated; consequently they are not guilty of murder. They would have done their duty if they had refused to obey Commander Patzig's orders to fire on the lifeboats and would have been justified in refusing to comply with the commander's demand to maintain secrecy."

WASHINGTON NEWS —IN BRIEF—

WASHINGTON, D. C., July 16.

Japan has been assured by the United States that she will not be compelled to play a "lone hand" at the forthcoming Washington conference, and must now making the next move in the negotiations preliminary to the gathering.

A precedent for the action of President Harding in urging delay on soldier bonus legislation is set forth in a statement issued today from the White House showing that President Grant vetoed a soldiers' bonus bill, because it would have seriously embarrassed government refunding operations in progress at the time.

The Sweet bill failed to get through the finance committee again today, being held up by a flood of minor amendments. The committee probably will not get it out now until the middle of next week.

Legalization of 2.75 per cent barley-malt beer was urged upon congress today by northwestern farmers, who declared it would add about $300,000,000 to their yearly revenue.

BLUE BOOK SEES RAMPAGING WEST ZIP INTO LOOP

Cowboy Thrills Galore Are Given 15,000.

The hardships, dangers and comedies of the west brought many a thrill to Chicago society folk yesterday as they watched the opening of the world's championship contest of cowboy sports in Grant park. The contests are being given for the benefit of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society.

Approximately 15,000 persons attended. The cowboys played their games with such energy that one was carried away in an ambulance and many others were slightly injured when they were pitched from the backs of horses and wild steers.

Bill Brown was the rider who left the field in the ambulance. He had attempted to ride "Milk River," a "pitching, sunfishing, man killing bronk," and after the fifth pitch had been thrown. His injuries are not serious.

Cheers for Everybody.

Although there was a long wait between each event the crowd did not seek relief from the burning sun until the last long horned Mexican steer had been boarded by the cowmen. They cheered while Johnny Judd roped, threw and tied a spunky calf. They cheered the young steers galloping triumphantly away. There was a great silence as Brown fell from his bucking bronk. There were many cheers when Tommy Kirnan rode the Roman standing race.

The contest opened with fancy roping, bareback broncho riding, a cowboy relay race and the girls' broncho riding contests. The first thrills swept the crowd when Toots Ayres dashed over the dead line after a wild calf. In this contest the cowboy is permitted to stop and hold the calf with a rope, but must throw the animal and hog-tie him from the ground with his hands. A contestant is permitted to throw loops at the calf. If he fails to stop the animal with two ropes he is disqualified.

Eddie Burgess, the Indian millionaire, won the calf roping contest for the day. His time was 57 seconds. Johnny Judd missed with his first rope yet threw his animal in 1:14½. These two are regarded as topnotchers. Seven riders missed with their first loops.

Jimmy Taylor Wins Race.

Then came the Roman standing race, one man standing on two horses racing a quarter mile. Jimmy Taylor won and Tommy Kirnan rode to a close second.

The broncho riding with saddle followed. A. Brassfield was hurled from the back of Grizzly Sal, a horse with a man killer reputation. Hippy Burmeister stuck on Jesse James. Jim Tuff fell from Sweet Grass and Bill Brown was sent to the hospital by Milk River.

The big thrill came in the steer bulldogging. Mike Hastings flopped his longhorn in 16 3-5 seconds, Yakima Canutt in 24, and Jim Massey in 34¾.

SOCIETY HAS THRILLS

Numbers of Chicago's smart set watched the cowboys. Members of the blue book delegation had many an exctiing moment and there was a near-riot when the announcer, resplendent among other articles in a shiny satin shirt, told the occupants of the boxes what few of their occupants understood, that "unless you excell in this contest, you don't get nothing." The boxes and the bleachers were for the boys from then on.

Mrs. Potter Palmer, who with Chauncey McCormick has worked indefatigably to make the affair a success, looked pleased at the attendance.

Among the Visitors.

With Mrs. Palmer were her two small daughters, Mr. and Mrs. George Higginson Jr., and Miss Muriel McCormick. Mrs. Palmer wore a frock of black crêpe marocain with gray hose and black patent leather slippers. Her broad black straw sailor had a white water lily on the brim. Mrs. Higginson was in black crêpe, a black hat, and long black gloves.

Mrs. Jacob Baur wore a cool checked gingham frock and a black horsehair hat trimmed with cherries. She was a member of a party at which Joseph H. Winterbotham was host—Miss Emily Larned, Mrs. Frank Townley Brown, and Frederick B. Tuttle.

Miss Isabel Watkins and her fiancé, Alexander H. Revell Jr., had ringside seats. Miss Watkins was in brown swiss and a hat of brilliant orange trimmed with flowers and wheat.

Others in Boxes.

Others in the boxes were Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hamill, Mr. and Mrs. John H. McIlvaine Jr., Mrs. John Borden, Mrs. Howard Linn, Mr. and Mrs. William P. Hunt Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Augustus S. Peabody, Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Bull, Mrs. George Seaverns Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Edward F. Swift Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William E. GEN. MAUD 'HUY, METZ GOVERNOR, DIES IN CONTENT

His Life Aim Regaining Lorraine for France.

PARIS, July 16.—Gen. L. E. de Maud 'huy, military governor of Metz, died today.

Gen. de Maud 'huy was born in Lorraine. As a child he witnessed the capitulation of Metz to the Germans and thereafter consecrated himself to the task of aiding in the restoration of his province to France. At the age of 17 he entered the St. Cyr military school and was graduated at 20 among the first of his class.

Leads Men to Sarrebourg.

At the outbreak of the war he was in temporary command of the Sixteenth division at Dijon, forming part of the Eighth corps and are armies of Lorraine. He marched on Sarrebourg, personally led a night attack upon the heights dominating Blamont and entered Sarrebourg Aug. 18, 1914.

The Second army under Gen. de Castelune marching on Morhange having been obliged to retire, the division of Gen. de Maud 'huy was obliged to follow, but retreated only under formal superior orders.

His masterly conduct of this retreat and his successful execution of orders to throw the Germans back across the Mortagne during the battle of the Grand Courenne de Nancy, earned him the command of the Eighteenth army corps, at the head of which he faced the Germans in the battle of the Marne.

Commands Tenth Army.

On Sept. 29 he was called to the command of the Tenth army, and between Oct. 2 and 10 his men checked the attack of five German corps and permitted the movement of the British troops toward the north in the race of the belligerents to the sea.

Among the best known exploits of the Tenth army while under Gen. de Maud 'huy's command was the capture of the heights at Notre Dame de la Lorette, dominating the industrial center of Lens.

AMERICA WAITS JAPS' NEXT STEP ON HARDING BID

Not for U. S. to Outline Conference Scope.

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—Japan, having been assured by the United States that she will not be compelled to play a "lone hand" at the forthcoming Washington conference on limitation of armaments and far eastern problems, must make the next move in the negotiations preliminary to the international gathering soon to be officially called.

Until Japan has responded to the reassuring information conveyed by Secretary of State Hughes concerning her misgivings over the scope of the conference, there will be no major development in the matter and the diplomatic aspect of the conference negotiations remains in a state of suspended animation.

Expect No London Meeting.

While the British government, under the urging of the prime ministers of the British overseas dominions, now in session, is represented as having suggested that a preliminary conference should be held in London prior to the departure for home of these dominion statesmen, the Harding administration sees no prospect that the first meeting will not take place in Washington on a date to be determined by mutual consent.

It is assumed here that with no preliminary meeting in London the premiers of the British overseas dominions will find it convenient to come to Washington.

No Worry Over Jap View.

Japan's attitude disclosed in the statement given out in New York today by the Japanees consul general there is causing no real concern to the United States.

The Washington administration takes the position that the conference is assured, and in response to the considerations outlined by Japan in the statement furnished to the press by her consul general in New York this government is telling the Tokio government that it is not for the "inviting participant" to define the scope of the conference.

That must be left to the conferees themselves when they assemble in Washington, although preliminary exchanges may serve to bring out the views of the various governments.

LEAGUE BOARD MEETS

BY JOHN CLAYTON.
[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS, July 16.—The disarmament commission of the league of nations began a five days' session here today for the study of the problem of world disarmament. Chairman Rene Viviani in opening the meeting expressed the hope that the commission's work might serve as a basis for the Washington conference with which it would "in no wise interfere."

"We are not surprised that the chief of the great American nation has taken the initiative in calling the nations of the world together for the purpose of reaching an accord," said M. Viviani after explaining that the council of the league gave the commission a mandate to study disarmament from all viewpoints.

Pays Tribute to Harding.

"We are happy to pay tribute to this initiative and are happy to associate ourselves with it, being certain that the work we are going to do must be considered by the different governments in their researches on this problem."

P. A. L. Fisher, the British representative, and Senator Carlos Schanzer of Italy followed M. Viviani in paying tribute to President Harding for his action. Mr. Fisher did not favor taking definite action on disarmament until Germany and Rusisa were members of the league.

Divide Work in Committee.

The commission decided to appoint subcommittees to study problems such as private manufacture of war material, traffic in arms and munitions, institution of an international bureau for the control of the traffic in arms with the right of investigation, limitation of military budgets, and exchange of information between members of the league.

PRAISE HARDING PLAN

TOKIO, July 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—Yukio Ozaki, former minister of justice, whose resolution proposing curtailment of naval armaments was rejected by the Japanese house of representatives in February last, in commenting today on President Harding's proposal for a conference of the great powers on armament limitation and far eastern questions, said that when he introduced his resolution the people thought it Utopian and it was indifferently treated.

"Now that President Harding has issued a world summons, other questions will be discussed, but their importance is dwarfed by that of disarmament," M. Ozaki declared. "Participation by China may seem strange because of her slight navy, but it is only reasonable that she should be invited because she is vitally interested in Pacific problems."

JAP PEER FAVORS PLAN

"Japan certainly favors Harding's plan for disarmament," said Viscount Tadashiro Inouye, member of the Japanese house of peers, and advisory director of the South Manchuria railroad, yesterday at the Blackstone hotel.

"The Japanese people as well as the people of other nations feel the burden of the taxation imposed upon them for the maintenance of expensive armament. In Japan the roads are in a terrible condition, and sanitation and sewage disposal are not as they should be. The people feel that the money expended for armament should be used to better these conditions."

The viscount stopped just long enough to change trains. He is on his way home to Tokio, from Lisbon, Portugal. He headed the Japanese delegation at the International Parliament of Commerce at Lisbon.

CHILDREN OF LAKE FOREST GIVE THEIR DOGS THEIR DAY

BILLY FULLER II. AND BRIDE SCOFF AT DISCORD TALE

Together, Happy, Plan Dinner for 100.

A report alleging marital troubles between Mr. and Mrs. William A. ("Billy") Fuller II. yesterday caused a sensation in society circles.

Memphis is the home town of Mrs. Fuller. She was Ada Norfleet, daughter of J. Chambless Norfleet. "Billy," paying a visit two years ago to the winter home of Miss Lolita Armour at Santa Barbara, Cal., met Miss Norfleet there. Last summer they met again at Hot Springs and marriage followed in October.

All News to "Billy."

Then, according to the Memphis dispatches, discord arose. Mrs. Fuller, the dispatch said, went to a sanitarium and "Billy" came to Chicago.

Yesterday Mr. Fuller said he couldn't understand the reports from Memphis.

"Must be a joke," he declared during a visit to THE TRIBUNE office. "My wife's out at Lake Forest—why, we're going to give a dinner party with a hundred guests next Saturday. She just returned ten days ago from Battle Creek. We've got a house on Sheridan road. I kissed her when I left this morning."

Bride Joins in Denial.

Mrs. Fuller was quite indignant about it.

"I can't imagine where such a report came from," she declared over the telephone. "Billy and I are keeping house here. We are as happy as two persons ever could be. Of course I had to leave Billy for a while and go to a sanitarium, but we couldn't help that separation. Since I came back we've been living here. Last night we attended a dance at the Onwentsia club—everybody saw us there."

Mrs. Le Roy W. Fuller, "Billy's" mother, said her son and daughter-in-law are "as happy as two turtle doves." And that's that.

Ford Considers Buying Part of Wabash Railroad

Toledo, O., July 16.—[Special.]—Henry Ford is considering purchase of the Toledo-Fort Wayne division of the Wabash railroad, it was learned on good authority today.

Ford visited Toledo this week in company with a party of Wabash officials and his own advisers. The entire division was inspected to ascertain what improvement would be necessary to place the road in first class condition. It is also stated that Ford has an eye on the rest of the Wabash lines with a view to securing a means of direct freight shipment from his Detroit factory to St. Louis.

Capt. Beverly G. Chew Gets Seven Years for Forgery

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Capt. Beverly Grayson Chew, veteran of the 1st division, was convicted today by court martial of forgery, impersonating fellow officers, conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman, and other charges constituting a bill of fifty-one specifications, for which he has been on trial at Governor's island since May 16. He was sentenced to dismissal from the service of the United States, and imprisonment for seven years at hard labor in a military prison not yet named.

Taxicab Owners Meet in New Orleans in February

The National Association of Taxicab Owners ended their three day convention at Hotel Sherman yesterday. The convention went on record as favoring standardizing taxicab ordinances throughout the country, based on the Chicago ordinance; lower rates for liability insurance, and a nation-wide taxicab safety campaign. The next meeting will be held in New Orleans in February. John H. Boobar, the president, said the taxicab business all over the country is improving.

Friendly relations were established instantly between the same representative of canine nobility and William H. Mitchell Jr. William's father is superintending the introduction. [TRIBUNE Photos.]

DOBYNS SLATED FOR POSITION ON SHIPPING BOARD

Fletcher Dobyns is to be appointed to the newly reorganized shipping board, according to information received yesterday. The report is a sequel to a rumor in Washington last February that he was to succeed District Attorney Clyne. Mr. Dobyns, an attorney, has taken an active part in political and civic affairs. He was an assistant district attorney under Roosevelt, an assistant state's attorney, and counsel for the Merriam crime commission, the Civil Service Reform league, and the Chicago Dry federation. He declined President Wilson's offer of Frank Polk's post as under secretary of state when the latter resigned. He is a close friend of Senator McCormick.

Canary That Survived Tidal Wave Is Missing

Seen a canary answering to the name of Billy roaming about? He is about the only household utensil saved from the home of Mrs. C. J. Heath when the tidal wave hit Corpus Christi in 1919. Two weeks ago, while flying near his cage at 1252 North Clark street, he was attacked by a bunch of hoodlum sparrows and disappeared. Mrs. Heath has been eyeing the heavens for him ever since.

Miss Beth Armour, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lester Armour, debates whether it is best to take the liberty of petting a dog on such short acquaintance. But the expression of the latter seems amiable enough.

Dancing Husband Nabbed on Lake Boat by Wife

Mrs. Lillian Cockran, 1839 Troy street, turns detective and landed her husband in the bridewell for six months. He was sentenced yesterday by Judge Williams for failing to comply with a court order demanding payment of $8 a week to her. Mrs. Cockran, knowing her husband's penchant for boat riding and dancing, got aboard a Milwaukee bound boat and waited in the ballroom until he entered. Then she had him arrested.

'BANISH DOGS OF WAR OR TRADE IS GERMANY'S PLUM'

Barron Warns World It Must Disarm.

BY J. J. ROWLANDS.
[United Press Staff Correspondent.]

Blue Hill, Maine, July 16.—"The outside world, to compete industrially with Germany, has got to strip itself as Germany has been stripped, of armies and navies."

This is the opinion of Clarence W. Barron, editor of Barron's Financial Weekly and an authority on economics, who, in an interview with the United Press today, explained why he believed that Germany's reconstruction policy must have been a deciding influence on the question of world disarmament.

Barron had just returned from Europe where he made an intensive study of the financial and economic conditions of Germany and France.

War Chastened Germany.

"Germany may yet be more effective for peace than in war," he said. "She has a chastened and disciplined industrial army that will permit no bounds to be set in the day's work. The whole world may take notice that neither gold nor silver standard is to hold Germany back.

"She is completing a new and up to date mercantile fleet. The allies are taxing themselves for her defense on land and sea. She has no world policies to defend, no far reaching diplomacy to support, no foreign lands or people to develop.

"Disarmed and hemmed in by the allies, she is expanding her railways and docks to give her people employment until she can get the raw materials fully to turn her industrial machinery and she cares nothing apparently concerning mediums of exchange or monetary units. Labor is her only asset. She has that only and no silver with which to pay the allies.

"The powder needed in the world's after-war reconstruction must be used in mining industries and foundations for improved housing and homes.

U. S. Must Transport Cheaply.

"The United States will lose out against Germany in the industrial race unless we recover our cheap transportation on land and sea.

"The American people are doubly taxed; first, to support an army of 2,000,000 railroad employés organized against the public interest, and next to support an army of 2,000,000 public servants and tax gatherers that feet at the public crib and return inefficiency and shortened hours of labor."

Super Values

Here are two really wonderful new models created on the lowest of normal levels, with utter disregard of present costs.

This pricing makes quick buying more prudent than waiting.

The manufacturing loss makes it impossible to guarantee the continuance of these prices.

CHIEF COMBS FORCE AND FINDS POLITEST COP

Traffic Man Is Rival of Tribune Prize Winners.

Chicago has three "politest policemen." Recently Chief Fitzmorris went back to his old calling, newspaper work, and assuming the rôle of city editor, assigned a reporter to find the city's politest copper. The result is announced in the June-July issue of "Main 13," the police department's magazine. The courtesy king is officer No. 4598—Patrick J. Sheehy of the traffic division.

JOSEPH E. HOGAN.

JAMES DONAHUE.

PATRICK J. SHEEHY.

But Sheehy is not alone in the honor. During the peregrinations of THE TRIBUNE'S politeness reporter last winter, two other fine examples of urbanity were found. Both given $50 for their pains in answering a reporter's questions. They are Sergt. James Donahue, guardian of the mayor's office, and Joseph E. Hogan, a desk sergeant.

Picks Sheehy Out of a Dozen.

The reporter for Main 13 said it would take him a year to interview the 5,500 members of the force. The chief relented, and the reporter picked Sheehy out of the first dozen interviewed.

Sheehy will get $25 for the politeness he showed in advising the reporter how to purchase fruit on South Water street. Though interrupted time and again by violators of traffic rules, Sheehy returned to his task of advising the stranger each time, and finally, when the reporter complained because he could not carry home a case of grapefruit, suggested that he find a friend with an automobile to go fifty-fifty with him in the purchase of the fruit.

The Chief's Comment.

The latest issue of the police magazine contains a short but pointed "appreciation and notice," signed by Chief Fitzmorris. It follows, in part:

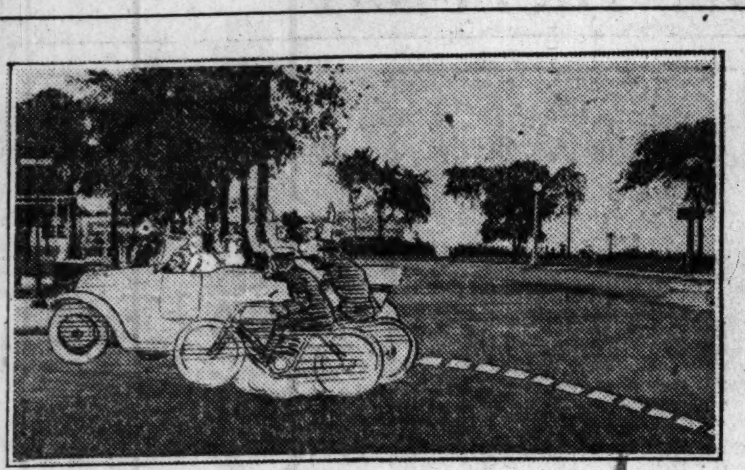
"The Chicago police department numbers among its members the best policemen in the world. . . . For the police officer who does his duty by the department and the city, adequate reward and compensation have been provided. . . . This department has no place for shirkers. They bring discredit upon the rest of the force. They have no place in this organization. They cannot remain. This department is going to reward workers and eleminiate shirkers."

The magazine, which is sent free to every policeman, contains an article by Edwin W. Simms, president of the Chicago crime commission, commending the work of Chief Fitzmorris and the morale of the entire department.

Des Moines Kiddies March for Cheaper Ice Cream

Des Moines, Ia., July 16.—More than 500 children between the ages of 6 and 15 marched through the downtown section of Des Moines today protesting against the high price of ice cream.

BLUFF



With unloaded revolvers—they had emptied them in a two mile chase—George Johnston and Otto Weber, Lincoln park motorcycle policemen, captured five men in a stolen automobile at Sheridan road and Grace street early yesterday. The fugitives kept up a brisk fire on the officers as they sped along, but the policemen turned out the lights of their mounts and kept up the pursuit until the outlaw car was forced to slow down to make the Grace street turn. Whereupon the policemen came alongside and made the capture. Johnston has been commended several times for bravery, and Weber also has a notable record.

TEN CENT SODA MYTH TO LOOP'S FOUNTAINEERS

It Just Doesn't Exist; and the Prices!

Looping the loop for a 10 cent ice cream soda proved an impossible task yesterday. Prices for parfaits, marshmallow flips, and chocolate flops, to say nothing of the horse's neck or the banana split, soared dangerously near the high point of war days. At Kranz's, on State street, a banana split is offered for the modest price of 50 cents.

It has been announced that in some loop stores one could obtain an ice cream soda for a dime. The Owl Drug company at Madison and Clark streets offers a soda for that price—but without the ice cream. A soda with ice cream costs 20 cents.

"Our Reduced Rates."

Spoehr's candy shop at 181 North Michigan avenue announces that "in accordance with our reduced rates" the following prices maintain; then the customary offerings are indicated, with prices ranging from 20 to 40 cents. No orders are taken for a purchase of less than 10 cents.

At Melissino's, 6 East Randolph street, sundaes and sodas are 20 cents and specials 35. At Buck & Rayner's, State and Madison, sodas and sundaes are 17 cents, while a glass of root beer can be purchased for 6 cents.

At the Superior Candy company, 62 West Randolph street, 15 cents is the price of an ice cream soda, while you can get a green river for the good old jitney.

The Home Drug company at Randolph and Clark maintains its price of 22 cents for a malted milk chocolate.

All Kinds of Prices.

The National Drug company, in the Hotel Morrison, has prices ranging from 17 cents for an ice cream soda to 35 cents for a Hawaiian pineapple sundae.

Huylers, at La Salle and Monroe, has prices running from 15 cents for a glass of cold milk to 40 cents for a hot chocolate fudge. The Terrace Garden shop, 71 West Madison street, sells a soda with ice cream for 15 cents. C. N. Johnson's, in the same block, charges the same.

Company Spares Man Who Stole for Sick Wife

After investigating the story of Rudolph Moss of 6004 Vernon avenue, who said he had embezzled $725 to secure the best of medical treatment for his wife, who was ill, the John Sexton Grocery company yesterday declined to prosecute Moss before Judge F. Haas in South Clark street court. The case was dismissed.

Chief Pays Tribute.

"When a group of such high standing as these manifest their friendliness toward the members of the department by substantial guarantees of ready cash, it is proof that at last the police of Chicago are coming into proper recognition," says the chief's announcement in the June and July issues of Maine 13, the police department magazine.

Windows in 2 Shops Are Smashed; Strikers Blamed

ANGRY CITIZENS TRAP BANDIT WHO FIRES AT THEM

Police Save Holdup from Crowd's Vengeance.

Trapped in a crowded street, a holdup man tried to shoot his way to liberty yesterday and only the police saved him from the vengeance of angered citizens whose lives his bullets had endangered.

GEORGE JOHNSTONE.

The man sought to hold up the Newark shoe store at 1938 Milwaukee avenue. As he flashed his revolver in the face of a clerk, Fred Samson, the manager, entered the store. The bandit dashed into the street. Samson's cries attracted a crowd that joined the chase. The bandit pulled out his revolver again and began firing at his pursuers.

Police Guard Holdup from Crowd.

A block from the scene of the attempted holdup the man ran into a basement. There he was trapped after a wagon load of policemen had surrounded the building. The first policemen in the chase had turned in a riot call, fearing the angered citizens at whom the holdup had fired might seek vengeance on him.

At West Chicago avenue station the bandit gave his name as Morris Diddle, alias Hobart, of the Stag hotel.

Five alleged automobile bandits were captured by two Lincoln park motorcycle policemen yesterday morning in a revolver battle during a two mile chase.

The policemen, George Johnston and Otto Weber, cornered the five at Sheridan road and Grace street. Facing the policemen's revolvers, the men turned over their weapons.

At Town Hall station the policemen showed they had captured the five with empty revolvers, the bullets having been discharged during the chase. The men held are:

Frank Carey, 4311 Wentworth avenue.

John Anderson, 518 West 68th street.

John Dacey, 5557 Princeton avenue.

Nicholas Verlatto, 528 West 58th street.

Raymond Dalton, no address.

Story of the Chase.

Policeman Johnston has been commended several times during the last year for bravery. Recently he captured five men single handed uring a revolver battle.

Johnston and Weber spotted the car speeding in Lincoln park. They gave chase and two men in the rear seat opened fire on them. The motorcycle lights were extinguished by the policemen as they returned the bandits' fire.

At Sheridan road and Grace street the bandit auto slowed up to make the turn, and the policemen, coming up, covered the men with their empty guns.

A check of stolen cars showed the automobile was stolen from H. J. Bernard, 4627 Prairie avenue, Friday night.

Holdups Miss $10,000 Gems.

Six men in a touring car took jewels valued at $2,500 and $300 from the jewelry store of Fred J. Lind, 5441 South Winchester avenue, yesterday morning. The thieves missed unset diamonds valued at $10,000.

Girl Who Speaks 16 Languages Aids Judge Landis and Sees That Aliens Going Home Pay Their Income Tax.

MISS ROSE REITER.

Aliens going back to Europe no longer leave Chicago without paying their income tax. Miss Rose Reiter, 1008 Dakin street, sees to that. Miss Reiter, special interpreter for Judge K. M. Landis, speaks sixteen languages. She devoted two years to interpreting for the department of justice, but now her work is in the passport office.

When an alien gets his passport Miss Reiter interviews him as to his income tax payments and until he pays what he owes he stays in the United States. She interviews, sometimes 200 aliens of many tongues in a day.

She was born in Paris and was raised in Alsace-Lorraine. She learned the languages when she was a girl, talking to the men from all over Europe on her father's ranch. She says it takes her but three months to learn a language.

Chicagoans in Big Oil Land Deal in South America

Pittsburgh, Pa., July 16.—[Special.]—More than 9,000,000 acres of oil territory, constituting the largest oil transaction on record, are involved in the transfer of the South American holdings of John W. Leonard and his associates in the Leonard Exploration company and by Kunhardt & Co., incorporated, of New York, to a body of New York, Pittsburgh, and Chicago capitalists.

The deal was made yesterday in the offices of John A. Bell of the Colonial Trust company, here. The new corporation organized will be known as the Andes corporation, with an authorized capital of 2,000,000 shares of stock of no par value.

The properties it is proposed to develop include 6,500,000 acres in Ecuador, 2,133,500 in Colombia, and 650,000 acres in Venezuela.

It was voted by the new directors to maintain headquarters in New York. Rufus C. Dawes of Chicago was named a director.

LEGIONNAIRES GROOM JOHNSON FOR DEMPSEY GO

Members of White Post Are His Hosts.

Members of Sol-Sal-Mar post of the American Legion yesterday banqueted Jack Johnson, former heavyweight champion of the world, and until a few days ago an inmate of the federal prison at Leavenworth. The Legionaires, who are white men, promised to do all in their power to secure a battle for Johnson with Jack Dempsey.

This anouncement was not made until physicians had examined the Negro pugilist and pronounced lungs, biceps and other anatomical sections in good battling condition. Dr. James Whitney Hall, president of the American Academy of Health, and Dr. George Aste of the Policlinic hospital, made the inspection while Johnson displayed his gilded molars in an expansive grin.

"In first class condition," was the verdict.

"I ought to be," Jack said. "I did lots of boxing and bag punching while at Leavenworth, and now Im fit to meet any man alive."

Several speeches were made by Legionites praising Johnson for his war service, while Mr. Dempsey was occupied in shipyard labor. Johnson, it is said, was employed in intelligence work for the United States government in Spain.

"We'll do our best to secure a match between you and Dempsey," said Capt. John P. Tansey, commandant of the post. "If he refuses we'll bring pressure upon the governors of states where boxing is legalized so that Dempsey will not be allowed to fight there."

The post will communicate with other posts of the American Legion to stir up propaganda in favor of the match.

During the discussion mention was made of the fourteenth amendment, which, according to the speaker's interpretation, declares there shall be no discrimination between blacks and whites.

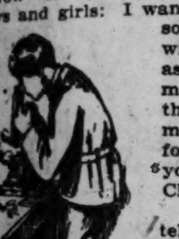
O SKINNAY! HERE IS A STORY 'BOUT BUGS AND THINGS

Think of a Big Museum Just for Children.

This is the first of a series of stories telling of the work of the Children's museum at Brooklyn, written for the children of Chicago. Eye Witness wants the little folks to know of the wonders of this treasure house of interest and knowledge. Through them he hopes to reach their parents and so bring to Chicago a similar institution.

BY EYE WITNESS.



New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Boys and girls: I want to tell you of something that will interest you as much as it did me. It is something which is meant especially for you, but which you have not in Chicago.

The point in telling you about it in your own way—which is the best way because it is the simplest and realest—instead of writing a dignified, tiresome article for our grownups, is that you, after you have the facts before you, can interest the grownups in this fine thing much more readily than I can.

You know well enough that though every one of you belongs to a grownup, it is even truer that most grownups belong to you and would do almost anything in the world for you. That is part of the fun growups get out of being your fathers and mothers.

What Chicago Lacks.

This fine thing you ought to have in Chicago is something like this:

In the place where I lived a long time there was a boy that sometimes would come tearing down Washington street hill—he lived at the top of the hill and my family at the bottom of it—and he would say, "My uncle has just sent us some more things from China and my mother says you can all come up to our house!"

Then we would go, and more likely than not we would stay all the rest of the day—it was so interesting.

For we saw—and Lewis' mother would let us touch—gowns so heavy with silk and gold they would stand alone, and queer little ornaments of jade with faces on them that would make you laugh, and vases and fans, whereon those Chinese people had made the sky with one or two lines and the wide sea with one or two more, and images carved out of ivory and precious woods—with kind of sad, thoughtful, tired faces on them, which made you wonder—and maybe the eyes would be inlays of jewels.

Liberal and Sympathetic.

Tom's mother said some people called those things idols and the people that made them idolators, but she told us she liked to think of them as helps to prayer and worship, and that the people that made them maybe did it so those figures would bring near to them the Unseen Power that puts us in this world and arranged it for us. Mrs. F[illegible]her was always pleasant about explaining things that way. We all loved her. At the end of the afternoon she would give us cake and cambric tea. All this was forty years ago.

Well, that is just exactly the way it is at the Children's museum on the edge of Bedford park in Brooklyn, N. Y.—even to the cake—except that the house is ten times bigger than Lewis' was, and that, instead of seeing wonderful things from China alone you have the whole wonderful world poured into your lap.

You can touch things and work with them, and you can mount beautiful butterflies and moths and beetles with your own hands, and there are young women and older women to tell you about everything and show you how to do everything—with microscopes, and chemicals, and tools, and everything like that.

No Verboten Signs Here.

There are no "No Admittance" or "Don't Touch" signs anywhere, and the whole house and everything in it are yours for nothing. They give you treasures and ask in return only your interest.

You can become a life member of this children's museum association for 10 cents, but you are just as welcome whether you are a member or not. I saw a couple of fellows studying the birds and I asked them if they were members and they said no.

So I fixed that up and pretty soon they came out of the secretary's room with membership buttons on their coats, but the only difference was that now they studied the birds harder than ever and sort of smiled when they looked around because, I think, the docents—as the women tell you things are called—kept smiling at them and said, "There are our newest members!"

It was kind of funny and very homelike—all that part.

If a fellow wanted to know something special about a bird he had just noticed on his way through Bedford park, or about a plant he was pressing, or about a moth he was mounting, or about the wireless telegraph mechanism they were teaching him to use, all he had to do was to step into a big room on the second floor of the house and Miss Draper would give him a book about it and help him to find the place he wanted in the book.

Like all the women in the house, she was awfully pleasant and she laughed a lot. She said a fellow that did not know exactly what he wanted came into see her the other day and said:

"Miss Draper, have you got a book about my size?"

She found it and he was very much obliged.

Here's a Thorough Chap.

She told me about a fellow named Carl Funaro that got so interested in beetles that he started copying out the more than 200 pages of Henshaw's "List of Coleoptera of America North of Mexico" because that is a very rare book and very expensive, but he wanted to have the facts in it right was out collecting. So he started copying the one Miss Draper has but cannot lend out because it is so rare and she has only one copy.

She said that altogether the children's museum has 8,000 books and that the children come to it at the rate of 250 to 500 and even 700 a day, but that when 700 come they have to stand up to read.

When Miss Draper said that Mrs. Schoonhoven, who is one of the museum's executive board, spoke up and said that was "a disgrace to Brooklyn," and she seemed disgusted; but I was so disgusted that Chicago has not a treasure house for children like this Brooklyn one that I did not say anything.

Prefer Nature Studies.

Miss Draper said the children ask for books about nature and biography and history, but do not seem to care so much for stories, though she has plenty of stories; and the reason for that is, I think, that after you have seen the wonderful things in the museum—the birds and the raccoons, stuffed, to be sure, but seeming to be living and working just as they lived and worked in life—and the hives of live bees actually making honey, and the scenes in strange countries—all built up and lighted like scenes in a theater—then those things become more real to you than any store is and it is thrilling to read about them and to learn more about them.

Anyway, 200,000 Brooklyn children feel that way, for Miss Lee, who is one of the women that tells you things, said that 200,000 come every year and that 30,000 a year come to the lectures on Columbus and Washington and Lincoln and Longfellow and world war and wireless and bees and so on in the motion picture room.

Now that you know in a general way what this children's treasure house is like you may care to know how it works.

L. A. YOUNG'S SON, STRICKEN WHILE SWIMMING, DIES

Three Others Drown at Resorts.

Lawrence Robinson Young, 18 year old son of Lawrence A. Young of 1812 Prairie avenue, prominent Chicago attorney, died suddenly from heart failure yesterday at East Hampton, L. I., where he was a week end guest at the summer home of Chicago friends, Mr. and Mrs. M. K. Martin.

Seized with cramps while swimming, young Robinson was rescued by life guards and was brought to shore, where six physicians attempted to revive him. He lived one hour.

Body on Way Home.

The body will be brought to Chicago for burial tomorrow by Mr. and Mrs. John Lakin Baldridge, sister and brother-in-law of young Robinson, who was spending the summer at their home, "Ardsley on the Hudson." Burial will be on Tuesday. Besides the father and sister, a brother, Henry, now in South America, survives.

Young Robinson was graduated with honors last June from the Francis Parker school and was to enter Princeton this fall. He was the grandson of the late George Henry Wheeler, former president of the Chicago City railway, and of the late Gen. Bennett H. Young of Louisville. His father was assistant corporation counsel during Mayor Harrison's first term.

Ernest Rees, 10 years old, was drowned at Mooseheart, Ill., where the headquarters of the Loyal Order of Moose and its vocational school for dependent children are located.

Swimmer Found Drowned.

The body of an unindentified man was taken from the lake off the foot of Grace street yesterday by James Fanning, 610 Briar place, a Lincoln park life saver. The man was about 28 years old, had light hair and complexion and wore a bathing suit consisting of gray trunks and a green and white shirt.

Prof. Robert E. Wilson, mathematician and chairman of the faculty athletic committee of Northwestern university, saved G. R. Fossmire, a student at Garrett Biblical institute, from drowning. He was walking through the campus in Evanston when he heard Fossmire's calls for help. Throwing off his coat, he rushed into the lake, and swam back with the student.

RIDES BICYCLE TO HIS DEATH.

Kenosha, Wis., July 16.—Sixteen year old Emil Kutzhuck rode a bicycle off the lighthouse pier here late this morning and drowned before he could be rescued by life guards. A quick veer threw him over the edge of the breakwater on to a cement abutment. It is believed he was unconscious when he struck the water. His body was recovered within ten minutes by life guards.

Kappa Sigma Fraternity Conclave Here This Week

Chicago will be the temporary home this week of the Kappa Sigma fraternity, a national collegiate society, with ninety chapters. More than 600 delegates are on their way here to attend the twenty-fourth biennial conclave to be held from Tuesday to Saturday at the Congress hotel.

One of the founders of the fraternity is a native Chicagoan, William Grigsby McCormick, who with others formed the "Kappa Sigma society" at the University of Virginia after the close of the civil war. The conclave is to consider establishing permanent headquarters in Chicago.

STATE HONORS MARY B. EDDY ON CENTENNIAL

Concord, N. H., July 16.—[Special.]—A little group of between seventy-five and one hundred persons gathered in the village of Bow, three miles from here, this afternoon, to take part in the simple, brief exercises which marked the centennial of Mary Baker Eddy, founder of the Church of Christ, Scientist.

Two wreaths were placed at the base of the pyramid which marks the site of the old farm house in which Mrs. Eddy was born. One wreath was placed by a secretary to Gov. Harlan Pearson, who represented the state, and the other by Mr. and Mrs. John M. Longyear of New York.

Ex-Governor Lauds Mrs. Eddy.

Former Gov. Samuel W. McCall of Massachusetts was the speaker.

"We have many men who have statues reared to them in front of our statehouse, and the real benefit of those men to the world in some cases has been somewhat equivocal," Mr. McCall said, "but it is rare that you will find a man who has contributed so much and who has set in motion such a vital force as Mary Baker Eddy did when she wrote her book."

Without Official Sanction.

As the directors of the Mother church of Boston and the churches in this state had adopted resolutions disapproving of the celebration, on the ground that it was contrary to Mrs. Eddy's wishes, none of these churches was officially represented at the observance.

About half the people present were from this state and the others from Boston and New York.

MRS. KABER HELD GUILTY; RECEIVES A LIFE SENTENCE

Carried Out of Court; Husband Slain in 1919.

Cleveland, O., July 16.—Through mercy recommended by a jury of men, Mrs. Eva Catherine Kaber today escaped the electric chair though found guilty of first degree murder for plotting the assassination of her husband, Daniel E. Kaber.

It was the hope that mercy would be extended by those of the opposite sex which induced her counsel to exclude women jurors on the ground that they are "more cold blooded and merciless than men." Attempt was made to invalidate panels of tentative jurors because there were women on them, and when women were tentatively seated on the jury, they were dismissed by the defense on peremptory challenge.

As a result of the recommendation for mercy, Mrs. Kaber was sentenced to life imprisonment in the Ohio reformatory for women at Marysville by Judge Maurice Bernon. Had the jury not recommended mercy, the court would have been compelled to sentence Mrs. Kaber to die in the electric chair.

Five Others to Be Tried.

The prison term for Mrs. Kaber was the first final result of the state's effort to bring to justice those responsible for the murder of the Lakewood publisher as he lay an invalid in his home the night of July 18, 1919. There remain five others to be tried on first degree murder charges in connection with the crime.

Two of these are Mrs. Mary Brickel, mother, and Miss Marian McArdle, daughter of Mrs. Kaber. Miss McArdle was with her mother, who was lying in a semi-conscious state in her cell in the court jail, when news of the verdict was brought to them by Attorney Poulson, Mrs. Kaber's personal counsel. The mother, 69, was at Sterling house, a dentention home for women.

The others charged with the crime are Mrs. Erminia Colavito, midwife nurse, alleged to have been a go-between for Mrs. Kaber and Salvator Cala and Vittorio Pisselli, alleged to have actually killed Mr. Kaber.

Indifferent to Verdict.

Mrs. Kaber showed no signs of interest in the verdict or even the sentence imposed by the court, if in fact she actually knew what was happening, for she was apparently oblivious to all things. She merely nodded her head when pressed for answers as to whether she understood. She was as limp as a lifeless person and had to be carried to and from the courtroom.

Her own fate sealed, what little interest Mrs. Kaber did show was said to be in the future of her daughter, Marian, whom County Prosecutor Stanton says he will ask be given the death penalty.

Bail for Miss McArdle was refused today by Judge Bernon on the ground that in the light of testimony in Mrs. Kaber's case which tended to implicate her also in the crime, he could not grant her temporary freedom. Marian is alleged to have furthered her mother's murder designs and to have played the piano to drown noise while the alleged assassins were shown their victim by Mrs. Kaber.

It is said to be the first time in the Criminal court history of Cuyahoga county that a mother, daughter, and grandmother were involved in one murder trial; that a woman was found guilty of first degree murder; that sentence was imposed on a defendant who did not stand to receive it; that women were barred from the jury on the ground that they are less merciful than men, and that a verdict was delayed two hours because the defendant was unable to be brought into court.

WHO'LL LEND FORD FOR SUMMER TO WOUNDED YANKS?

In the government hospital at 47th street and Drexel boulevard this fall serious operations will be performed upon Albert Olson and Eddie Watkins, who were wounded in France. Olson lost a hip joint, which the doctors will attempt to replace by plastic surgery, while an explosion of shrapnel destroyed the use of Watkin's spine, which the surgeons likewise will attempt to render serviceable once more.

"The owner of a cottage near Phelps in northern Wisconsin has offered to let the boys spend the summer there," Mrs. Rolla Southworth, director of recreation, related at the hospital last night. "But the cottage is two miles from town and the condition of the boys won't permit them to carry their supplies. On the other hand, it is essential that they have the benefit of the country air to fortify them for the operations they will undergo. If some one will permit them to use his or her Ford it may mean they will be restored to health."

Mrs. Southworth's telephone number is Kenwood 9800. Olson and Watkins would like to leave the hospital either Tuesday or Wednesday.

10,000,000 FACE STARVATION AS RUSS CROPS FAIL

Soviets Term Famine a National Calamity.

RIGA, Letvia, July 16.—[By the Associated Press.]—The Iszvestia of Moscow says that an official appeal to all citizens of Russia to aid in alleviating suffering caused by famine, signed by all the members of the government, places the number of starving at not less than 10,000,000 in the Astrakhan Tsaritsyn, Saratov, Samara, Simbursk, Ufa, and Viatka governments, and along the Volga, in the Tartar republic and the Shuvash territory.

These, the appeal says, cannot exist until the next harvest without aid. The famine is characterized as a national calamity.

According to an American relief expert in Riga, the cost of completely relieving this number from outside of Russia would exceed $40,000,000 monthly.

Denies Appeal to U. S.

George Chitcherin, the Russian soviet foreign minister, denies that a direct appeal has been made for American aid to aleviate the famine. Reports appearing in Baltic states' newspapers were that an appeal had been made through Senator Joseph I. France of Maryland, who is now in Russia.

M. Chitcherin's mesage reads:

"We have not appealed to America, except through the widespread radio appeals of Maxim Gorky and the Most Rev. Dr. Tikhon, patriarch of All Russia. We have no connection with the American government, and, therefore, have no intention to appeal to Americans for help. Having in mind that we cannot ask for American relief representatives when we have no existing relations.

Report of American Rebuff.

The newspaper reports of the alleged appeal to America said the United States had replied it could only consider giving help if a constitutional government should be established in Russia, and the reports mentioned Nikolai Lenin, the soviet premier, as favoring this.

"No one has proposed the forming of a constitutional government in Russia on the principle of a constituent assembly," M. Chitcherin asserts in his message. "This also is a ridiculous rumor."

ADMITS CROP FAILURE

BY GEORGE SELDES.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]
[Copyright: 1921: By The Chicago Tribune.]

BERLIN, July 16.—The Russian "people's commissar," Ossinski, who a month ago gave an interview in Berlin bragging about "this year's great Russian harvests," today admits his statements were untrue and that the situation is serious, especially in the Volga districts, where German settlements of 1,000,000 emigrants especially are endangered.

Commissiar Ossinski admits that the wheat crops were entirely ruined in the Volga district and that the situation is "catastrophical." He claims the soviety government has taken emergency measures.

FINAL REPORT ON HOOVER BELGIUM RELIEF IS MADE

Bought $1,300,000,000 Food and Clothing.

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Purchase of food and clothing aggregating more than $1,300,000,000 during the six years to September, 1920, were made by the committee for relief in Belgium, according to the statement of Herbert C. Hoover, its chairman, in the final report made public today. The committee is now in liquidation and the accounts are complete.

"The commission was born as a partly philanthropic enterprise, dependent upon the charity of the world for support, conceived as a few months' emergency service to defend 10,000,000 people from certain starvation," said Mr. Hoover.

Asked Governments' Aid.

"However, it became evident that the war was not a struggle of months but of years, and that, if these 7,500,000 people in Belgium and 2,500,000 in northern France were to survive it must be accomplished by much broader operation than public charity.

"The commission, therefore, sought and ultimately received financial support from the Belgian, French, British, and later the American governments. These official advances were debited to them and were finally placed in the reparations settlement for preferred payment under the indemnity. The organization thus had an annual budget of over $400,000,000.

A Huge Machine.

"The basic theory of the administration was to erect a system of food supply with all of its train of handling agencies, stretching from the interior of the United States, the Argentine, Australia, India, and other great food centers, focusing into Rotterdam with a distribution through chains of primary and secondary warehouses, ultimately through a ration card, reaching to the individual family, which paid for the food at fixed prices.

"Destitution grew rapidly during the war, and of the 10,000,000 people fully 5,000,000 were wholly or partially destitute before the end of the war. A separate branch of administration was organized for the care of these destitute people.

"The whole plan of organization was a continuous chain of decentralization. Purchasers were decentralized into overseas branches. Transportation inland to primary warehouses was directed from Rotterdam. A committee was elected in the Belgian provinces and French districts."

'PLATONIC FRIEND' CLAIMS 'AD' MAN THREATENED HER

Had Woman Arrested; Now She Gets Warrant.

Ignatius Bernard, head of the Bernard Advertising company at 175 West Washington street, was arrested and released on bond yesterday on a warrant charging disorderly conduct.

The warrant was signed by Mrs. Sadie Bensabott, who gave her address as the Plaza hotel. She said last night that Bernard has threatened her and was in possession of a pistol.

Platonic Love Affair.

The trouble, it is understood, dates back to June 4, when police arrested Mrs. Bensabott, who then lived at the Webster hotel. Bernard admitted, according to the police, that he had conducted a "platonic love affair" with her.

Mrs. Bernard and her children live at the Hotel Somerset.

When Mrs. Bensabott was arraigned in South Clark street court on June 18 the case was continued.

"We were dining at the Hotel La Salle," she explained, "which we have been in the habit of doing for three months. Mr. Bernard was quarrelsome and the manager asked him to leave. He was furious. We then went to his office, where he was to finish some work before going to a theater. Then he called the police and directed my arrest."

Bernard's Version of Case.

Bernard declared that on one occasion he had taken a stiletto away from her after she had threatened to go to the apartments of his wife and himself at the Somerset. "Then she came to my office and declared she was going to tell my wife everything. I called the police," he said.

It was reported yesterday that Referee in Bankruptcy Frank Wean is to reopen a bankruptcy suit filed some time ago by Bernard. Complaints have been made, it is said, that Bernard had $30,000 in diamonds, which were not listed as assets at the time of the bankruptcy proceedings.

RECALL MILLER TO GRAND JURY IN SMALL QUIZ

Week Promises Sensation in Interest Inquiry.

Springfield, Ill., July 16.—[Special.]—State Treasurer Edward E. Miller is to take the witness stand again before the Sangamon county grand jury when that body renews its inquiry into the disposition of interest on public funds next Wednesday morning. The return of Mr. Miller before the inquisitorial body is considered highly significant by those who have been analyzing the possibility of indictments being returned, and Wednesday promises to be one of the most important days of the entire hearing.

It is understood now that Mr. Miller did not complete his testimony on the first day of the hearing and that some evidence he might have produced was withheld temporarily pending a settlement of a legal question involving its admissibility. Enough of this evidence, it is said, has been produced by other witnesses in the meantime to make the state treasurer's reappearance imperative to complete the last link in what otherwise is reported to be a perfect chain of evidence.

Status of Grant Park Bank.

Enough testimony and documentary evidence has been produced, it is said, to satisfy those pushing the inquiry that the Grant Park bank, so far as its functions as a financial institution was concerned, was merely a "paper bank" at the time the $10,000,000 loan was made to Chicago packers during the term of Len Small as state treasurer.

With this much discussed question out of the way there still remains that as to who collected the hundreds of thousands of dollars in interest from the loan. It is known that the interest payments for most of the money were made directly to Senator Curtis. But it is said this interest money did not appear among the assets of the Grant Park bank, and that only a small part of it, if any at all, is accounted for by the Curtis estate.

So the grand jury will have to look still further to find just what became of the money which the state contends should have been deposited in the state treasury. It is possible the grand jury already knows. There has been much speculation as to the testimony given by various witnesses from Grant Park and Kankakee, and especially that of former associates of Gov. Small in his business and banking deals in Kankakee.

Four new witnesses, whose names have not been disclosed by State's Attorney Mortimer have been subpœnaed and will testify next week. It is believed their testimony will be largely corroborative of what has gone before, but it is possible that from one of these witnesses the state hopes to settle definitely the final resting place of nearly $2,000,000 interest.

Results of Week's Work.

That some of these witnesses live long distances from Springfield or else are away from home on week end trips is evident from the fact that service on them is not expected before Monday.

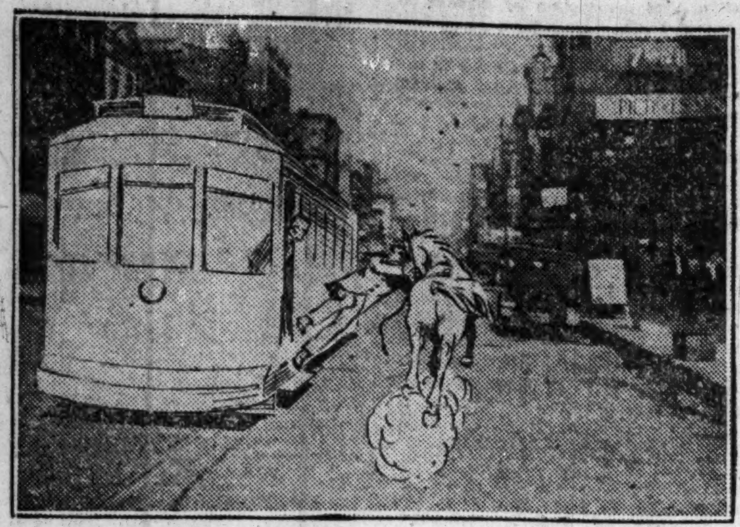
Besides Treasurer Miller, other witnesses from the state house who have testified are director of finance, Omar Wright, Harry Luehrs, chief clerk in the state treasurer's office, and Henry Freeman, assistant state auditor. State Auditor Russel also was subpœnaed, but the records of his office were produced by Mr. Freeman.

From Grant Park have come Norman Griffin, an official of the Grant Park Trust and Savings bank and associate of the late Senator Curtis in his banking affairs, and Miss Alice Cornell, Senator Curtis' secretary. The latter is credited with having brought to Springfield what is left of the Grant Park bank.

Among the important witnesses who have appeared from Kankakee, the home town of Gov. Small, are George Bennett, a former partner of the governor in a grain business; Henry J. Groenewould, clerk of Kankakee county; Harry Whittemore, former state's attorney of Kankakee county, and Fred Mann, former vice president and cashier of the First Trust and Savings bank of Kankakee, one of the financial institutions controlled by Gov. Small.

What is regarded as a significant development of the first week's inquiry was the decision of the grand jurors not to call Verne S. Curtis, brother of the late senator, after a subpoena had been prepared for his appearance.

A LA DOUGLAS



Patrolman Joseph Rehling of the Desplaines street police station qualified for the movies yesterday when he leaped from the step of a street car traveling thirty miles an hour and grasped the bridle of a runaway horse. The incident occurred in West Madison street, near Union. Rehling was unhurt except for bruises suffered while the horse dragged him for half a block. Chris Cratias of 828 Milton street, owner of the runaway, was arrested charged with failing to possess a vehicle license.

Lawyer Sick, Stillman Case May Go to September

Yonkers, N. Y., July 16.—John F. Brennan, counsel for Mrs. Anne U. Stillman in the divorce action brought by her husband, James A. Stillman, New York banker, is suffering from pneumonia and will be confined to his bed for more than a month, it was said tonight after a conference of physicians at his home here. He is 70 years old. Grave fears are felt by close associates of the attorney because of his advanced years, although the physicians' announcement said his chances of recovery were favorable. It is now thought the Stillman case, set for July 27, will not be resumed before September.

BRIDE OF BOUCK WHITE ASKS FOR AN ANNULMENT

Tells Judge Radical Struck Her on Honeymoon.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., July 16.—[Special.]—Supreme Court Justice Morschauser today heard the testimony in the action of Mrs. Andree Emilie Simon White, 20, a Parisienne, against C. Gouck White, ex-clergyman and radical, for annulment of marriage on the ground of fraud. Both Mrs. White and her husband testified and White fulfilled his promise not to oppose dissolution of the tie he entered into last April in the Protestant chapel in Paris.

The hearing took about twenty minutes and Justice Morschauser directed the bride's counsel to submit a brief next Wednesday, indicating that he would give his decision probably a week from today.

Review of Courtship.

Under questioning by her counsel, Mrs. White told how she and White had met in Paris, and how, after a speedy courtship, they were married. The next day, she testified, they took the Aquitania for New York. In sketchy fashion she related the history of three days in New York City and then recounted the arrival at Marlboro, Ulster county, where White has a shack on the mountainside.

"He said," the French girl replied, "that he was the master."

Further questioning brought the statement that the six days' married life of the Whites consisted chiefly of a discussion of White's theories—he doing the talking, she the listening.

"Ooo, Yes," He Struck Her.

"Did he strike you?" she was asked.

"Ooo—oo, yes," the girl put punch into the answer. "He struck me. He threw me to the floor."

"How often did he strike you?"

"He struck me two times."

"Did he ever say he wanted you only as a companion?"

"Well, yes, he said I must accompany him, must help him in his work."

"Didn't care for you otherwise?" prompted the lawyer.

"That's it."

"The question is," Justice Morschauser said, "whether he cheated this girl by not revealing his socialistic and other views. That's all that need be adduced here today, and for that reason I strike from the record all of this evidence of cruelty, which has no part in this action."

Turning to Mrs. White, the justice asked:

"Did you know that your husband had these views?"

"No."

"You thought that he was a good clean American and did not know that he had Socialism and other isms?"

"Yes."

She was then excused and Justice Morschauser asked White if he wished to take the stand. His right to do so, the justice said, had been forfeited by his default to the action, but if he had anything he wished to state, he was free to do so.

"I do not wish to testify unless I am wanted," he said. "I'll do whatever is required," he added as he took the witness chair.

No Collusion for Divorce.

"There is, of course," the court said, "no collusion?"

"None that I know of," White replied.

"Did you let your wife know about your views?"

"Why, I did not want to go into that very much, because when I did I found that she was not interested. I told her little or nothing about my views because of her quite apparent disinclination to interest herself in the matter."

Outside the courtroom Mrs. White said:

"I shall be glad to be free of him. I do not like him any more. You noticed—N'est-ce pas?—that I did not speak to him when I entered.

"When we met I loved him very much. He had the grand manner and was so polite. But now it is finished and I am glad. Soon I shall return to France. But first, I wish to learn the English correctly. I shall study in New York and go to Paris to work as a chemist. I am, you know, a graduate chemist of the Sorbonne."

HUSBAND VANISHES WHEN SHIP DOCKS; WIFE IS PENNILESS

MRS. ELAINE MANDLE.

For half a week Mrs. Elaine Mandle, 24 years old, has waited anxiously in the Sarah Hackett Stevenson Memorial lodging house for some word of her husband. He disappeared in the crowd soon after they had disembarked from a lake steamer at the river dock between Clark and Dearborn streets. She is penniless and alone.

Mrs. Mandle and her husband were en route from their home in Muskegon, Mich., to Cincinnati. After leaving the boat Mandle returned for the bagage. This was the last his wife of three years saw of him. She thinks something serious must have happened to him, as he had a large sum of money with him.

N. Y. OFFICIAL NOT TO ARREST WIFE OF SLAIN BROKER

Northport, N. Y., July 16. — Despite the request of Sheriff John Y. Kelly that Mrs. Helen B. Hemming be detained in connection with the killing of her husband, Henry C. Hemming, by the caretaker of her Duck Island estate Thursday night, Assistant District Attorney Partridge tonight announced he would decline to cause her detention.

Mr. Partridge said he was convinced that Mrs. Hemming had tried to keep her husband away from her home and was unaware that the caretaker—Frank Eberhardt, who killed himself after slaying the broker—had planned the shooting beforehand. The killing occurred after Hemming, who had been estranged from his wife, met her in New York and insisted on accompanying her home over her objections.

THE AMERICAN LEGION AND THE SCHOOLS.

We hope a permanent liaison has been established between the American Legion and the National Education association, the representative organization of teachers in our country. The Legion is much more than a league for the defense of the interests of its members. It is a league for the defense of the nation, not only in war but in peace. It is a league of loyal Americans for the defense of American institutions, American principles, American ideas, American national character.

In that high service the American school, that is the American teaching body, is and must be in the first line. It is to the teacher the republic turns over its embryo citizens in their plastic years. It is to the school that we give the first duty of making loyal citizens.

Therefore the teachers and the war proved patriotic citizens of the Legion are shoulder to shoulder. We hope this is realized and will find effective expression in constant exchange of ideas and coöperation in action.

A beginning, in fact, was made when at the recent convention of the N. E. A. the Americanization committee of the Legion told the association of its hopes as to education in Americanism. "I wish," said Chairman Ryan of the committee, "it were possible for me to acquaint every teacher of America with the fact that the American Legion has no more sincere desire than that of dedicating itself to the welfare of the teacher, student and school. The school is the foundation of the nation. If the American school fails, America will fail. We have inherited the greatest blessings any government has ever bestowed upon its people. The Legion proposes to preserve and safeguard that government."

That in a nutshell is indeed the American faith, as old as the nation and deeply implanted in American conviction. Sadly as we neglect our teachers in material ways in many communities, this is our creed, and in time we shall learn to do better justice to it than we do now.

The school cannot accomplish everything, however, and it is not without removable shortcomings. We cannot in candor say that in respect of influencing vigorous devotion to and intelligent comprehension of American institutions and principles, American education cannot be considerably bettered. To that end organizations like the Legion and other patriotic associations may profitably contribute.

In fact, this service is, in our opinion, very greatly needed. We Americans are inclined to take our blessings as a matter of course. It is our forebears who have won them for us, and like the legatees of unearned wealth we set too little store by them. If we could be taught in the years of impressionable youth the story of struggle and sacrifice which was the price past generations of men and women paid for them, we should put a higher value upon them and be more careful to defend them from encroachment or deterioration.

There is going on day by day a determined effort to undermine the American system, an insidious and well planned invasion of our thought, against which no equally determined defense is made. In the end this anti-American education will prevail unless it is vigorously combated. If we do not clearly realize what our institutions and principles mean, against what forces they were asserted and established, what evils they overcame and replaced, what service they achieved and still perform for human progress and welfare, we are in no condition to withstand the plausible proposals of change and the one sided criticism of remaining evils which are constantly urged by radicals upon the minds of a vast body of our people.

Changes, profound and revolutionary, do not announce themselves with a blowing of trumpets. They do not spring up over night. On the contrary, they are prepared through many years of propaganda. Thus institutions and systems which have been erected in blood and sacrifice and are worthy of preservation may be overthrown in the passion of a moment, and have to be erected again at a great cost.

American progress may avoid these delusive violences and go forward as an evolution from experience and reasoned will. But it will not do so unless we have the foresight to guard vigilantly that which is sound and lastingly valid in our American social and political system.

And our youth, is the battlefield. Teach it the lessons of the past and the realities which sustain its well being; offset unbalanced criticism, and America will go forward sanely to a large and firmer command of life.

IMPAIRING CHICAGO'S GREATEST ASSET.

Lake Michigan, unquestionably, is Chicago's greatest asset as the world's greatest summer resort. Study of recent heat statistics of towns and cities away from the lake in half a dozen middle western states ought to convince us of our advantage. From 200,000 to 500,000 persons who are in the habit of using this asset to the best possible advantage by bathing or lounging on the lake shore have special knowledge of its value.

This value is in danger of being reduced if not eliminated by those persons who misuse the privilege offered. At the most popular and convenient beaches, where thousands of persons enter the water each day, bathing is made a questionable pleasure if not an actual menace to health by pollution of the lake. When the wind holds inshore for days the water becomes almost stagnant.

In some sections, notably at the foot of streets where insufficient policing is provided, bathers have been seen to take soap into the water and perform what appears to be about a fortnightly ablution. The water is defiled in other ways. Scraps of lunch and newspapers are thrown into it and scattered about the sand. Thousands of persons, bent upon relaxation, appear to be able to find it only by transgressing all the rules of decency and sanitation which they would follow in their own homes.

In other cases young men and women have appropriated the lake as a safe place for the carrying on of such revels as would not be tolerated for a minute on shore where decent men and women could reach them. Others drive to the street ends in the late evening, turn the lights of their cars upon the water and go for a swim or an orgy, as the case may be, with screams and laughter which awaken the neighbors for half a block around.

Such conduct ought not to be tolerated. It destroys the recreational and healthful possibilities of the lake for several hundred thousand persons because of the vulgarity, ignorance, stupidity, and selfishness of a few. Life guards and a few policemen on shore cannot control the situation. Decent men and women on the beaches and in the water ought to use their influence, and if necessary their good right arms, to correct it.

A fast motor boat patrol along the beaches or the establishment of a police squad to answer telephoned complaints from shore might help.

CHURCH AND STATE.

At the recent Christian Endeavor convention a representative of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ of America urged all Christian churches to bring pressure to bear upon Washington to make America a member of the league of nations or some other such body.

The proposal was enthusiastically received and one of the readers of THE TRIBUNE, himself a church member, is moved by the incident to put an interesting question.

He writes: "Would not an organized movement of the churches, or even the action of a single church, acting as such, to bring pressure on the government be contrary to the spirit if not the letter of the constitution, which declares the separation of church and state?"

Evidently at the convention there was no such question raised and we confess it is not an easy one to answer. But it is certainly not unworthy of serious consideration as involving a fundamental American principle.

No intelligent American would deny the service of the churches in inspiring high ideals of conduct not only among men but among nations. No one would limit them to the domain of theology. The modern church militant labors among men to bring the actual conditions of living nearer to Christian standards, assailing evil forces vigorously and unceasingly. To remove the influence of the churches from our civic affairs would be a disaster.

Nevertheless, there is a limit to the function of the church. Acting in the field of morals, this function is clear. Acting upon the character of individuals to influence high standards of action in private and public life, to create good citizenship and righteous conduct, there can be no dispute as to the propriety of its activities. But what if a church, acting as an organization, enters the field of political action and policy and seeks to use its strength to force a particular line of political policy on the theory that this policy conforms to its own religious or moral concepts?

Is this not such a confusion of the function of church and state as American principle prohibits?

The founders were wise men and far seeing patriots. They pondered the lessons of history and they sought to establish principles of government which should protect their posterity from evils of the past, among the darkest and most destructive of which were religious wars and the complications arising from the intermingling of religious and political agencies.

It is easy where there is so much zeal for the advancement of righteousness and the establishment of Christian ideals of good will among men and nations to lose sight of the past and of principles approved by experience. The churches are a tremendous force to these ends and it is difficult to refuse the direct use of their organized strength wherever moral issues are involved and equally difficult to deny that moral issues are involved in the relations of nations. On the other hand, where the church has entered the domain of politics the results have been disastrous to itself and to humanity. That conviction is imbedded deep in American policy.

Our correspondent writes: "The alternative to direct organized church influence is not church impotence in such matters. All members of churches and religious societies are citizens possessing full civil rights. All of them vote or have the right to vote and are represented in congress. All participate in the election of the President, who, with the advice of the senate, is charged with the conduct of foreign affairs. If our citizenship is imbued with Christian principles these principles will influence our policy, but through the proper agency, which is not the church but the state."

The question raised by our reader is worthy of serious consideration by both clergy and laity.

Editorial of the Day

COMFORT IN ROUGHING IT.

[From the New York Herald.]

An Englishman advertises in American newspapers that he will rent his Thames houseboat, "containing saloon, dining room, ten bedrooms, three bathrooms, servants' hall, etc.," for the summer for 20 guineas a week, or for the Henley regatta for 125 guineas. The specifications so far stated are likely to lead Americans unfamiliar with the size and living conveniences of Thames houseboats to examine further into the particulars enumerated by the owner and find that this floating summer home has "hot and cold water in every cabin, is fitted throughout with electricity generated by its own plant for lighting, heating, and cooking; that it has a roof deck 92x17 feet, a garden and tennis lawn, several small boats, including an electric canoe."

None of the simple comforts necessary for a few weeks' river roughing it seems to be lacking. An American lessee might convert the boat's tennis court into a dancing floor, for days on the Thames are too filled with other entertainment to be given over to tennis, while the evenings are invitingly cool for dancing.

The electric canoe sounds smart—Yankee-like, really—but it will not be popular with those who have seen punting on the Thames, by women especially. Visits from houseboat to houseboat or little side excursions into lovely backwaters for tea are most picturesquely made in a comfortable punt, the punting pole handled by a woman, her fortunate passengers lolling in lazy disorder on cushions. But this is a small matter. The irresistible appeal comes from the simple comforts, mostly American devices, which sons and daughters of American pioneers demand even while roughing it—bathrooms, servants' hall, electric lighting, heating and cooking appliances.

If these holiday economies may be enjoyed on old England's Thames, why not on New England's?

Agile sailor of the blue,
Is it strange I envy you,
Seeing I can only plod

While your wings untiring soar

Yes, your little heart must be

When at twilight I do muse,
Often, in the chimney flues,
You I hear, a-twitter there;
Home from all your seas of air,
Home, with mate upon the nest,
Home, with young ones under breast—
When the dark wild night is near,
Even as man, you homeward steer.

After all, our lots are one:
You a sailor in the sun,
I a sailor in wide seas
Far from life's Hesperides,
Hoping, dreaming I can reach
Some supernal peaceful beach
Where the soul may fold her wings,
Home from all her wanderings.

"UP ABOVE THE WORLD SO HIGH—"

Dear B. L. T.: Last evening I drove out the Dundee road straight into the heart of an opalescent sunset. It seemed to my mood to be the only heart of color and softness, for—to use an old wheeze—I was reaching up to touch bottom. Then I began thinking of you. Or rather memory took up the threads of a pattern that is eternal with many of us now. Through miles of sweet-clover road, with fields on either side of gray-green oats, golden wheat, tasseled yellow rye, and fragrant timothy we drove. Swinging back onto Willow between the lane of poplars—do you remember?—standing tall in the twilight with such mysterious dignity. Under a brooding sky and tender bird-song, the Skokie was just beauty and healing in its still hour.—So my fretful self was gently transformed.—Nature and your whimsical spirit hung the tattered edges of my dream back upon its star, and pointed the way home with a silver sickle just showing in the West. Eternal gratitude—

Sir: Please don't talk about Powell street—I weep, I cry, I smack the yearning lip, I taste again the roast, the steak of Techau's, the golden brown chicken of Marquardt's. And, oh, my brother! The beer—the beer: dark, cream-foamed ice! We don't eat in Chicago—we feed. Aow-w-w-W-W!

ANGELUS.

Like a red lantern in the misty sky,
The full moon hangs above the silver lake.
Along the curving beach the hemlocks sigh,
Among the wharves the waves soft murmur make.
Across the water from some hidden shore
Thru the half darkness chime low evening bells.
The forest sinks to silence more and more;
Still their cool silver music fades and swells,
With golden flame the first pale stars appear.
Once more the bells peal out, then slowly cease.
The echoes from the hilltops far and near Thin into nothing, whispering of peace.

How to Keep Well. By Dr. W. A. Evans.

Questions pertinent to hygiene, sanitation, and prevention of disease, if matters of general interest, will be answered in this column. Where space will not permit, or the subject is not suitable, letters will be personally answered subject to proper limitations, and where a stamped, addressed envelope is inclosed. Dr. Evans will not make diagnosis or prescribe for individual diseases. Requests for such service cannot be answered.

THE TELLTALE TONGUE.

SIR JAMES MACKENZIE, a great Scotch physician, wrote a thoughtful book on the future of medicine in which he said the present day physician knew too much about pathology and bacteriology and too little about folks. Coming to the individual physician, he advised him to watch his microscope less and his patient more.

These statements by Sir James might easily start a row and I do not propose to mix in it, but I will say this:

"The two best physicians I ever saw—and they were great men known as such all over the world—watched their patients like hawks. Both made use of a useful epigram. It was 'watch the tongue.' If the case was one of typhoid fever, peritonitis, or a bad surgical case of any sort, 'watch the tongue.'"

For some reason or other when the tongue was broad and moist and fairly clean the patient was in the clear. If it began to coat, things were not much wrong, but they were not of the best. If it got red at the tip and later at the edge look out for squalls. If a red edged tongue became dry, the patient was in grave danger, but there was hope for life so long as the edge was moist. But when the tongue was dry on edge and tip as well as body the gates were about ready to close.

A good nurse will watch the patient's tongue closely. Where members of the household are taking care of a case of illness they will do well to watch the tongue closely. There are certain forms of illness in which the appearance of the tongue is a good clew to the diagnosis. In scarlet fever the "strawberry tongue" is about as good a diagnostic sign as any.

Dr. Chesley of Minnesota instructed the teachers of rural schools in that state to place themselves with back to an open window each morning and to have the students form in line and walk slowly past with mouths open and tongues out. By this tongue and mouth inspection the teacher sought to exclude from school those capable of spreading contagion.

Where there is any reason to suspect pellagra the tongue should be watched. A burning in the throat and a red scalded tongue are early symptoms of this disease. In fact, a scalded tongue has served as the sole basis of diagnosis in some cases of genuine pellagra and we may have to rely upon it even more now that pellagra shows a disposition to change its symptoms and to cause less eruption.

But, aside from definite illness, is there any use watching the tongue? Constipated people have coated tongues. Alvarez says in constipation the intestinal content moving downward occasionally reverses itself. Some gases from the lower intestine are pushed into the upper, there absorbed, and cause bad breath. Some from the upper intestine are pushed into the stomach, causing belching, and the same process is responsible in a related way to coated tongue. But some people with habitually coated tongues say they are not constipated.

Maybe they are not, but then again maybe they are in spite of their opinions. Some who are not constipated have coated tongues because they breathe through their mouths. Those who have coated tongues and who do not belong in either of these classes can interpret the habitually coated tongue as meaning that their health habits are wrong in some way. Perhaps most of them need to exercise more and to eat less. Whatever it may be, they need to modify some habit.

HAVE EAR EXAMINED.

J. D. S. writes: "I am 77 years old and have used tobacco, smoking when not chewing, since 8 years of age. I have good digestion and weigh 155 pounds. I find my principal trouble to be dizziness on arising.

"1. I stagger to the left invariably. I suffer no heart aches, pains, or palpitations. Pulse seems to be normal.

"2. I have to get up quite frequently to urinate at night, but suffer no unpleasant sensation in this connection.

"3. I served three and one-half years in the civil war prior to attaining my majority. During that I received two severe attacks of sunstroke, which I think accounts for increasing insomnia, as I get not more than two hours' sleep during night. My vision is fairly good.

"Am I liable to croak suddenly? O, well, I never was very tenacious of this here existence anyway."

REPLY.

1. Your tendency to stagger to the left invariably suggests trouble with the internal ear, probably on one side only. It may prove to be an after effect of sunstroke.

2. This probably means an enlarged prostate and maybe some secondary cystitis.

3. I do not think so. In spite of your sins you should live to a ripe old age. Have your ears and prostate investigated.

WAIT FOR NEXT WAR.

T. E. writes: "I am 51 years old, weigh 126 pounds, and am 5 feet 9 inches tall. I am active at a semi-sedentary occupation. My blood pressure is about 115 and I am easily chilled. What are the prospects that I shall be able to raise this blood pressure to nearer normal? How can I do it?"

REPLY.

Raising the blood pressure is principally a matter of training. It is done by throwing pep and ginger into one's work, by becoming excited, enthused and generally worked up, by indulging in emotional outbursts. War does it, games do it, fight does it. A man who has arrived at 51 and who has not developed necessary emotional qualities has become too set in his way to take them on, at least in most cases. He might become a crank on golf or adopt horseback riding as a fad, but that is about his limit. On the other hand maybe he is lucky. A high blood pressure is the bane of many persons over 50.

SAFE, SANE REMEDY.

M. E. N. writes: 1. Please give me a sure and safe remedy for lice?

"2. Also for nits?

"3. What causes lice?"

REPLY.

1. Kerosene oil or kerene locally applied. Keep your scalp clean. Keep away from people whose hair is populated.

2. Kill the lice. Wash the hair with hot vinegar, then comb out the nits with a fine tooth comb.

YES.

Reply to G. G.: Yes.

EVERYTHING WRONG.

Chicago, July 9.—[Friend of the People.]—No screens have been given to me for my apartment and I cannot keep out the flies. The drain pipe which drains off the roof has been broken for months and when it rains my basement floods. Also my garbage can is badly decayed. Can the owner be obliged to furnish me a new one? The landlord has completely ignored all of my complaints. C. K.

An investigation was made by an inspector from this department, as a result of which a notice was served on the owner and agent to replace the gutters and downspouts and properly connect them to sewer, to provide screens for all of the windows and doors, so as to exclude flies, and to provide adequate metal, covered garbage and refuse receptacles.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

MORTGAGE FALLS DUE.

Lawton, Mich., July 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—1. Will you please tell me how long, according to the Michigan law, a person is allowed to keep his home after the mortgage and interest on it remains unpaid?

2. How long before the holder of the mortgage can dispose of the property?

3. Has the holder of the mortgage any claim on the produce raised on the place after the unpaid mortgage becomes due?

E. F. B.

1 and 2. One year under Howell's statute, section 12034.

3. Not where produce is severed before the expiration of the above period.

IMPROVEMENTS FOR FALL.

Chicago, July 11.—[Friend of the People.]—Tenants of apartment building on Woodlawn avenue are being annoyed by smoke nuisance from chimney of two story frame house next door south.

As this chimney is on a level with third floor of apartment building, it is impossible, even at this time of the year, to leave the back door or windows open without the apartment filling with smoke.

A. C. W.

I have to advise you that the matter was investigated by an inspector, who was informed by the owner that there will be no more fires in the house until fall, and that a metal extension has been made and will be placed this week.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

SELLING OUT.

Chicago, July 11.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I wish to sell my property, which is free from incumbrance. I expect to receive part payment down and the balance at $60 per month, including interest.

1. Do I have to employ a lawyer to draw up the contract and how should it be worded?

2. Which party pays fire insurance?

VOICE OF THE PEOPLE

TWO SIDES TO THE RACE PROBLEM.

Chicago, July 10.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The public should have its attention called to the fact that Negroes are getting more and more obstreperous on the streets and the street cars, and are certainly heading for a clash with the mob or with the authorities. Northerners do not seem to understand how to hold them level, and by foolishly granting them "equal rights" of a social sort are preparing bad times ahead for themselves.

The slashing received by a student, Roland Campbell, at the hands of a Negro who refused to share a street car seat with him, as told in Sunday's TRIBUNE, is an example of Negro brutality, and John Meier's "Appeal for the Negroes" comes with a pretty poor grace at the very time when the Negroes are crowding white people out of car seats and assuming superior airs.

I am an old fashioned American, 67 years of age, always careful to give every one a fair chance and his share of the seat. My ancestors fought for the abolition of slavery on principle.

Recently I tried to take a seat in a Cottage Grove avenue car at the side of a 200 pound Negro who had his legs sprawled out to keep the entire seat for himself. I asked him to move his leg over so I could sit down. I was carrying a cane and limping, as I had had a bone in my right ankle broken a short time before. He could see that I was suffering. He stubbornly kept his leg spread out, would not move an inch, and when I suddenly gave him a push and sat down he drew back his fist and growled: "By God, if you were not an old man I'd smash your face!" I stayed where I was, and he shut up; but, believe me, tar and feathers and a hearty booting out of town were what that brute deserved.

BOBBED.

Chicago, July 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Please accept the thanks of one who has recently had her hair bobbed for your editorial in last Saturday's TRIBUNE, entitled "Meddling Americans."

However, it is not in business I believe that most of us bobbed haired ones meet with trouble. It is our families and male admirers who disapprove. If you can print anything to help overcome this opposition, we would all, I'm quite sure, be very grateful to THE TRIBUNE. Nevertheless, it must be borne in mind that too many newspaper criticisms will put us back in the old "conspicuous" class, from which we have just about graduated.

ELSIE JOYCE.

A DEFENSE OF HIGH TAXES.

Chicago, July 11.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Taxes, no matter how heavy, cannot, and do not, make a country any poorer, provided they are spent in the country where they are raised. Taxes are unpopular, but so are rents, high wages (to those who pay them), and even grocery bills. If we don't pay the other fellow, however, he won't be able to pay us. In periods of depression like the present, the government, instead of economizing, should spend more money. If the present congress would pay the soldiers their well earned bonus, appropriate money for good roads, settle with the railroads and then compel them to put their roads and rolling stock in shape, so that they won't break down again when business revives, business would start to revive at once. Roger Babson, the great statistician, says a business revival is at hand, owing to the fact that the people of this country now have three billion dollars anually to spend on other articles which they formerly spent on drinks. The great man probably overlooks the fact that numerous saloonkeepers, distillers, etc. (who presumably are part of the people), now have three billion dollars less to spend, which they formerly received for cheering drinks.

CONCERNING SIMS AND PUBLIC CRITICISMS.

Chicago, July 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—As to Admiral Sims' claim that in other countries criticism may be had of government policies by officers of the army or navy: In England no officer of the army or navy on active duty dare criticize any superior officer, nor criticize any member of the government, nor is there allowed criticism by an inferior officer even when reprimanded or censured. It may be mentioned as the most notable and flagrant abuse of the rule when Field Marshal French rebuked and relieved Gen. Sir Dorrien Smith, and in fact publicly censured Gen. Smith—and the world at large knew French was in fact wrong—yet Gen. Smith was forced to remain silent as long as he remained in active service [where, by the way, he still is]. More—permission asked in parliament, whereby Gen. Smith could speak, was refused by the government through the secretary of state for war. And, too, to make the matter more infamous, Gen. Smith fought and helped turn the flank of Von Gluck at the first Marne—and French sixty-eight miles away.

SNOBBERY, OR COMMON SENSE!

Chicago, July 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—We Americans are apt to prate much about our up-to-dateness, but it is mostly due to our ignorance of how other people do things.

Last week I saw a greasy mechanic in dungarees seat himself on a north side car. Riding to the next junction, he alighted. A lady in light clothes inherited his place in the car, not knowing, of course, who had preceded her. Very soon her clean light suit began to show the imprint of the rattan seat in great smears.

Have had this happen to my white duck navy uniforms many times. In the big cities of Brazil, such as Para, Mandos, Rio, et al., they have second class cars in which people clad in workmen's clothes may ride for less fare than in the first class cars, and such people are allowed no choice as to which cars they must use.

Many will call this "snobbery," but it looks to me like uncommonly good sense. The traction company in Chicago could wash the seats of its cars weekly and help much.

SUGGESTING "A ROLL OF DISHONOR."

Chicago, July 12.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Atta boy! Great stuff, publishing the names of the "Big Bill-ites" who voted against the quiz on the "street" scandal!

Maybe a little more publicity will help. The last election showed there are still a lot of decent people in Chicago. These men will have a hard time explaining their vote to their decent constituents at the next aldermanic election.

Why not make "The Roll of Dishonor" a permanent feature of the W. G. N.? Let it appear with a border of crepe after every such contest in the city council.

A little more light will make us all "experts" in knowing how to vote.

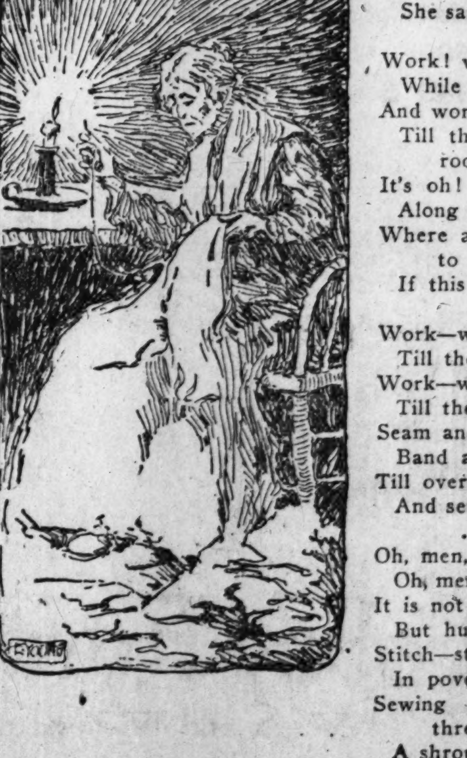
POEMS YOU OUGHT TO KNOW

THE SONG OF THE SHIRT.

By Thomas Hood.



With fingers weary and worn,
With eyelids heavy and red,
A woman sat in unwomanly rags,
Plying her needle and thread—
Stitch! stitch! stitch!
In poverty hunger, and dirt,
And still with a voice of dolorous pitch
She sang the "Song of the Shirt!"

Work! work! work!
While the cock is crowing aloof!
And work—work—work,
Till the stars shine through the roof!
It's oh! to be a slave
Along with the barbarous Turk,
Where a woman has never a soul to save,
If this is Christian work!

Work—work—work,
Till the brain begins to swim!
Work—work—work,
Till the eyes are heavy and dim!
Seam and gusset and band,
Band and gusset and seam,
Till over the buttons I fall asleep,
And sew them on in a dream!

Oh, men, with sisters dear!
Oh, men, with mothers and wives!
It is not linen you're wearing out,
But human creatures' lives!,

TABLOID BOOK REVIEW

BY FANNY BUTCHER.

Last week's best sellers at a leading Chicago bookstore were:

FICTION.

"Main Street" [Harcourt, Brace & Co.], by Sinclair Lewis.
"Brimming Cup" [Harcourt, Brace & Co.], by Dorothy Canfield.
"Galusha the Magnificent" [Appleton], by Joseph Lincoln.
"Kingdom Around the Corner" [Cosmopolitan], by Coningsby Dawson.
"Coquette" [Doran], by Frank Swinnerton.
"Moon Calf" [Knopf], by Floyd Dell.

NONFICTION.

"Our Family Affairs" [Doran], by E. F. Benson.
"Hail Columbia" [Harpers], by W. L. George.
"Outline of History" [Macmillan], by H. G. Wells.

Last week's six best circulators at the public library were:

"Main Street," by Sinclair Lewis.
"Brimming Cup," by Dorothy Canfield.
"Growth of the Soil," by Knut Hamsun.
"Mystic Isles of the South Seas," by Frederick O'Brien.
"Margot Asquith."
"Queen Victoria," by Lytton Strachey.

H. G. WELLS has elaborated the theme of the last chapter of his "Outline of History" and of his "Russia in the Shadows" in his newest book, "The Salvaging of Civilization." Have you ever noticed that when Mr. Wells writes a book, his efforts always lead him into the path of another book. Everything he has ever done has had its germs in something he has done before. He never uses up his ideas because his ideas are always self-reproductive. His excursions into history and the germs of anthropology, his visit to a state which is something more of the future than of the present, set his mind to work on the future of mankind.

"The Salvaging of Civilization" is a collection of short papers about what the world is coming to and what we can do about it. They are very readable papers, and should set anybody's mind to working on the future of mankind. States cannot go on as they have, he declares. Local patriotism is unthinkable after the lesson of the great war. Any one of the states can, by the aid of science, destroy all of the others if science makes the strides in death-dealing that it made during the four years we are forgetting so completely. That world state shall not be a league of nations but a United States of the World, with universal laws, universal currency, ministries of world trade, of world communication, of world social and labor conditions, of world health, and, what he considers most important, a ministry of world education.

The best way to secure a world understanding is to create a world bible, a Bible of Civilization, a book which can be read by every person in the world and which shall teach man his relations to time, to civilization, and to the future. He thinks that the present Christian Bible is a model to follow, but that its application to present day human life is impossible. His proposed Bible of Civilization, perhaps two or three times as bulky as the old Bible, would consist of:

The historical books with maps and the like (an explanation of man's place in the progress of the world from the vaporous beginnings—something more compact than his Outline of History, but on the same foundation).

The books of conduct and wisdom. (Rules of life, health, and the fundamental laws of human government.)

The anthologies of poetry and literature (of all nations, excluding all dramas and all novels, or rather putting them into an Apocrypha. Incidentally, he thinks that Henley's "I Am the Captain of My Soul" should be included in the anthology, but that Shakespeare belongs in the Apocrypha).

And finally a book of forecasts in which statesmen, philosophers, and all forward thinkers should put down their vision of the future, as the Hebrew Bible ended with forecasts and the Book of Revelation. Such a Bible of Civilization should be written by a committee of the world's great men and be kept up to date by constant revision. "My vision—a little row of four or five volumes in every house, in every life throughout the world, holding the lives and ideas and imaginations of men together in a net of common familiar phrases and common established hopes."

Thus can civilization be salvaged, Mr. Wells suggests. You'll find his book much more stimulating than this mere restatement of his theories!

The Cliff Dwellers have published a little book "In Memory of B. L. T." which is a permanent record of that public meeting at the Blackstone theater on March 27, which was so public that most of Mr. Taylor's best friends couldn't attend it. Those who tried all of the exits as well as the front doors in the hope that they might somehow sneak into the theater will surely want the memorial. It contains a facsimile of a line, with that beautiful bit of "The East Window" which begins "When I am bidden to the journey through the narrow vale I hope the message will come, not in the summer, but in the spring—the season of birth in death," "Sundown," the last line of all, and four poems which have been favorites supplement briefs of the addresses which were given. The proceeds from the sale of the book will be given to "Babette," Mr. Taylor's beloved baby, to whom he wrote some of his most charming verses.

"The Living Frieze" is Mark Turbyfill's first volume of poetry. Perhaps you know Mark Turbyfill? One of the nicest of boys, one of the realest of poets. There is something shy and removed about him. His poetry has that same quality. There is nothing brash about him. His poetry is delicate and real, but never brazen in its beauty. His free verses are images in the most technical sense of the word. They really do recreate emotions and thoughts and scenes in images. As he says in "Rain-Night."

> O, I do not want realities!
> Give me their misshapen lovely images
> And unreached forms.

"Jenny," by Sigrid Undset, is the first of the Borzoi-Gyldendal books. The firm of Gyldendal has been, almost since its founding in 1870, the foremost publishing house in Scandinavia. Mr. Alfred Knopf has arranged with them for American publication of the books which they bring out in English translation. So far there have been three of them—"Jenny," "The Sworn Brothers," a story of the early days of Iceland, written by the greatest of modern Icelandic authors, and "Grim" by Svend Fleuron, a sort of novel with a pike as the hero. The Knut Hamsun books are also published by Gyldendal in England, but their publication in this country is not an experiment. They are doomed to success.

But a word about "Jenny." Sigrid Undset is, so rumor has it, the best known woman writer in Norway, and the most widely read. For that reason "Jenny" would be an interesting book even if it weren't (which isn't an Irish bull, but perfectly comprehensible fact). "Jenny" is the story of a girl of 27 who has never known love. Her essay into the field of asphodel is with a youth, younger by two or three years than she is. Their idyl in Rome is much the same love record that any old-fashioned popular novelist might make—all beauty, all spirit, all everything fit for the old-fashioned young girl. The conversation is extremely modern, however, which is, to me, most amusing. Evidently the whole civilized world is talking the same fundamental thought-language. The characters in "Jenny" say nothing that mightn't be said by characters of "This Side of Paradise" or "Debatable Ground" or "Woman" or any of the other very modern American, English, or French novels.

When the idyl suffers the chills of a return to Norway and to two families which are cruel in their demands it flickers out. Instead Jenny finds herself chained by a passion for the youth's father, not love, simply a sense of incompleteness in her life without him. The rest is a story of cruel reality, with her lover's divorce from his wife, her increasing loathing for him, the death of her baby, and a final melodramatic scene after which she kills herself. The characters are Scandinavian art students in Rome, in Norway, and in Germany. If, when you have read it, you don't marvel at the familiarity of the psychology of the characters. . .

One of our most efficient boy scouts shares this bit of news. In the catalog room of the library at the University of Chicago there are hanging some famous Will Rothenstein lithographs. The ones he was most fascinated by are those of Max Beerbohm, done in sepia, and of Bernard Shaw, Robert Bridges, and William Archer, which are done in black and white. These are merely samples of a complete collection which is kept in the rare book room of the library. It is the only complete file of Rothenstein lithographs in America, and it was presented to the university by an anonymous friend.

Mr. and Mrs. Haldeman-Julius, whose "Dust" is one of the best American novels of the year, are bombarded with the question: "How can you write together?" Their answer is this: "We write literally in the midst of things, talking and planning, discussing and clarifying at the breakfast table and at dinner (the one meal at which the children are not with us), whenever we go for a ride, a stroll in the garden, or get a stray fifteen minutes together, and as we dress, hairpins and razor in hand. All this work is viva voce. We do not even begin to write until we know exactly what we want in both form and substance. When we reach this point it is a mere matter of chance and convenience which one does the rough blocking out. We pick it up and put it down so many times that for the most part we get only a few paragraphs done at a sitting. Each begins where the other has happened to leave off—not infrequently in the middle of a paragraph—and writes just as long as the gods will allow.

"When a chapter is blocked we sit down together, each with a carbon copy, pencil in hand, and cut. We try to cut out every thought, every sentence, every word that is not positively necessary. When we feel pretty well satisfied with a chapter, each of us takes a copy and goes off with it alone and polishes. When we compare our copy we have made many of the same alterations and cuts. We make a fresh copy with these alterations. We go out in the car with it by ourselves, and while father drives mother reads. And the chapter as it stands finished is the chapter as we both saw it clearly before either of us actually wrote a word."

Such a collaboration of mentalities is more than remarkable. It is almost uncanny, as though a mind in the cosmos had separated itself into two parts and had come to earth thus incomplete and had, by the sheer power of its attraction for itself, become again a whole. Aldous Huxley could write a short story on that theme.

TAT TWAM ASI

By Edward Goldbeck

THESE words ("That are thou") sum up old India's wisdom. They were uttered for the first time thousands of years ago, and today they are as young as they were then. They are hoary and modern. Buddha himself may have enunciated them solemnly, but they could have come just as well from the lips of Berthelot or Darwin. They were inspired by a religious feeling, and science, the exact and experimental science of our days, has proved them to be true. What they meant to those who heard them first we do not know. We can only try to divine it.

The "soul of the far east" is an enigma in itself, and the soul of generations which vanished before Europe's history began must remain dim and shadowy even to the scholars who are devoting their lives to the exploration of its mysterious depths. But these three words may give us a practical philosophy of life; they may inspire and guide our conduct; they may endow us with strength and tenderness and understanding and the joyful acquiescence for which we all, consciously or unconsciously, are yearning and striving.

If we contemplate nature in this spirit we shall feel one with her; we shall feel that she is one with us. We are nature, and cannot be separated from her. There is no enmity between man and nature any more. We can speak of her as Goethe did when he said: "She has brought me into this world; she will lead me through it. I confide myself to her. She may manage me. She will not hate her own work."

For long and dark periods nature was decried as something Satanic; the body was cursed; love was condemned as carnal lust; the task of the saint was to kill his instincts. The human being prided itself on being fundamentally different from the animal; there was an abyss between ourselves and the rest of creation. Now we look at the animal, the stone, and the plant with the feeling: "That art thou." The difference between all these phenomena is only gradual. We are made of the same elements. Nothing is dead in nature; everything is alive. There is no rest in nature, only unceasing movement, just as we cannot stop thinking without stopping living.

Is not this idea more beautiful than the legend that everything was created only to be used by man? This interpretation of life we might call an imperialistic one. I am here. "Veni, vidi, vici." I am the imperator, the master. No other existence matters. The whole creation, organic or unorganic, is at my disposal. I am responsible only to God, who made me and showered all these gifts on his favorite child.

Looking Up and Down at Our Neighbors.

THE other interpretation of life is certainly more humble, fair, and, so to say, democratic. We feel united to all those creatures which up to now we regarded only as our subjects and predestined victims. It may take away from our pride, which was always silly and sometimes diabolical, but it will add to our happiness. Why should it do that?

The question cannot be answered satisfactorily, because the answer will always be individual. All those in whom the craving for power is strong will obstinately stick to the idea that man is the overlord of the earth and that all the other beings were given to him to do with them whatever he pleased. All those who believe in equal opportunities will feel happier when they are in rank and file with the other emanations of nature. Of course, we do not know how natural history will work out these opportunities, and we may even smile at the pettiness of this comparison. But the old idea of man as a ruthless and irresponsible tyrant strikes me as being odious, and without the counterpoise of the trembling contemplation of life after death it would have made the world an unbearable sojourn, the booty and battleground of monsters like the Borgias.

Francesco d'Assisi, who called the water his sister and the fire his brother, was a modern man; he was a monist and knew that the universe is an immense one. "Science has stated that all the millions of celestial bodies which move through space show the same chemical materials. The day may come when the elements which we know today will be reduced to one primordial and ubiquitous matter. "That art thou!"

The reader may be doubtful whether these cosmic fantasies will lead us anywhere. Did not I say that there was a practical philosophy hidden in these three Indian words? I said so, and I think so. It is not exactly the same as the Christian rule: Love thy neighbor like yourself! We may try to do that and at the same time think that we are fundamentally different from the other man and much superior to him. We may stoop to love him and, while doing our duty by the letter, violate the spirit of Christ's teaching.

The Indian idea gives us another viewpoint. If we know that we are of the same stuff as the other man, if we know that the word "I" is an illusion, we shall not be able any more to look down on our neighbor. He is not only my equal; he is my ego. The outward appearance is nothing but a veil, hiding myself from myself. This is more than brotherhood; it is identity.

When this idea has taken hold of you, you will smile at the idea of kowtowing to a multimillionaire, and you will not be tempted to scorn the beggar. Pride and humility will be empty words for you. "Oneness" will be the only word. You will refuse to hurt other people because you know that by doing so you would only hurt yourself. You will be glad to help other people, because by doing so you will help yourself. There is no isolation possible. Everything is connected, interdependent. Everything is the same, although appearance is ever-varying. "I" am changing constantly, going through innumerable forms of birth, death, resurrection.

One Way to View Objects of Aversion.

IF I consider myself as an individual, a "being that cannot be divided," that stands alone by himself, in contrast with its surroundings and in antagonism to other individuals, such an interpretation of my earthly position may easily and logically lead up to the delusion that my ego is the god whom I must serve. Then practically everything will be allowed to me, because life is struggle and war, and I must subjugate, not to be subjugated; I must kill, not to be killed. I must choose between being master or slave, hammer or anvil. The choice will not be difficult. Egotism will be my watchword.

But if I realize that I am of the same clay as the other beings the word egotism loses its meaning. The word altruism loses its meaning, too. What do we understand by altruism? ("Alter," a Latin word, means: the other one.) Consideration of the other man's feelings, needs, and desires. But there is no other man. The other man is the same man. "That art thou." He is I.

In every day life it is not easy to keep this in mind. We meet people whom we dislike, whom he hate, whom we loathe. The very idea that such a man should resemble me, that the elements of our beings should be the same, is offensive, disgusting, heinous. But a simple operation of our mind will bring a hygienic diversion. Try to find out what is the feature which you dislike most in the object of your aversion and then examine yourself calmly and impartially. In ninety-nine cases out of a hundred you will discover it in the makeup of your own character, and all of a sudden you will feel that in disliking the other one you disliked yourself only. You saw yourself in a magnifying and uglyfying mirror, and this uncomplimentary picture aroused your wrath.

"Tat twam asi." If humankind would understand these three simple words a new era would begin—the era of coöperation, which the world needs so badly. They were spoken thousands of years ago; their exhortation was buried in the clangor of the everlasting struggle for life, but again and again they emerged, and today they are endowed with a new significance and a new hope.

MONTGOMERY WARD & CO

"BLACK SOX" TO FACE BURNS AND GEDEON TODAY

Defense to Quiz Vital Witnesses in Case.

Some time today William "Bill" Burns and Joe Gedeon, believed to be the chief witnesses upon whose testimony the state hopes to convict the seven former White Sox stars and the four alleged gamblers now on trial, will be brought to the Criminal court building by Pinkerton detectives. Here they will be interviewed by the attorneys representing the ball players in an effort to learn the nature of their testimony.

For more than a month Burns, a former White Sox pitcher, and Gedeon, who played second base for the St. Louis Browns, have been in the custody of Pinkerton men acting under instructions of the state's attorney's office, and investigators employed by the defense have been unable to locate them.

Friend Orders Men Produced.

It was not until Attorney Henry A. Berger appealed to Judge Hugo M. Friend, before whom the indicted players and gamblers will go on trial tomorrow, and he ordered the state's attorney to produce the two men, that the interview was arranged.

Burns was indicted with the other Sox players and Gedeon was alleged to have been implicated in the world's series scandal of 1919. It is believed the testimony they will give will be strongly against the defense, and as a result the defendants' attorneys were anxious to learn its nature. Whether they do or not is a question for, attorneys say, while the law provides that defendants be given an opportunity to interview all witnesses to appear against them, it does not provide that these witnesses tell everything they know.

All's Ready for Testimony.

With the jury completed last week, all is in readiness for the beginning of the actual trial tomorrow. An imposing array of lawyers will take part in the case which promises to be protracted.

On one side of the table, led by Attorneys Berger, Benedict J. Short, Thomas D. Nash and James C. O'Brien, will be the staff of lawyers representing defendants. Across from them will sit the assistant state's attorneys and the special prosecutors, who, under the leadership of former Judge George F. Barrett, hope to send the eleven defendants to the penitentiary for conspiracy.

These Defendants on Trial.

The eleven defendants who will be on hand when the introduction of testimony is opened are:

Edward ["Eddie"] Cicotte, pitcher.
Claude ["Lefty"] Williams, pitcher.
George ["Buck"] Weaver, third baseman.
Charles ["Swede"] Risberg, shortstop.
Arnold ["Chick"] Gandil, first baseman.
Joseph ["Shoeless Joe"] Jackson, outfielder.
Oscar ["Happy"] Felsch, outfielder.
Carl Zork, Louis and Ben Levy, and David Zelser, alleged gamblers.

The first day of the trial will probably consist of motions, arguments, and technical testimony. Attorney Berger, for the defense, will ask that all reference to the alleged confessions made by Cicotte, Williams, and Jackson, and then later repudiated, be excluded. This will be bitterly fought by the state, as they have made arrangements to call members of the grand jury, to whom the accused players are alleged to have told their stories.

Mr. Berger will also seek to have several of the counts in the indictment quashed on the grounds that there is no such crime as "conspiracy to cheat and defraud," which they charge. The counts in question charge the players with conspiring to cheat and defraud Ray Schalk, the Sox catcher, out of $1,784.15.

WHERE, WHY AND WHEN IS AN "EXPERT"?

Illuminating information on the procedure incidental to the payment of huge fees to city "experts" was gathered by the council subcommittee investigating the payments yesterday from employes of the controller's office. The picture shows the committee questioning Joseph Harvey, the controller's chief auditor, who said he had refused to approve the payments to the "experts" until he had been told to do so by persons higher in authority. He mentioned Deputy Controller Gosselin as one of those who had participated in the conference. The picture shows (from left to right) two stenographers for the committee, Ald. Guy Guernsey (standing), Louis Hart, counsel for the committee, Mr. Harvey, Lawrence Cohen, attorney for the committee, and Ald. U. S. Schwartz.

Governor of Wisconsin Undergoes an Operation

Madison, Wis., July 16.—Gov. John J. Blaine was operated on this morning at the St. Mary's hospital, it was said at the executive office today. The operation was slight, and it is expected that the governor will be back at his office Monday or Tuesday.

HASTE TO PAY EXPERTS BARED IN COUNCIL QUIZ

Employe Tells of Protesting Bills.

Mr. Gosselin's office or your superior? I know that to be a fact."

"I will have to say Mr. Gosselin——" started Harvey.

"Did he say who gave him directions?" broke in Schwartz.

"I will have to say Mr. Gosselin," repeated Harvey, "for the reason that I never spoke personally to Mr. Harding about these."

Takes It Up with Gosselin.

"You never would have permitted those vouchers to go by," continued Schwartz. "You have a reputation for being careful and are universally commended for your care. There was more than $600,000 paid out in one day. Didn't that attract your attention?"

"Yes, sir."

"Who did you take that up with?"

"The deputy controller."

"You never suggested that these expert fees be charged to the "S" (blanket) accounts, did you?"

"No. I wouldn't suggest that. I would be one in there protesting against paying from those accounts"

"Then you protested, did you?"

"Yes, sir."

"To whom?"

"The deputy controller."

After the committee session it was reported that Mr. Gosselin was exceedingly busy with financial matters of the office. He will probably appear tomorrow.

$6,000,000 BONDS FOR NEW UNION STATION O. K.'D

The last stumbling block in the path of a new issue of bonds to speed up work on the Union station was rolled aside yesterday when the interstate commerce commission granted permission for the issuance of $6,000,000 first mortgage bonds to the Chicago Union Station company.

It is understood the issue will be 6½ per cent bonds, maturing in 1963.

Recently the Illinois commerce commisison authorized the company to issue $16,000,000 of additional bonds,, and the action of the interstate commerce commission releases $6,000,000 of that sum for immediate use in pushing work on the $1,000,000 government mail building, relocation of railroad tracks from Harrison to Van Buren streets, and the construction of the big Union station itself.

MENNONITES TO FOUND A NATION IN PARAGUAY

BUENOS AIRES, July 16.—The greatest religious exodus since the children of Israel fled from Egypt—that of the Mennonites from the United States and Canada—is under way, with Paraguay the new Canaan land.

Fred Engan, a Minnesotan, representing the Mennonites, today obtained an option from the Paraguyan government on 3,000,000 acres. The Paraguyan government yesterday passed a law exempting sons of the Mennonites from military service.

Six representatives of the sect have just completed a tour of several weeks through the territory they propose to settle on. At present it is inhabited only by Indians.

The Mennonites' representatives say they intend to build railroads and secure an outlet for their products through the Paraguay river. It is reported they are backed by the National City bank of New York.

Surprisingly Low Prices Result of Low Production Costs

Many have wondered how we can produce tires of such remarkable mile-after-mile service, and yet offer them at prices so surprisingly low.

But the answer is really very simple.

For in addition to owning our own cotton mills, we control every detail in the making of Mason Cords from baled cotton and crude rubber to finished product.

This, together with a tremendous demand for Mason tires, has made it possible to attain highest quality at lowest possible costs.

There is now no reason why everyone should not enjoy quality tires at these exceptional prices.

L TO SELECT MIGRANTS AT FOREIGN PORTS

ovides Examination at Consulates.

BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]
Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Spe-
.]—Representative Albert Johnson
Washington today introduced a bill ch he designed for acceptance by committee on immigration and uralization, of which he is chairn, as embodying the permanent imgration policy of the United States.
The bill provides for examination of spective immigrants at American sulates abroad, authorizing assign-nt of experienced immigrant inspecrs and physicians to act as vice cons, and denying authority for grant-of visés to immigrants except after amination by such vice consuls.
Mr. Johnson stated that his bill al-dy had received careful examinan at the hands of students of the migration problem, including mem-rs of the house immigration comittee, nearly all of whom have apoved the plan.

Prevents Useless Trip.

"This bill," said Mr. Johnson, "aims place the passport visé system on peace basis in so far as the im-igration service is concerned. It is tended to prevent the departure from reign ports of immigrants who cant or should not be admitted to the ited States. Experience during the r has demonstrated the effectives of the passport visé system, which ady has prevented thousands of s from coming here. Its continu-

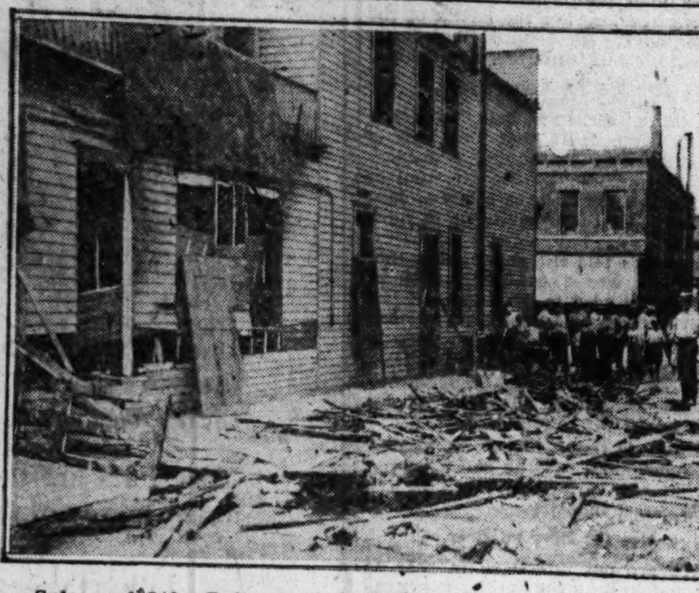
FATAL BREW



Saloon of John Bebargal at 1301 Marianna street, destroyed yesterday by an explosion which, according to the police, originated from an effort to make home brew. Bebargal died of wounds received in the blast. Firemen rescued Joseph Bebargal Jr., son of the saloon man, and Frank Scheffman, a customer, from an icebox in the basement, where they had been trapped by smoke and flame. Both were badly burned.

CHARGE VOLIVA LOCKS UP PARKS TO BAR OUT FOES

Ten "independent" citizens of Zion filed suits yesterday against Wilbur Glenn Voliva, the city, its officials, and others in Waukegan, charging the public parks have been grabbed by the Theocratic party, turned over to Voliva, and padlocked against the "independents."

The bill sets up that under the original plans of John Alexander Dowie, founder of Zion, a large number of public parks were laid out and property was sold on the understanding the parks were to be permanent. Lots which adjoined these parks were sold for more than others because it was held their value was enhanced by their location.

Now, the bill says, the mayor and police have prevented members of the independent faction from entering the parks on the ground they are private property, and some have been arrested for trespassing. Fear is expressed Voliva will sell the parks. The bill asks that he be restrained from holding possession of them.

HOUSE KEEPS DYE EMBARGO IN TARIFF BILL

Vote Is 122 to 106; Oil Battle Goes Over.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—Opponents of the dye embargo provision of the Fordney bill failed in an attempt to eliminate it today in the house. A motion by Rrepresentative Frear of Wisconsin to strike out the entire provision met defeat in the committee of the whole by a vote of 106 to 122.

The debate on the proposition was enlivened by a reiteration of the charges by Mr. Frear and others that the effect will be the building up of a dye monopoly. Supporters of the embargo, led by Representative Longworth of Ohio, insisted that protective duties alone are not adequate to enable the new American dye industry to become firmly established in the face of German competition.

The embargo provision authorizes the tariff commission to designate a list of dyes which are produced on reasonable terms and in sufficient quantities in the United States and against which an embargo shall apply. The authority is vested in the tariff commission for a period of three years.

Oil Battle Postponed.

Following the action on the dye embargo amendment the house began consideration of an amendment by Representative Treadway of Massachusetts to strike out the paragraph which imposes duties of 35 cents per barrel on crude petroleum and 25 cents per barrel on fuel oil. Adjournment was taken for the day without action on this amendment.

The fight over the Frear amendment eliminating the dye embargo amendment was close and the result seemed in doubt until it became evident that the New England Republicans, who previously have been inclined to oppose any restriction on imports of dyes because of their interest in the textile industry, had decided to accept the embargo provision as revised in the Fordney bill.

Mr. Longworth read a letter from of which dyes are the most important derivative at present in peace, is the basis of practically all of our high explosives and most of our war gases," Gen. Pershing relative to the importance of the chemical industry in time of war.

Pershing Upholds Dyes Tariff.

"It can be stated the coal tar product, said Gen. Pershing. "Our shortage of chemical plants in general, and dye plants in particular, prior to the world's war, made it difficult for us to obtain a supply of high explosives and gases until we had been in the war for several months. From the above the importance of the chemical industry from a military standpoint will be readily seen."

During the discussion on the Treadway amendement restoring crude petroleum and fuel oil to the free list Representative Barbour of California declared that the producers of his state are opposed to a duty on oil. He said that it is their belief that the present condition of the oil industry is temporary and due to other causes than excessive imports. He expressed the opinion that a duty would injure the oil industry in the long run.

DAVIS QUESTIONS HARDING DATA ON CARE OF HEROES

'Misleading on Insane and Tuberculous Cases.'

BY GEN. ABEL DAVIS.

[Chairman of the Hospitalization Committee of the American Legion.]

It seems necessary to reiterate certain facts and to dwell with greater emphasis on certain situations in connection with the government's treatment of disabled veterans of the world war. The necessity is demanded by certain passages contained in the recent message of the President of the United States to congress.

The President says in his message: "Up to July 7 there have been 26,237 disabled soldiers hospitalized, and in government controlled hospitals today there are 6,000 available beds without occupants."

I realize, of course, that this information has been given to the President by his official advisers, and that the figures are accurately stated, but without further explanation the mere statement of these figures is misleading.

Many "Farmed Out."

A large number of the disabled who are being "hospitalized" are farmed out to state, county, municipal and private institutions not designed for the treatment of the special ailments of ex-service men and unequipped to bring about improvements or cures. I have in mind particularly the insane patients in asylums of a custodial nature, whose sole hope lies in admittance to curative institutions.

A good many readers of this statement are residents of Illinois. Illinois occupies a creditable position in the sisterhood of states for its state institutions for the insane. Besides, Illinois is employing special means and special buildings to supplement the efforts of the government. But who will contend that Dunning, Elgin, or Kankakee are proper places for the treatment and cure of insane ex soldiers? The veterans are there because the government lacks facilities, and not because these institutions are specially equipped for the treatment of insane veterans.

Other States Not So Lucky.

Other states in the Union are not so fortunate as Illinois. Many among the state institutions for the insane are custodial asylums with unsavory reputations, yet the veterans of the world war are being farmed out to these institutions.

I cannot think of a more appropriate term than "farming out" when I consider the fact that for the fiscal year the profit of the state of New York in handling ex soldiers will be $450,000. Other states profit likewise—not because they seek to profit, but because the situation is forced on them. They are obliged to treat ex soldiers on the same basis as the state patients. They can afford to spend little money on the charity patients of the state, and they find it difficult or impossible to treat the soldier population on a different basis—hence the profit which goes into the general state treasury.

Insanity Status Most Acute.

I mention the cases of insanity because the situation regarding them is most acute, but certain phases of it also apply to veterans suffering from tuberculosis. There are more private institutions acceptable to those suffering from tuberculosis than there are to patients suffering from mental disorders. Except for that phase, the situation regarding tuberculosis patients is no better. Our men are in county poor houses and asylums; they are farmed out at a profit to the county. While the expense to the government is great, only a part of the money reaches the ex-soldier in the nature of benefits.

The nation can scarcely be proud of that sort of treatment of the ex-soldier, can scarcely refer to it as "hospitalization."

Where Real Trouble Lies.

"In government controlled hospitals today," says the President, "there are 6,000 available beds without occupants."

The statement, I repeat, is not to be doubted. What is the real situation? Little difficulty is experienced in caring for cases of general medicine and surgery. The trouble lies with the two special classes mentioned above—insanity and tuberculosis. If the total of vacant beds in the general hospitals owned or controlled by the government were 60,000 in place of 6,000 it would not help the situation. An insane or tuberculous patient cannot be taken into a general hospital or any other institution not equipped for the treatment of insanity or tuberculosis.

Why insist on quoting figures when they are meaningless?

I have yet to hear from a single government official that there are "ample" facilities or "proper" facilities for the treatment of all of the neuropsychiatric or tuberculous patients.

U. S. Aid Admits Weak Spot.

One government official in commenting on my statement published in THE TRIBUNE on June 26 says with reference to that part of it which deals with insane patients:

"In your statement concerning soldiers suffering from neuro-psychiatric disabilities, you have sounded the particular weak spot in the hospitalization program. Yet there should be pointed out the remedial steps that have been taken within the last thirty days in the form of recommendations made by the White committee, and institutions which have been approved by the secretary of the treasury, where expert treatment will be given to persons suffering from mental disorders."

Real Hope at Last.

It is true the government has at last—two years and eight months after the armistice—approved the splendid efforts of the White committee—that committee of civilian physicians whose time and effort has been given unstintingly to the government—and that, as a result of this committee's work, there is real hope for the beginning of a hospital program which ultimately may remove from the unfit and objectionable institutions the veterans now housed there.

The American Legion was the first to appreciate this hopeful sign of progress and, acting through the committee on hospitalization, adopted resolutions commending the government for this excellent beginning and so notified the President and the secretary of the treasury, who is charged with the responsibility of spending the money appropriated by congress for the building of hospitals. What of the future? What of the completion of the hospital program?

The step taken by congress and the attitude adopted by the nation toward the disabled veterans should not be based on bureau statistics, but on real and humane understanding of the whole situation.

"Enact the Sweet Bill."

The President in the same message calls attention to the number of men receiving vocational training and the huge expense connected therewith, as well as to the number of men receiving compensation and the great cost thereof. I am certain much money can be saved and the benefits to the disabled men greatly increased if the expenditures were made in keeping with a well defined program of rehabilitation under a unified system, decentralized in the field and supervized by a man of vision and capacity.

Legislation is required for the solution of the problem. The Sweet bill, in the main, aims to achieve such legislation. The bill should be enacted into a law at the earliest possible moment. The President would then be in a position to select the man who is to represent him in the handling of this huge problem and in the discharging of the nation's obligation to its disabled veterans.

Human Side Big Element.

The people must not be lulled into a feeling of satisfaction by statistics of government bureaus. The nation must understand the human side of the problem, and, when it realizes the condition as it is today, it will not rest until the necessary legislation is enacted and administrative steps are taken which look to a constructive, sympathetic and economic system of rehabilitating those who gave themselves to the service of their nation and became incapacitated in that service.

Cures are more readily effected when adequate facilities are available for prompt treatment.

BEG 2.75 BEER TO END FARMS' MONEY DROUGHT

"Test Squad" Would O.K. It, "Experts" Assert.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—Legislation by congress to legalize 2.75 per cent barley malt beer was urged today by R. A. Jones before the joint congressional commission investigating the troubles of the farmer.

Mr. Jones represents Minnesota grain dealers and Charles Kenny, representing a Minnesota farmers' elevator association, favored the same thing, as one way the farmers of the northwest, particularly those who grow barley and other coarse grains, may be rescued from their present financial drought.

Might Call for Volunteers.

Mr. Jones declared that legalization of 2.75 per cent barley malt beer would mean an addition of about $300,000,000 to the yearly income of the northwest farmers. He said that sort of beer is nonintoxicating. He suggested that the commission establish this fact through the use of a testing squad under the direction of the department of agriculture.

Mr. Jones told the commission that a petition will be circulated among the farmers in Minnesota, the two Dakotas, Iowa, and Wisconsin to urge legalization of 2.75 per cent beer, and that later these petitions will be presented to congress.

He read the commission the petition, which declares that legalization of 2.75 barley malt beer would prevent bootlegging and improve the health of the farmer boys. He declared that farmers, not brewers, back the movement.

Dry Job for Supervisors.

"I think," Mr. Jones said, "that you should demonstrate that this beer is nonintoxicating by having a demonstration squad under the direction of this commission and the board of food and drugs of the department of agriculture."

Mr. Jones told the commission that before the war 80,000,000 bushels of barley were used in making beer, but that the incidental effect of restoring the market for barley to be used in beermaking would bring in at least $300,000,000 a year to the northwest farmers by raising the price of his other products.

"I believe that what we advocate," Mr. Jones said, "is the salvation not only of the barley crop, but of the whole cereal industry.

Not for Beer as Beer.

"We are not interested in beer as beer, but in it as the outlet for 80,000,000 bushels of barley. We claim it is nonintoxicating and want this demonstrated.

"You will be surprised," Mr. Jones said, "at the present attitude of the country on this question."

The Greatest Dress Sale in the History of Chicago
Sale Starts Tomorrow, When the Store Opens at 8:30 a. m.

One of New York's largest dress manufacturers sacrificed his entire stock of summer dresses to us—he actually took a loss of thousands of dollars, the benefit of which is passed on to our customers. To this advantageous purchase we have added our entire stock, making an elaborate display of over 3,000 dresses actually worth up to $25, and the entire lot is placed on sale without restrictions at the astounding price of only $5.49.

There are over 200 styles—16 of which are shown here—
Every new color and color combination is included in the assortment—
Complete range of all sizes from 14 to 48—

Time after time this store with its gigantic buying power has been able to present most wonderful bargains, but we most emphatically claim that from the standpoint of style, quality and price this is the greatest sale of all.

DON'T LET ANYTHING KEEP YOU AWAY. For your convenience the dresses are arranged with sizes on separate racks so that, if necessary, you can wait on yourself. The response to this wonderful sale will be overwhelming, and we can hardly insure perfect service; however, we feel that the tremendous saving will more than offset any laxity of attention.

THIS IS IMPORTANT. The prices on these dresses are so low that dealers will want them for resale purposes—we have had this experience in other great sales, and so in justice to all we reserve the right to limit the number of dresses sold to each customer.

PLEASE NOTE—Please do not ask us to make any alterations on these dresses, even if paid for, as it will be impossible for us to handle this work—there are sizes for all figures, and very little alterations will be necessary.

DAY'S ARGUMENT FAILS TO HURRY VETERAN RELIEF

Sweet Bill Still Pending in Senate.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—An all day session of the senate finance committee today again failed to bring forth final committee action on the Sweet bill for the relief of disabled veterans.

Practically all of the important amendments have been disposed of. The committee is scheduled to meet again Monday to hear Secretary of the Treasury Mellon further on the foreign loan question, but an effort is being made to have him postpone his appearance until Tuesday in order that the Monday session can be given over entirely to the Sweet bill.

The committee has also decided to make no change in section 13 liberalizing the present law so that ex-service men suffering from minor disabilities may receive treatment.

Estimated Cost Too High.

Assertions made by Senator Smoot, chairman of the senate finance subcommittee, and others that the bill would cost the government $343,000,000 annually were denied today by Representative Sweet, who declared that added expenditures would be approximately $14,500,000.

"The statement that the bill would cost the government $343,000,000 annually," said Representative Sweet, "was made in regard to a section in the bill which grants, in addition to the benefits now authorized by law, medical, dental, and surgical care and treatment to all honorably discharged ex-service men who are entitled to compensation for reduction in earning capacity because they have been rated at less than 10 per cent.

"Under the present law all those who are entitled to compensation are also entitled to medical, surgical, and dental care and treatment.

"The section also provides that application for such care and treatment shall be made within one year from the date of discharge from the service or one year from the date of the act, whichever is the later.

Cost $12,500,000.

"Recent newspaper articles state that Senator Smoot said that this provision, if adopted, would cost the government $343,000,000 annually. This statement, in my judgment, is erroneous.

"Col. C. R. Forbes, the director of the bureau of war risk insurance, has gone over this provision carefully and has estimated that it would probably not cost the government more than $12,500,000 annually.

"This estimate shows that the added expenditures to the government annually will be in the neighborhood of $14,500,000."

Railroad Parley Called in Chicago July 20

Washington, D. C., July 16.—A conference of representatives of railroad commissions of all states west of the Mississippi has been called by John E. Benton, general counsel for the commissions, to be held in Chicago July 20. Plans for a fight before the interstate commerce commission for freight rate reductions on grain will be discussed. Hearings on the case will begin here Aug. 15 before Commissioner Lewis.

PONCE DE LEON'S SPRING

The aged Spanish gentleman who voyaged to America when this part of the world was young in search of waters which would give him everlasting youth might have found a satisfactory substitute in Barnum and Bailey's circus, which opens in Grant park on July 30, according to the gifted press agent. A clown of five score years and numerous aerial artists of fifty are among the attractions. They keep young, according to the p. a., by playing—both in the rings and out. The accompanying picture shows a clown begging for candy from a young bareback rider, who has just received a box from an admirer, so 'tis said.

NORTH SIDE GIRL, IN STYLISH GARB, QUIZZEDONBOOZE

Confers on De Luxe Liquor Ring.

A pretty north side girl, about 25 years old, fashionably gowned, appeared at the United States district attorney's office yesterday and held a secret conference for half an hour with Assistant District Attorney Roy J. Egan. When she left she hurried to the elevator, shielding her face.

Mr. Egan refused to divulge the name of the young woman, but admitted she had appeared in connection with the de luxe liquor ring, said to be headed by Mr. and Mrs. James W. Walsh, which is alleged to have sold whisky to many of Chicago's prominent citizens.

Two Brokers Quizzed.

Two men, said to be La Salle street brokers, were also represented through their attorney at a conference with Mr. Egan. Their identity also was withheld.

Further disclosures in the case are not expected before Monday or Tuesday, when the grand jury has weighed the evidence presented by Mr. Egan on various members of the "Walsh liquor syndicate."

Five Indictments Expected.

At least five indictments are positively assured, Mr. Egan said, and he expects to make further revelations after the grand jury has acted.

The scope of the liquor ring's work was so wide, Mr. Egan said, that it would be practically an impossibility to talk to every one who bought whisky from them. Enough witnesses are assured, however, to secure probably five convictions, according to Mr. Egan.

NO CASH BONUS NOW, RAINBOW VETERANS VOTE

Cleveland, O., July 16.—The Rainbow Division Veterans' association failed to indorse an immediate cash bonus for former soldiers at their annual convention here today. They passed a resolution, however, recommending early collection of the accrued interest on the allied war debt to the United States and the use of the money to pay the adjusted compensation for ex-soldiers.

The bonus resolution took into consideration that treasury officials have stated it would be impossible to pay a bonus without disrupting the financial organization of the government.

A resolution was adopted demanding adequate and efficient care for disabled service men.

Air Mail Pilot Killed by 300 Foot Fall in California

GRANT VETOED 1875 BONUS BILL, HARDING LEARNS

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—President Harding has found a precedent for his course in urging delay on enactment of soldiers' bonus legislation.

Following the shelving of the measure yesterday in the senate, which precipitated one of the stormiest sessions in the history of that usually dignified body, the White House today issued a statement showing that President Grant vetoed a soldiers' bonus bill because it would have seriously embarrassed government refunding operations in progress at the time.

"President Grant," says the statement issued at the White House, "in the spring of 1875 vetoed a soldier's bonus bill which had just been passed by congress." In doing so he presented reasons substantially the same as those urged by President Harding a few days ago when he appeared before the senate.

Funds Insufficient.

"The Grant veto was called to the attention of President Harding by Gen. C. C. Sniffen, who in a letter said:

"'The purpose of this note is to call to your attention a pocket veto of President Grant's of H. R. 3341,' an act to equalize the bounties of soldiers who served in the late war for the union. The veto was based on the ground of the insufficiency at that time of funds in the treasury to meet the extraordinary outlay required under the bill, etc., etc., and, as Grant says, 'The passage of this bill at this time is inconsistent with the measures of economy now demanded by the necessities of the country.'

"The bonus bill of 1875 provided for the payment to every 'noncommissioned officer, musician, artificer, wagoner, and private soldier, sailor, and marine, including those borne upon the rolls as slaves and Indians, $8.33 1-3 a month for all time served' during the war.

"The bounties previously paid by the United States or any state were to be deducted. No bounty was to be paid to a soldier who served as a substitute or was a captured prisoner at the time of his enlistment.

"The measure passed the house of representatives, where it originated, and was sent to the senate shortly before the end of the short term in 1875. President Grant literally put it in his pocket and when he went to the capitol on the forenoon of March 3 to deal with the last legislative work of the session he sat down in the President's room there and wrote his veto message.

Text of Grant Veto.

"Its text follows:

"'To the House of Representatives: House bill 3,341 is hereby returned without my approval for the reasons, first, that it appropriates from the treasury a large sum of money at a time when the revenue is insufficient for current wants and this proposed further drain on the treasury. The issue of bonds authorized by the bill to a very large and indefinite amount would seriously embarrass the refunding operations now progressing, whereby the interest of the bonded debt of the United States is being largely reduced. Second, I do not believe that any considerable portion of the ex-soldiers who, it is supposed, will be beneficiaries of this appropriation are applicants for it, but, rather, it would result more in a measure for the relief of claim agents and middlemen who would intervene to collect or discount the bounties granted by it. The passage of this bill at this time is inconsistent with the measures of economy now demanded by the necessities of the country.

U. S. GRANT.'

No Commission Report Found.

"Some effort to bring to light the commission report, if there were such, on this bill of 1875, has failed to discover it. The measure would have given to each soldier $100 per year of his service, with, however, the deduction of whatever bounties he received from either the federal government or his state. Estimates of expense ranged from $20,000,000 to $150,000,000.

"At the time he delivered his recent message to congress President Harding had not had his attention called to this veto by President Grant and apparently none of the legislators had called attention to it in the discussion on bonus legislation."

CHANGES IN CABINET.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, July 16.—Emilio Escamilla has resigned as minister of war and has taken the portfolio of finance, succeeding Gen. Felipe Pereira, resigned. Señor Mendoza has been appointed minister of war.

U. S. DISMISSES CASES AGAINST ACCUSED SLAYERS

Washington, D. C., July 16.—The government today dismissed its case againsts Capt. Robert Rosenbluth in connection with the death of Maj. Alexander Cronkhite at Camp Lewis, Wash.

Charges against Sergt. Roland Pothier, arrested with Rosenbluth, also were dismissed. While wiping out all federal cases against the two men, Attorney General Daugherty ordered all evidence in possession of his department turned over to the county prosecutor of Pierce county, Wash., in which Camp Lewis is situated. What the county authorities will do is not known here.

Cronkhite was killed about two years ago during a practice march. The original verdict in his death was suicide. The case came to a head when Sergt. Pothier was taken into custody. He made a statement, according to government detectives, in which he said he killed Cronkhite at the order of Rosenbluth, then a captain. Rosenbluth was arrested, but Pothier repudiated his statement.

WASTE

Every man and woman in a workshop, storeroom or other industry, ought to constitute themselves guardians of their employer's property. Not only should they avoid waste themselves, but as far as practicable, discourage it in others.

If this were done, hundreds of millions of dollars would be saved to the country, a much larger percentage of profit would go to employers, and each employee would benefit proportionately.

The experience and added ability resulting from such effort would be no small asset toward more sensibly and profitably conducting one's own affairs, however small they may be.

Strange that these simple facts should have so little weight, but so it is. Waste by another is cruel to the man who has to pay. It does not, cannot benefit the person guilty of it. It is a dead loss to the nation. Every scrap of material destroyed, every minute of time wasted, makes the total product more costly, and consequently more expensive for the consumer.

In the interest of all employees, it is important that these facts should be borne in mind. Wages bear their relative portion with the cost of raw materials. Both combined determines the price of commodities. The cheapness of the latter augments their sale, increases their production, enhances the demand for labor, and tends to keep up wages.

If, therefore, an obvious duty is neglected, time wasted or carelessly performed, or goods already manufactured are damaged, lost or stolen through a disregard for property not your own, the employees mainly responsible ultimately suffer. That suffering will be in the ratio to the cause which produces it.

AVOID WASTE yourself. In your own interest see that others do, or know the reason why.

HARDING FAVORS ONE DEPARTMENT OF U. S. FLYERS

Wants Military and Civil Combined.

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—President Harding favors the proposal to place all the aircraft services of the government, military and civil, under one central authority. There has been an impression that the President was opposed to this plan and that impression was emphasized when Maj. Gen. Menoher, chief of the air service of the army, asked the secretary of war to remove the assistant chief, Brig. Gen. William Mitchell, who was a persistent advocate of amalgamation of the army and navy air services.

It was learned today, however, that the President is heartily in favor of the proposed amalgamation and that the joint reorganization commission, which is engaged in preparing plans for a reorganization of administration of the executive branch of the government, is inclined to recommend the unification of all the government's aircraft activities.

Lack of System Now.

The position of President Harding in the matter is that amalgamation will work to efficiency and economy. One great difficulty pertaining to the present separate aircraft services that has impressed him is that there is no systematic method of awarding contracts for the construction of aircraft. One branch awards contracts without regard to any other government aircraft organization, and the President believes that this is detrimental to the upbuilding of private aircraft manufacture in the United States.

The aircraft manufacturers are dependant almost entirely on government patronage, as commercial demands are small, and it is claimed that unless the government so arranges its contracts as to distribute contracts among all those concerns which produce aircraft meeting government standards, some of them may be obliged to go out of business.

For Department of Defense?

In these circumstances President Harding is understood to feel that a central government aircraft organization will be better able to determine how contracts should be awarded for the entire government.

Inference is drawn from what was learned today of the President's position that he is in favor of the amalgamation of the war and the navy departments into a department of national defense. The plan under consideration by the reorganization commission contemplates having a cabinet officer at the head of this department, with assistant secretaries under him, in charge of the army, the navy, and the united aricraft service.

Seven girl employes of the La Salle Extension university will get a Chicago Tribune every morning for a year without spending a cent—or rather 2 cents. They are the winners in a contest held under the direction of President Jesse G. Chapline, head of the correspondence school. He believes there is no greater medium of education on current events than reading daily newspapers. The winners, shown from left to right, are: Faye Walcut, Margaret Finnelly, Norma La Lond, Frances Goodkind, Sylvia Cohen, Helen Gerty, and Marie Shafer.

OWEN MOORE TO MARRY ZIEGFELD CHORUS BEAUTY

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—A romance was unfolded today, when it became known among the close friends of Owen Moore and Katherine Perry that they are soon to marry. Miss Perry was of the famous Zeigfeld Frolics beauty squad until she was discovered by a motion picture producer in search of screen talent, and added to the Selznick staff.

A friend of Miss Perrys, in telling something of the girl who will marry the former husband of Mary Pickford, says her ingenuous youth appealed to every member of the Ziegfeld cast. There was a sort of unspoken understanding she was to be protected from all unwelcome attentions and that a chaperon was to be provided for her on all occasions.

"SAVE FORESTS" HEARINGS BEGIN HERE THIS WEEK

Committee to Study Ways of Checking Peril.

Originally there were 800,000,000 acres of virgin forests in the United States. There are now only 200,000,000 acres, or 25 per cent of this, left. The 600,000,000 acres that are gone were depleted in the last seventy years.

Unless something is done about it, the United States will some time be a treeless land—its vast original forests laid low; those of its industries which depend upon timber for their existence, crippled or broken.

Awakened to a realization of these conditions by a far cry from its members all over the country, the United States Chamber of Commerce has appointed a "national forestry policy committee" and called hearings on the forestry problem in a number of cities. The first of these hearings opens at the Union League club here tomorrow morning. Hearings in Minneapolis, Minn., Spokane, Wash., Portland, Ore., Seattle, Wash., Tacoma, Wash., and San Francisco, Cal., will follow.

Problem of Vast Importance.

David L. Goodwillie, Chicago box manufacturer, speaking yesterday of the coming hearing, pointed out the urgent need for study and action on the forestry problem. He declares the danger of ultimate depletion of America's forests is a real and grave one and the problem far more serious than the lay public realizes.

Mr. Goodwillie has appointed several subcommittees of the original committee to deal with specific subjects coming under the general heading of forestry. Some of these subjects are government regulation, private holdings, individual versus public right, fire protection and expenditures, acquisition of land, national forest survey, taxes and taxation, utilization of wood and forest conservation, reforestation, and national forests.

Cites Menace in South.

"As an example of how serious a problem our forestry problem is, let me point to the well known fact that in seven years 50 per cent of the sawmills of the south will be out of business," said Mr. Goodwillie. "What this means is better realized when we consider that the sawmills of the south now produce 30 per cent of all the lumber used in the country.

"These meetings are simply to get at all the facts, to give us a thorough grasp of the problem, to inform us fully of its scope. When we have finished we will make a report and recommendations to the board of directors of the chamber and they will consider what action is necessary.

Favors Tax Exemption.

"Taxation is a big factor in this problem. If we exempt certain timber lands from taxation, as they have seen wise to do in some of the older countries, it will encourage the seeding of that land to timber. As it now stands millions of acres that might, and really should, be yielding timber, are sown to other products and bringing a niggardly return.

"This is simply because this is timber land and timber should be on it. The farmers, however, consider that since it is taxed they must sow something which will bring an immediate return. There are 5,000,000 acres of nontillable land in Illinois alone.

Vast Areas of Denuded Land.

"We have in the United States 81,000,000 acres of what is called denuded land, and more than 400,000,000 acres of what we call cutover land. Denuded land is land on which forest fires have occurred and where the fire has eaten its way so deep into the soil as to destroy the seedlings that might spring up.

Cutover land is land from which timber has been taken and on which a second growth is possible and oftentimes springing up. Such land will make forests in a period of some forty years if it is taken care of. Taking care of such land is another phase of the forestry problem.

"There are now two reforestation bills before congress. Our inquiry will reveal whether they are adequate or not. One of these is the Capper bill and the other is the Snell bill. Snell, who is a lumberman from the Adirondacks, purposes for the next five years to increase the government's appropriation for forestry from $260,000 a year to $10,000,000 a year. The passage of such a bill would be a wonderful step forward if the money were rightfully spent.

Personnel of Committee.

The personnel of the committee which will conduct the hearings is, in addition to Mr. Goodwillie, who is chairman: Charles S. Keith, Kansas City, Mo.; F. C. Knapp, Portland, Ore.; George L. Curtis, Clinton, Ia.; John Fletcher, Chicago; Charles F. Quincy, New Yory city; Dr. Henry S. Drinker, Marion Station, Penn.; Dr. Hugh P. Baker, New York city; Harvey N. Shepart, Boston, Mass.; Junius M. Browne, New York city; Dr. W. B. Heinemann, Wausau, Wis., and W. Du P. Brookings, secretary of the committee, U. S. Chamber of Commerce, Washington, D. C.

MATERNITY BILL INDORSED BY MANY SOCIETIES

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—Indorsement by the 4,500,000 members of the American Federation of Labor, by the National Catholic Welfare council and by the 10,000,000 members of thirteen national women's organizations was the salient feature at the hearing this morning on the Sheppard-Towner maternity bill before the house committee on interstate and foreign commerce.

The Rev. John A. Ryan, professor of economics of the Catholic University of America, appeared to present unqualified indorsement. In answer to a question from a member of the committee, Dr. Ryan said he saw no reason to think that the bill would mean the extending of the teachings of birth control, as contended by opponents of the measure.

SMALL AWARDS GOOD ROADS BIDS FOR 95.53 MILES

$2,734,028 Cost Called Record Breaker.

Springfield, Ill., July 16.—Contracts for nearly 100 miles of hard roads at a total cost of $2,734,028, alleged to be a record breaking low cost average of $26,620 per mile, were awarded by Gov. Small today. All former records of the Small administration for both mileage and low cost were broken in today's letting, which was made on bids received by the division of highways last Tuesday.

The total mileage of the combined awards was 95.53.

Friends of the administration said that had not Gov. Small's battle for "maximum mileage at minimum cost" been successful the same roads would have cost the state $3,821,200.

Saves a Million?

The governor's ultimatum to contractors that no bids over $30,000 would be accepted has saved the state $1,087,172 today, they said. Last February the lowest bids the state received were approximately $40,000 per mile, including cement, which the state supplies.

If the present ratio is maintained on the contemplated 4,800 miles of hard roads, the governor pointed out, it will save the state over $54,000,000 on its road construction, entire road bond issue being $60,000,000.

List of Contracts.

The contracts awarded were given to the low bidders Tuesday on the following roads:

Section 1, Clark county, 3.81 miles.
Section 18, Alexander county, 3.43 miles.
Section 11, McHenry county, 7.28 miles.
Section 12, McHenry county, 6.12 miles.
Section 13, Boone county, 3.98 miles.
Section 14, Boone county, 4.43 miles.
Section 15, Boone county, 3.09 miles.
Section 13, Macon county, 3.58 miles.
Section 14, Macon county, 3.63 miles.
Section 15, Macon county, 3.95 miles.
Sections 24 and 25, Sangamon and Morgar counties, 12.54 miles.
Section 1, Effingham county, 3.41 miles.
Sections 1 and 2, Knox county, 9.27 miles.
Sections 1 and 2, Rock Island and Henry counties, 5.52 miles.
Section 4, Henry county, 8.44 miles.
Sections 1-Y, 2 and 3, Champaign county, 12.35 miles.
Sections 7 and 8, Perry and Washington counties, 11.18 miles.

Bids exceeding $30,000 on roads in Jackson, Washington, Brown, Livingston, and McLean counties, were not considered and it was said they probably would be rejected.

BOLT TERRORIZES 200 WASHINGTON OFFICE WOMEN

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—Echoes of the thunderclaps that startled Washington during yesterday's heavy electrical storm were heard here today. President Harding sat for half an hour in almost total darkness at his office desk, lightning having put the White House electric light apparatus out of commission.

More than 200 women in the national bank redemption division in the treasury building, frightened by the crash and the almost total darkness that followed, made a rush for the doors. On account of the large amounts of paper money handled there, the women counters work behind doors with heavy wire screens.

NAVAL OFFICER MAY WED SISTER OF HIS FIANCEE

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Lieut. Louis A. Kloor Jr., one of the three naval aeronauts who were lost in the wilds of Canada last winter, at the Rockaway naval air station tonight refused to affirm or deny that his engagement to Miss Alexandra Flowerton of Rockaway had been broken off because he had discovered that he admired her sister, Consuelo, a film actress.

Consuelo Flowerton, who posed for many of Howard Chandler Christy's war posters, also refused to talk. The reason made public for the breaking of the engagement was that the pay of a naval lieutenant was insufficient for marriage.

Since then, however, Consuelo has practically admitted that her affections have been won by a naval officer.

CALLS HARDING GENIUS FOR ACT ON "FAR EAST"

Preacher from China Lauds President.

BY G. A. MAC WHORTER.

Racine, Wis., July 16.—[Special.]—"President Harding's inclusion of the far eastern problem in the international disarmament conference, which he has called for Armistice day, was a stroke of genius," the Rev. H. P. Littell of St. Paul's cathedral, Hankow, China, declared this afternoon at the Racine Episcopal church conference.

"There is no use," he said, "seeking to settle the disarmament question until the far eastern question is disposed of and this unexpected act of the President in asking that the difficulties between China and Japan be settled at the same time world disarmament is to be discussed is the crux of the whole matter."

It's Now Reorganized.

The Rev. Mr. Littell has spent twenty-two years in China as a missionary of the American Episcopal church, but the church in China is now called the Holy Catholic Church of China, with its own governing body, a synod composed of bishops and priests from America, the Church of England, Ireland, Scotland, Australia, Canada, and New Zealand, as well as the Chinese clergy.

There is one Chinese bishop, the Rt. Rev. T. S. Sing, D. D., the first native to be consecrated; six archdeacons, and 161 Chinese priests.

The Rev. Mr. Littell also praised President Harding's appointment of Jacob Gould Schurman as minister to China. That, he said, has caused great satisfaction in China, where Dr. Schurman is considered the best man for the position.

Lauds Anglo-Jap Pact.

The Anglo-Japanese alliance was praised by the Rev. Mr. Littell as the best means of preserving peace in the Orient until more comprehensive international agreements can be entered into—the best program to keep things quiet in Japan and China, the best restraint upon Japan's militarism today.

Possibilties of war between Japan and United States are lessened, he said, by the existence of the Anglo-Japanese alliance, and it also keeps Japan from being free to make alliances with Germany.

FARMERS PLAN OWN LIVE STOCK MARKETING FIRMS

Will Control U. S. Chain of Commission Houses.

The farmers live stock committee of fifteen, appointed by President J. R. Howard of the American Farm Bureau federation, is perfecting plans for the establishment of producer-owned and operated coöperative commission companies at the leading markets. The plan will be submitted to the whole Committee of Fifteen at its next meeting in Chicago on Aug. 10 for approval.

Principles on which the producers' coöperative commission companies will be established and operated have been reviewed and indorsed by the Committee of Fifteen. Upon establishment of coöperative commission companies at the various stockyards, they will be affiliated in an organization national in scope and function, in which producers will obtain membership and control on a coöperative basis. The producers will share the earnings and benefits of selling according to the patronage dividend principle.

Live Stock Body Meets.

The fourth session of the Committee of Fifteen was held in the Hotel La Salle Thursday and Friday. It was the most largely attended meeting of the committee yet held, with twelve states represented.

The subcommittee on orderly marketing reported that a careful study had been made of the movement of live stock, particularly hogs, at the eleven leading markets. Price levels in relation to seasonal receipts and the interrelations between price levels, seasonal receipts, and daily receipts were presented. It is the purpose of the Committee of Fifteen to work out a plan which will have a tendency to lessen the uneven distribution of receipts, both daily and seasonal, as a preventive of market gluts and accompanying disastrous fluctuations in prices.

Favor Packer Supervision.

The subcommittee on legislation reported that it had presented in Washington the views of the Committee of Fifteen on packer legislation. An effort will now be made to obtain action on the measure now in conference and it is hoped a law providing effective supervision of the packing industry and the stockyards will finally be obtained.

The subcommittee on coöperative marketing is preparing a report on the Coöperative Shipping association movement. The report will be submitted to the Committee of Fifteen, Aug. 10.

"HOME OF THE BABY LOBSTER"

Dine in real comfort. The air in the North American Restaurant is pure air. It's not "tunnel air" but fresh air taken from 160 feet above the street level, then washed and cooled to a comfortable, refreshing temperature.

Are The Portions We Serve Too Large?

After Shopping, Matinee or Theatre

Lunch or dine at the North American. It's convenient. Right on the corner where you can't miss it. It is always cool and comfortable and you get big portions of the finest food at Common Sense prices. For instance:

Chicken Salad (all white meat)	50c
Fresh Crabmeat Salad	50c
Waldorf Salad	35c
Whole Baby Lobster, hot or cold, with melted butter, or Chili sauce	65c
Breast of Chicken, with Bacon	65c
Chicken, dark meat, with Bacon	55c
Broiled Halibut and Peas	35c
Pork Tenderloin	35c
Fresh Shrimps (one dozen) with Chili Sauce	30c

Certified Milk—the richest milk served in Chicago, per bottle	15c

The only kick (if it can be called a kick) ever registered here is that our food portions are too large.

Are they?

We purposely make our portions generous. But very seldom do any of our patrons fail to eat all of their food in spite of the very liberal portions. And if the portion is too large for one it can be shared with a companion. That is just what most people who dine here do. So we are undoubtedly right in giving big portions. We know that the liberality of our portions makes it possible for two people to get an unusually satisfying meal of several courses for a very small amount.

We are asked, "why do you do it?—no other good restaurant or hotel encourages sharing portions." That's the very reason we do it. The North American has not been content to follow the beaten path. Everything possible is done to make it different—and better—and less expensive. And the generous portions we serve is just one of our ways of making food cost you less.

Those who dine here regularly tell us constantly that nowhere can they get better food. And they are glad to serve themselves when they can make such a big saving and still eat the finest food, prepared in the most appetizing manner.

The North American Restaurant is a new idea in restaurants. It is a real restaurant and it is wrong to call it by any other name. If you don't dine here we know positively you are overlooking something worth while.

Every morning more people eat breakfast here. Have YOU tried it?

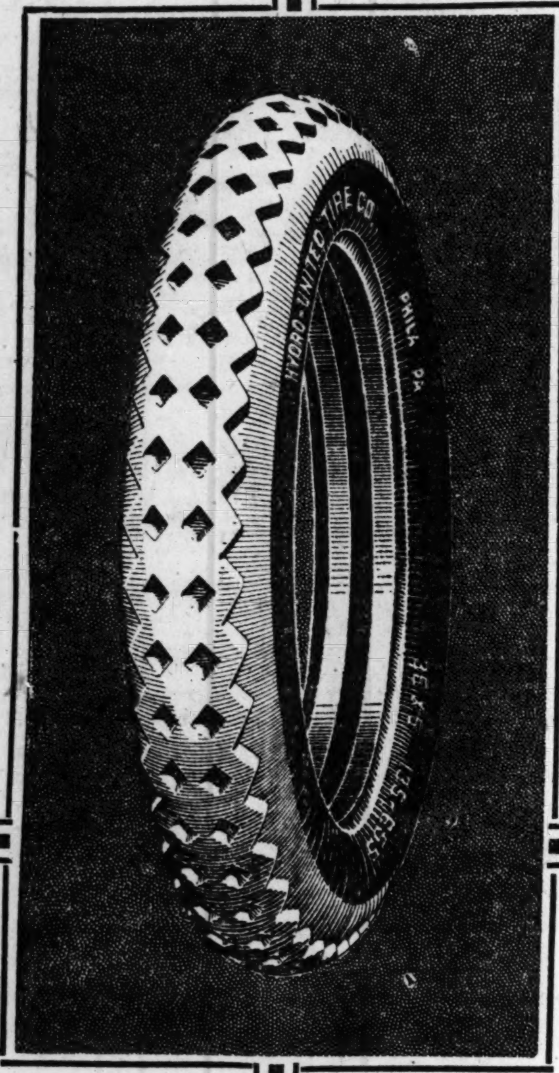
Cord Size-Cord Mileage at Standard Fabric Prices



Big as cords—better than cords—yet costing you no more than you would pay for ordinary fabric tires.

Made by the wonderful Internal Hydraulic Expansion Process.

Every layer of Toron fabric—the great discovery that is bound to revolutionize the tire-building industry.

And as a result of the added service that these principles of construction make absolutely certain, guaranteed for 10,000 miles against stone-bruise, rim-cut and blow-out!

This, briefly, is the story of Hydro-Toron's unprecedented success in Chicago and vicinity.

The list of Hydro-Toron dealers grows. There are many more names in this advertisement than there were a week ago. If your dealer was missing then, probably he is prepared now to sell you this greater tire.

Internal Hydraulic Expansion process means careful building—on a collapsible core. Before vulcanizing, this core is replaced by a heavy fabric bag made to hold water under pressure. When in the vulcanizer, this bag is pumped full of water heated to the proper vulcanizing temperature and the right pressure of 200 pounds to the square inch is applied inside the tire.

No hidden imperfections, because the right pressure from within makes a smooth, flawless tire. No "seconds" are turned out of our factory.

Toron fabric means fabric preservation; the treatment seals the tire against the damaging action of water seeping in—against oxidation, decay and deterioration in all forms. It is truly a no-rot fabric.

Ask your dealer today for these big 10,000 mile tires. If you cannot find them in your neighborhood, we will ship to you C. O. D. And if the tires are not all you expect, you get your money back.

These Dealers in Chicago and Vicinity HAVE Hydro-Toron Tires—YOUR Dealer Can Get Them

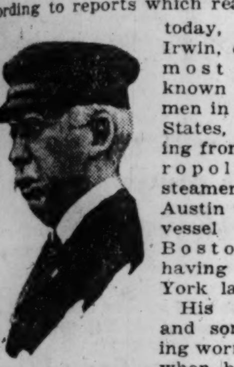
Famous Pilot Disappears Off Ship.

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—According to reports which reached here today, Arthur Irwin, one of the most widely known baseball men in the United States, was missing from the Metropolitan line steamer Calvin Austin when that vessel docked at Boston today, having left New York last night.



ARTHUR IRWIN.
[Gilliams Photo.]

His baggage and some clothing worn by Irwin when he boarded the steamer were found in his stateroom, but he could not be found. Irwin had been ill for more than a month and had been unable during that time to perform his duties as manager of the Hartford club of the New England league.

Managed Pennant Winners.

Irwin was one of the oldest men identified with professional baseball in this country. He was born in Boston about sixty-four years ago, and first attracted attention as shortstop of the Worcester National league team, managed by the late Frank Bancroft, in the early '80s.

Irwin was shortstop and captain of the Providence National league team which in 1884 won the pennant and also the first world series ever played. The Providence champions met the Metropolitans of this city in the post-season series that year and won without suffering a defeat. Irwin attended to the playing end of the game, while the manager was Bancroft.

Piloted Boston Champions.

Irwin then became the shortstop of the Philadelphia National League club. After several years of service with the Quakers Irwin became the manager, captain and shortstop of the Boston Brotherhood team in 1893 and added to his renown by piloting that combination of stars into a championship.

He became manager of the Cincinnati Reds within a year or two, and in subsequent years managed the Washington, Philadelphia, and New York clubs until be bought the Toronto club of the Eastern league to establish himself in his native city. He held the Toronto franchise from 1895 to 1898, after which he returned to major league management with the Washingtons.

Illness Forced Retirement.

In later years Irwin was manager of several Eastern league clubs, including Rochester and Toronto, and went to Kansas City in 1905.

He returned to the major leagues as scout for the New York Americans about ten years ago, had been scout for several other clubs, and this year was manager of the Hartford club of the Eastern league until illness forced retirement.

CHARGES AGAINST PHILLY PLAYERS ARE DISMISSED

Philadelphia, Pa., July 16.—Five members of the Philadelphia National league baseball club, arrested yesterday on a charge of disorderly conduct, were discharged today. The case was dropped when the complainants learned who they were and refused to take further action against them.

The affair grew out of an altercation with two pedestrians who crossed in front of their motor car as the ballplayers were driving from the ball park.

The players were Jimmy Smith, Frank Bruggy, Goldie Rapp, Cy Williams and Clifford Lee.

FOHL TO RETAIN BROWNS' REINS

St. Louis, Mo., July 16.—Reports that the St. Louis Browns are on the market and that Lee Fohl was to be deposed in favor of George Sisler were denied here today by Phil Ball, president of the club. He said he had not received an offer from a St. Louis syndicate and that Fohl would remain in charge of the club for the remainder of the season at least.

Holy Cross Infielder Rejects Giant Offer

Boston, Mass., July 16.—Fred MacGuire, star second baseman of the Holy Cross nine, has turned down an offer from the New York Giants and will return to complete his studies next fall, he announced today. MacGuire was developed by Jesse Burkett, now scouting for the Giants, and he is regarded as one of the greatest college players of the year.

Open Air Cue Match at Great Lakes Tomorrow

Camp Luce, at Great Lakes, tomorrow will stage an open air pocket billiard game at 250 points between William H. Leu of Rockford, state champion, and Carl A. Vaughn, runner-up in the recent national tournament at the Chicago Athletic association. The exhibition game will open a tournament among officers of the 16th regiment at the naval station.

IN the WAKE of the NEWS

GROWTH OF ATHLETICS.

FIELDING H. YOST'S acceptance of the position of director of the new department of physical education at the University of Michigan is significant. Yost, at least well-to-do, perhaps independently wealthy, gave up a more lucrative business career for the, to him, more interesting and more important work of developing young America physically.

The significance lies in the growing national recognition of the need for systematic instruction in physical exercise. To The Wake it means a passing of the old time professional coach for the intelligent and trained athletic instructor.

Stagg of Chicago, in the days when salaries were lower than now, always said he had decided to give his life to teaching college boys sportsmanship as well as sport, rather than to acquiring money. Who will say that men like Yost, Stagg, Huff at Illinois, Tom Jones at Wisconsin, and numerous others are not more useful in the world than the mere accumulators of dollars?

To have coaches of high standing is one of our hobbies. The high school and college boy receiving athletic instruction is at a period when his ideals of life are being formed. The coach naturally is a sort of hero to him. The right sort of man makes a lasting impression on that boy. That's why we think the teaching of fair play and a square deal to your opponents is so important, and why we want the best men who can be secured for our athletic coaches.

A Couple of Foreign Nations Might Think This Over.

When Carpentier hit Beckett with his total might and main,
The world agreed it was a hefty clout.

For all of Beckett's efforts to arise and fight again
Were fruitless—he was finished, down and out.

When Carpentier hit Dempsey half a dozen of those swipes,
Did Dempsey wilt and flop upon his ear?
Like Kelly did; he up and showed the frog
some Stars and Stripes,
You see, we make 'em tougher over here.

Warning to Sister Ann.

Dear Harvey: Sister Ann's wail in The Wake touched me. I, too, am my father's child. I, too, wanted to be up and away. I loathed conventions and the stodgy folk who observed them. My discontent was not born of too idle hands, but of hands too full of endless duties, duties that robbed life of the color and action for which I so longed.

I defied convention. It was wonderful, but punishment was swift, sure, and from an unexpected quarter. Life is endurable as long as one has illusions and can dream. Life is dust and ashes for me now and will be until I, too, am dust, and I'm not at all old.

Hope Sister Ann will down that hanker and retain her peace of mind. She may not be as interesting, but she will have been careful, and Huneker says a woman can't be interesting and careful at the same time. Midge.

From afar, we learn that Charles A. Stoneham and John J. McGraw of the New York Giants have sold their majority holdings in the Havana race track. That interest was long a sore spot to their associates in baseball, who were conducting public agitation against betting on baseball games.

Behind An Electric Fan.

A north side real estate firm which had sent an imperatively worded request for two months rent due on an apartment, received this postal card reply:

"Ah, just hold your horses awhile. If you had to do physical work in this hot weather like me, you would not sit down when you came home and look over all your papers to see if there was not a little bill to pay somewhere. But behind an electric fan, it is fun to bone somebody."

The others all had fled;
The pavement curled beneath my feet,
The sun blazed overhead.

Which advertised "cold air,"
And felt, despite the torrid glow,
Quite chilly standing there. H. M. S.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 16.—[Special.]—President Veeck of the Cubs and William Wrigley came here today to see just what was the matter with the boys, and saw them knock the Brooklyn champions flat twice, after which they decided nothing was the matter. Playing as snappy ball as any team would dare to, Evers and his crew grabbed the first, 6 to 2, and the second after quite a tussle, 9 to 6.

G. ALEXANDER.

During the double combat the Cubs got some of those things called "breaks," the same things that have been going against them in recent contests. But it was a clean and alert defense and a vicious attack on both occasions that brought victory. They poled a dozen blows in the first battle and fifteen in the second. They were on their toes and high spirited.

Crowd's Jeers Turn to Cheers.

A crowd of at least 18,000 Brooklyn fans was on hand jeering Evers and his players early in the afternoon. By the middle of the second game they were jeering Brooklyn.

Alexander made it rather easy for the boys to breeze home in the opener. The big fellow was superb. He allowed only five hits and walked only two men. Three of the hits and one of the walks were bunched in the sixth round with the only error made on the Chicago side, and the two Brooklyn runs resulted. At no other time during the game was Aleck in the slightest danger. It made one think of old times.

Sherrod Smith started against Aleck, but the Cubs knocked him out in the fourth. They bunched four blows with an error in the second for a cluster of four runs and that was the ball game.

Cubs Rout Ferdie Schupp.

Clarence Mitchell came on in the fourth and stuck to the finish, but it wasn't pleasant. His bad support gave the Cubs a run in the fifth and they knocked home a clean one in the ninth for good measure.

Oscar Cheeves took the hurling assignment in the second game, opposed by Ferdie Schupp, but neither was able to stand the firing. Schupp stood it three rounds and the Cubs pounded in four tallies, all earned.

In the fourth Burleigh Grimes took up the burden, but the Cubs had no respect for him, even if he is a star. They walloped in one run immediately, but in the last of the fourth the champs landed on Cheeves, driving him to cover. Freeman rushed to the rescue, but before he could restore order the champs were one run in the lead.

Cubs Clout Way to Victory.

It looked as if luck had turned, but the Cubs never lost their spirit and poled in a pair of runs in the fifth with the help of one error. This put them one to the good, and that was all needed, for Mr. Freeman blanked the Robins to the finish without even getting distressed.

In the seventh the Cubs clinched the thing when four clean blows drove in another pair of tallies. Grimes gave way to a pinch hitter in the eighth and Smith finished the slabbing.

BOLDEN OF I. A. C. SECOND IN MILE SWIM TO LANGER

Philadelphia, Pa., July 16.—Ludy Langer of Honolulu won the national one mile senior championship swim held on a 220 yard course on the Schuylkill river today. His time was 24:13. He finished ten yards ahead of Eugene Bolden of Illinois Athletic club, whose time was 24:18 2-5. Carl Urban of Philadelphia was third. Urban, although 190 yards behind Bolden, was well in advance of the rest of the finishers.

Langer and Bolden led the other competitors from the start. Langer's time, while a new record for Philadelphia and the middle Atlantic states, was 45 seconds slower than the world's open water record.

Eleanor Uhl of the Meadowbrook club won the 100 yard scratch race for women from Frances Clarke of Philadelphia. Helen Hillegrass of Philadelphia was third. Miss Clarke led until within ten yards of the finish. The winner's time was 1:15 4-5.

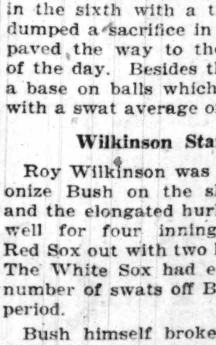
BY I. E. SANBORN.

Punk baseball behind mediocre pitching for the White Sox gave the Red Sox an easy victory yesterday in the first game of their congested set, the score being 10 to 0.



JOHN COLLINS.

The Gleasons were able to acquire only five hits off the ancient delivery of Joe Bush while the Duffites whaled two of Gleason's wild men for fifteen safeties and were helped out by large clusters of bases on balls and errors by the home folks.

John Collins, alias Shauno, was the most proficient factor in the defeat of his former pals. He laced out a three bagger which scored the first tally in the fifth, brought home two more runs in the sixth with a timely single and dumped a sacrifice in the ninth which paved the way to the final two runs of the day. Besides that Shauno drew a base on balls which let him emerge with a swat average of 500 for the day.

Wilkinson Starts Well.

Roy Wilkinson was picked to antagonize Bush on the slab at the start and the elongated hurler got by pretty well for four innings, shutting the Red Sox out with two hits and no runs The White Sox had exactly the same number of swats off Bush in the same period.

Bush himself broke the ice in the fifth by leading off with a single which led to a two run tally. Leibold sacrificed. Foster flied out, then John Collins pasted a triple over Mostil's head for the first run. McInnes scored Shauno with a single. Eddie Collins missed a chance for a double play in the sixth and enabled the vistors to register another pair of runs on two singles and a pass.

Four More Boston Runs.

Wilkinson's finish came in the seventh when the enemy ganged on him for five singles and a base on balls which counted four times in the run column with the aid of a long throw home by Strunk which hopped over Schalk's head on the bound.

Wilkinson gave way to a pinch hitter after that disaster and let Cy Twombly, the Massachusetts rookie, finish the battle. He was wild and gave three passes in the last two rounds. Two of them got mixed up with a couple of Red Sox singles for the final pair of tallies in the ninth.

The White Sox had two chances to escape a whitewash. The first opportunity was wrecked by a sterling pinch by Nemo Leibold, once a pal of the home folks. Sheely led in the fifth with a double and Schalk peeled off what looked like a safe one to right center. Leibold went tearing in and made a shoe string catch of it, then doubled up Sheely off second.

Falk Stubs His Toe.

The home Sox would have registered one run in the seventh but for a laughable stunt by Falk. He reached first on a muff by John Collins with one down. Mostil followed with a wallop to right which would have netted him three bases, but Falk stubbed his toe after passing third base, fell flat and had to scramble back to third to save his life. That made Mostil back up to second base. Sheely walked, Schalk forced Falk at the plate and Yaryan popped out for Wilkinson. That is how the shutout happened.

The Inquiring Reporter

Every Day He Asks Five Persons, Picked at Random, a Question.

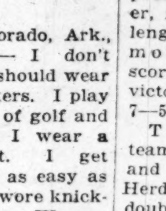
The Question.

Do you think women golfers should adopt knickerbockers as a playing costume?

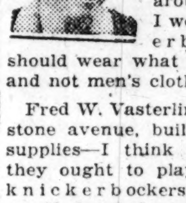
Where Asked.

Monroe street and Michigan avenue.

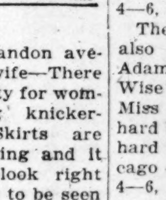
The Answers.



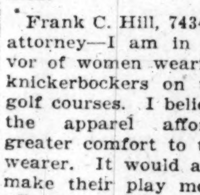
Harry C. Danning, 2222 North Crawford avenue, manufacturer — Personally I don't care what they wear. If knickerbockers are more comfortable and they can play better, they should have them. Women should have the same freedom as men in selecting what they wear.



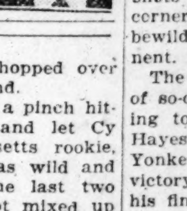
Mrs. D. M. Yocum, Eldorado, Ark., housewife — I don't think they should wear knickerbockers. I play a good deal of golf and tennis and I wear a short skirt. I get around just as easy as I would if I wore knickerbockers. Women should wear what is made for women and not men's clothes.



Fred W. Vasterling, 2106 North Keystone avenue, building supplies—I think that they ought to play in knickerbockers. It would help them get around better and would help their game. I think that a woman's skirts would interfere with their driving.



Mrs. F. C. Hill, 7434 Crandon avenue, housewife—There is no necessity for women wearing knickerbockers. Skirts are more becoming and it would not look right for a woman to be seen in "knicks." Women's costumes are extreme enough without trying to dress like men.



Frank C. Hill, 7434 Crandon avenue, attorney—I am in favor of women wearing knickerbockers on the golf courses. I believe the apparel affords greater comfort to the wearer. It would also make their play more efficient.

RICHARDS WINS RIGHT TO MEET HAYES FOR TITLE

Indianapolis, Ind., July 16.—Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., defeated John Hennessey of Indianapolis, in the final round of the western tennis championship here this afternoon and thereby won the right to play Walter T. Hayes of Chicago, present titleholder, in the challenge round tomorrow. The score of Richards' victory today was 7—5, 6—3, 6—3.

WALTER HAYES.

The Chicago team of Hayes and Clifton B. Herd advanced to the final round in doubles by defeating Richards and John McKay, local veteran, after dropping the first two sets, 3—6, 4—6, 6—2, 6—3, 6—4. The other half of the final bracket is occupied by Lucien Williams of Chicago and Fritz Bastian, Indianapolis.

Williams and Bastian Win.

Williams and Bastian won a brilliant victory over the crack Indianapolis doubles team, Hennessey and Ralph Burdick, taking the necessary three sets after losing the initial encounter, 4—6, 6—4, 6—2, 6—1.

The semi-finals of women's singles also were played with Mrs. H. F. Adams of this city and Miss Ruth Wise of Cleveland emerging victors. Miss Wise was given a particularly hard battle by Miss Marion Leighton, a hard driving and hard volleying Chicago girl, before the latter succumbed, 4—6, 6—4, 6—4.

Richards Shows Speed.

Richards' match against Hennessey was the finest of the tournament. Richards' experience against stars of national prominence gave him poise which served as the winning edge on the brilliant, but at times inconsistent game of the local idol. After taking the first set by defensive play, in which he clearly convinced Hennessey that his slashing attack would not bring victory, Richards opened up overhead fireworks, smashing volley shots and lobs with ease from any corner of the court, in a fashion which bewildered his less experienced opponent.

The dope, as cast by the young army of so-called experts, who are attempting to calculate the outcome of the Hayes-Richards combat, favors the Yonkers flash by virtue of his 1920 victory over the Chicago veteran, and his fine display today. Summaries:

BY JOE DAVIS.

Defeating Rudy Knepper of Sioux City, the Iowa champion, 3 and 2, in thirty-six hole final at the Westmoreland Country club, Chick Evans of Edgewater retained the western amateur golf championship, which he won last year, 1 up, at Memphis, from the redoubtable Bobby Jones.

R. E. KNEPPER.

It is the sixth time Chick has won the George R. Thorne trophy. Also it will be the last, as Evans announced during the prize presentations that six wins were too many for one player.

Yesterday's final virtually was the chip shot against the long putt.

Finds Greens Regularly.

Chick, long famed for his iron shots, hit the green targets with great regularity, while the Iowa boy lacked this precision, and was in a defensive position most of the route.

Catching Chick a little off in the outgoing round in the morning, Knepper was able to turn 1 up, but so sound was Evans' play on the incoming nine that Knepper had no chance to win a hole by normal play, and he was unable to perform any miracles.

Tough Job for Loser.

It was a tough task for the young contender, and simply indicates the difference in the play of a man who has reached the pinnacle in amateur golf and one who has not arrived, but is climbing fast.

Knepper had played through the Iowa championship the previous week and was tired, while Chick, who had a good rest after his play in Great Britain, grew stronger as the tournament progressed.

The intersectional character of the match attracted a crowd of 2,000, many of whom saw the contest on the skip-stop plan—skipping a hole and making for the next green.

Knepper Finds the Rough.

Whatever slim chance Knepper may have had was dissipated by a slump in the early stages of the afternoon, when several of his tee shots lodged in the rough. Shooting the first six holes in five strokes over par he lost four of them, and Evans, who turned 2 up in the morning, had the match sewed up with a lead of six holes.

Knepper, who had not won a hole since the eighth in the morning, finally broke the monotony by taking the ninth hole, so that at the twenty-seventh he was 5 down.

Iowan Wins Three Holes.

He fought on gamely and won three of the remaining holes, Chick taking one. This merely delayed the finish, a half in four, giving Evans the match the sixteenth green.

There was some good play in the finals for the President's cup, in which Joe McDonald of Calumet defeated Rial Rolfe of Ridgemoor, 6 and 5, shooting 75 in the morning and being 2 up he reached the turn in 38 in the afternoon and was 5 up.

George Hackl of Lincoln park, the Cook county champion, won the Vice President's trophy from T. R. Montgomery, 2 up, the loser getting into the shrubbery at the home hole.

Quality of Golf High.

The finals marked the finish of one of the best tournaments in the history of the Western Golf association, the quality of the play being remarkably high, while through the six days of play only a few drops of rain fell. Yesterday a breeze from the east tempered the heat and a gray sky made it easy to follow the shots.

The big gallery was handled in fine shape by a big squad of Westmoreland members and through the week the club displayed its usual hospitality. The course, too, was in excellent shape.

Following is the yardage:

Out 341 484 347 205 331 525 415 150 444
In 320 391 453 361 177 350 310 440 460

Neither Makes Long Putts.

Knepper missed his second shot at the first hole, the result being a 5, while Chick won with a par 4. Chick's lead was dissipated at the second hole, where a short approach left him a twelve foot putt, which he missed. It was a notable feature of the play that neither man was able to get down a long putt.

For the next five holes each played par golf. At the short eighth, both were trapped and Knepper, getting the better out, won 3 to 5, by holding a six foot putt.

Chick, whose drives most of the time were straight down the alley, pulled close to a tree at the ninth hole and could not try for the green. He played short, leaving Rudy an opening, but he sliced his second shot to the tenth tee and Chick was able to notch a half in 5.

Evans Makes an Eagle.

It was at this point that the tough sledding for Knepper began. Chick reached the tenth green in 2, and, holing a ten foot putt, won with an eagle three. Match all square.

Chick had the better of the play through the green to the eleventh hole, but took 3 putts, enabling Knepper to half in 5. The twelfth hole put Evans in the lead. Knepper's long midiron shot for the green went to a sand trap on the right, and although he made a good recovery he missed a side hill putt of six feet and Chick nailed the hole with a par 4.

Knepper was sh[illegible] on his second for the thirteenth ho[illegible] and when he missed a seven foot putt Chick, with a par 4, became 2 up.

Chick Rims His Putt.

Knepper was trapped on his second shot for the fifteenth hole and Chick had a win in sight until he rimmed a four foot putt and got a half in 5.

At the sixteenth hole Knepper drove into the trap guarding the green, as he had done the preceding day. Chick played away short and then skied a pitch to the green, and when Knepper put his second on top of a cop, it looked as if he would slip another hole. Chick rimmed a long putt for a 3, and Knepper, sinking a seven footer, halved in 4.

Shooting from down in the valley Chick made a great second for the eighteenth hole, landing six feet from the cup.

After Rudy had made a long approach, Chick missed his 3 and they went to luncheon with Chick 2 up.

Big Afternoon Gallery.

When the players got away in the afternoon the first fairway was an ellipse surrounded by spectators. The first few holes found Knepper making mistakes on the green and through the fairway. When a player of his caliber goes four strokes over par for six holes he cannot expect to put a crimp in Chick Evans.

This is what happened and by the time the sixth hole had been negotiated Knepper was 6 down and out of the running. At the second hole he thought Chick was one stroke ahead of him and picked up his ball, but Chick pointed out the mistake and Rudy, by making a fairly long putt, got a half in 5.

From the fifth tee Knepper drove to a bad lie in the rough and his powerful punch failed to get the ball home. Chick was home in two and down with the two regulation putts.

Chick won the sixth hole, 5 to 6, and the next two were halved in par figures.

Ninth Hole Knepper's.

Knepper won the ninth hole, reaching the green on his second, while Chick overran the green to the left and failed to put enough steam into his approach putt. This left him with a seven footer and he blew it.

With the score standing 5 up at the twelfth hole, Knepper, after halving the thirteenth in fours, won the short fourteenth, 3 to 4, Chick accidentally moving his ball after making his first putt. He conceded the hole, leaving him dormie three.

Knepper, as in the morning, again whaled out a long drive from the sixteenth tee and again found the trap guarding the green. Chick played short and once more his high pitch gave him a holeable putt, but he missed and Knepper got a half in 4, ending the match.

Knepper got better distance than Evans, but his shots were not nearly as well placed.

BRITONS DEFEAT AMERICAN STARS AT GOLF BY 4 UP

Long Branch, N. J., July 16.—[Special.]—After riding most of the night in an automobile, in which they were being carried from the Shawnee open tournament to the Norwood Golf club, George Duncan, former British open champion, and his brilliant partner, Abe Mitchell, today defeated Jock Hutchison of Chicago and James Donaldson, the home club professional, in a thirty-six hole best ball match, 4 up.

The British pair gained their advantage in the morning, and although the Americans cut the lead down by winning two holes in the afternoon, the invaders came back at the seventeenth and eighteenth holes, taking the last with a pair of birdie 3s.

Makes Drive of 324 Yards.

Followers of the match, reticent to believe the stories that have been told of Mitchell's wonderful driving power, are now ready to accept as gospel truth any and all claims that may be made in behalf of the English star. Throughout the entire journey here today Mitchell was nearly always out in front, and at the eleventh hole in the afternoon round the siege gun carried the green from the tee, a distance of 324 yards. Most of his drives carried 300 yards.

Hutchison was the winner of the $100 purse offered for the lowest score made in the afternoon round. The holder of the British title was out in 35 and home in 36 for a 71, which eclipsed the best mark of the British pair by three strokes.

Mitchell Best in Morning.

Mitchell had the best score in the morning round, with a 71, followed by Duncan with 72. Hutchison shot a 76 and Donaldson a 77. In the afternoon Hutchison led with his 71, Duncan came next with 74, and Mitchell and Donaldson had a 75 and a 77, respectively.

BROMFIELD HOLDS GOLF TITLE.

Denver, Colo., July 16.—Dr. Lawrence Bromfield of Denver retained his title as golf champion of Colorado today when he defeated N. C. Morris of Denver in the final match of the championship tournament. Bromfield won, 6 up and 5 to play.

U. S. G. A. REFUSES 36 HOLE REQUEST FOR GOLF EVENT

New York, July 16.—The request of the Professional Golfers' association for a thirty-six hole instead of an eighteen hole qualifying round for the national open championship has been refused by the United States Golf association.

W. D. Vanderpool, secretary of the association, said today that the change requested by the professionals would necessitate a complete revision of the program. The tournament will open Tuesday at the Columbia Country club, Washington, D. C.

Miss Leitch to Sail for U. S. Tourneys in August

LONDON, July 16.—Miss Cecil Leitch, woman golf champion of Great Britain and France, with her sister, Edith, who also is a first class player, and Miss Doris E. Chambers, will sail for the United States in August for a golfing tour. They will play first in the Canadian championships and then at Deal, N. J. They then expect to tour the states, playing in any good open championships and hope to visit Atlanta, Ga., because it is the home of Miss Alexa Stirling.

HARDING TO GIVE PRIZE TO WINNER IN NATIONAL OPEN

Washington, D. C., July 16.—President Warren Harding probably will present the cup to the winner of the national open golf tournament which starts at the Columbia Country club on Tuesday. The President also is arranging to follow the play of the contestants on the final day of the tournament.

PRESIDENT HARDING.

Entrants in this tournament were arriving on all trains today. A number of professionals worked out on the course, and pronounced it "exceptionally fast."

Showers Help Course.

The heavy thunder showers of yesterday has put the finishing touches to the links, Dr. Walter Harban of the greens committee said.

Practically all the well known stars are expected not later than Sunday night. Abe Mitchell and George Duncan, the British cracks, are scheduled to arrive tomorrow. Jock Hutchinson of Chicago, who won the British open honors at St. Andrews, also is expected then.

Novak Sets Course Record.

Late yesterday Joe Novak, the Spokane professional, and John Dowling of Scarsdale, established a new record for the course by negotiating it in 71.

The Columbia course is regarded as one of the most difficult in the country.

AU REVOIR!

GEORGES CARPENTIER.

It was said Jack Dempsey knocked the smile off the French champion's face during their quarrel at Jersey City on July 2. Manager Deschamps or some one of the battler's friends must have picked it up again, for here we see it in all its pleasantness as Georges bids good-by to America until September. Carpentier left New York on La Savoie July 14.

Notes

BOSTON again today.

The rooters had a glad hand for both John Collins and Leibold each time they came to bat, and cheered Shauno for his timely hitting.

There was not a strikeout registered until the eighth round. Then Twombly whiffed Pittenger, who had made three hits off Wilkinson. Bush responded by striking out Mulligan in the home half of the eighth.

Seven bases on balls would lick almost any team, without the fifteen hits the Red Sox made.

Bush did a lot more than shut out the White Sox, for he made two hits and scored three runs.

Ruel was robbed of a hit by luck in the seventh. His hard rap squirted off Mulligan's mitt, but went straight at Johnson, who handled it in time to throw out the runner at first.

Notes

BROOKLYN, N. Y., July 16.—[Special.]—Three more games in three days is the booking of the Cubs here.

George Tyler may serve the champs with his slow curves tomorrow.

The crowd was the biggest the Cubs have played to on the trip, fully 18,000 being on hand.

Tommy Daly was the clouting hero of the day with three doubles and a single in the second game. He drove in four runs.

President Veeck had a long conference with Manager Evers, learning all about the defeats. After the double header today no conferences were needed.

Beloit, Wis., July 16.—Fairbanks-Morse club retained top place in the Midwest league championship race by winning an eleven inning see-saw battle from the Marquette Manors of Chicago, 6 to 5. Zabel was touched for fourteen hits by the Manors, but tightened several times in pinches and lasted it out for a victory. Score:

TENNIS VOLLEYS

BY GEORGE SHAFFER.

CONTRACTS for the Davis cup grandstand at the Onwentsia club were let yesterday, and work will be started soon on the erection of the stands, boxes and unreserved bleachers, which will provide accommodations for over 4,000 fans of international sport when the semi-finalist contenders — probably France and Japan—meet at Lake Forest Aug. 11.

Field Secretary John C. Neely of the Western Tennis association has opened offices at 1506 Mallers building, and the seat sale for the big matches will begin tomorrow.

In order to raise funds for sending the promising youngster players of this city to the national boys' and junior championships at Boston Aug. 22, local clubs will next Sunday inaugurate a series of special doubles tournaments. The local boys, for whose fares the tourney is intended to pay, are George Lott, Ellsworth Reichenbach and Walter Goodwillie.

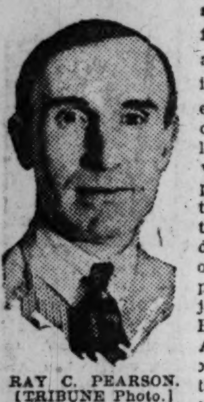
THEY CAN STOP RACING BUT THEY CAN'T STOP FANS

BY RAY PEARSON.



RAY C. PEARSON. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

A visit to Gotham suggests any number of subjects for a fellow in this scribbling "perfesh" to write about. The boxing game interests us most, because that's our line, but we'll devote the greater part of this yarn to telling about those wonderful days the followers of the ponies are permitted to enjoy at Jamaica, Belmont Park Aqueduct, and other ovals where the steaming thoroughbreds gallop.

We might tell something about how it feels to be a Chicagoan who is visiting in New York or thereabouts. We were enabled to make such a visit because ordered there to write about the world's championship battle between Jack Dempsey and Georges Carpentier.

Had it not been for Carpentier and his manager, François Deschamps, this yarn about the sport of kings never would have been penned, but the Frenchmen decided to make the camp at Manhasset a closed shop except on a couple of days each week during the training period. Therefore we had to seek some other way of killing time, and the business of making a selection wasn't at all difficult when we heard the newsboys shouting on the corners of Broadway: "Get your racing entries and selections!"

Another Lonesome Turf Fan.

The next stop found us hopping into beautiful Belmont Park, and soon we were sitting up in the huge grandstand watching the nags whirl around the big track. Next to me I discovered a fellow who seemed lonesome even in that wonderful spot with all its thrills. He didn't have the look of a loser, but just seemed to be thinking and thinking deeply. I turned to him, and, being from Chicago, my attitude smacked of friendliness. Not being able to slip a tip, I said:

"This surely is a beautiful racetrack, don't you think so?"

He looked at me for a moment in a thoughtful way, and then, not being a New Yorker, he answered. This is what he said:

"Yes, it is simply wonderful. Just look at those horses speed over that track, gaze on all the people, and just think how nice it is to be able to pick a nag to win and have a few beans riding. A fellow wouldn't care, even if he lost his swag, sitting here and watching this great sport."

A Race Starved Chicagoan.

Then my neighbor halted his conversation for a minute, then continued, and I quickly learned that he, too, was a Chicagoan, for he said:

"Do you know that, with all the joy of sitting here watching these races, I haven't been perfectly happy, as I should be? Seems that, as I find myself in this great throng and with this great sport to gaze upon, I can't help but think how my own town of Chicago hasn't anything like it. Here in New York there is racing all summer long, with several tracks operating. But in Chicago—O, well, you come from there, too, so you know. I'd be having a great time right now if I couldn't think of what we're missing at home."

We are in perfect accord on these views.

Even Boxing Isn't Illegal!

Then another night we wandered away from the hotel fireside and, aided by a newspaper and a subway train, landed away out at 167th street and Westchester avenue, the Bronx. In big letters on a huge fence surrounding a baseball park we read: "Boxingdrome. Boxing Bouts Tonight." We wandered in, and, with something like 20,000 others, saw a program of bouts pulled off in the open air and under arc lights.

It was a wonderful show, and the windup that night saw Champion Joe Lynch knock out his opponent, Sammy Sandow, in fifty-five seconds.

But the Boxingdrome is just one of many clubs which hold boxing shows in New York. They are held because in the state of New York the sport with the padded mitts isn't frowned upon, and it has become a legalized business which brings enjoyment to hundreds of thousands of people.

It is wonderful, brother, but when Mr. Chicagoan gets so far away from home and is enjoying himself, he cannot help but think how tough it is that "home, sweet home," isn't as sweet as it might be.

TEST CASE ON WINDSOR RACE BETS.

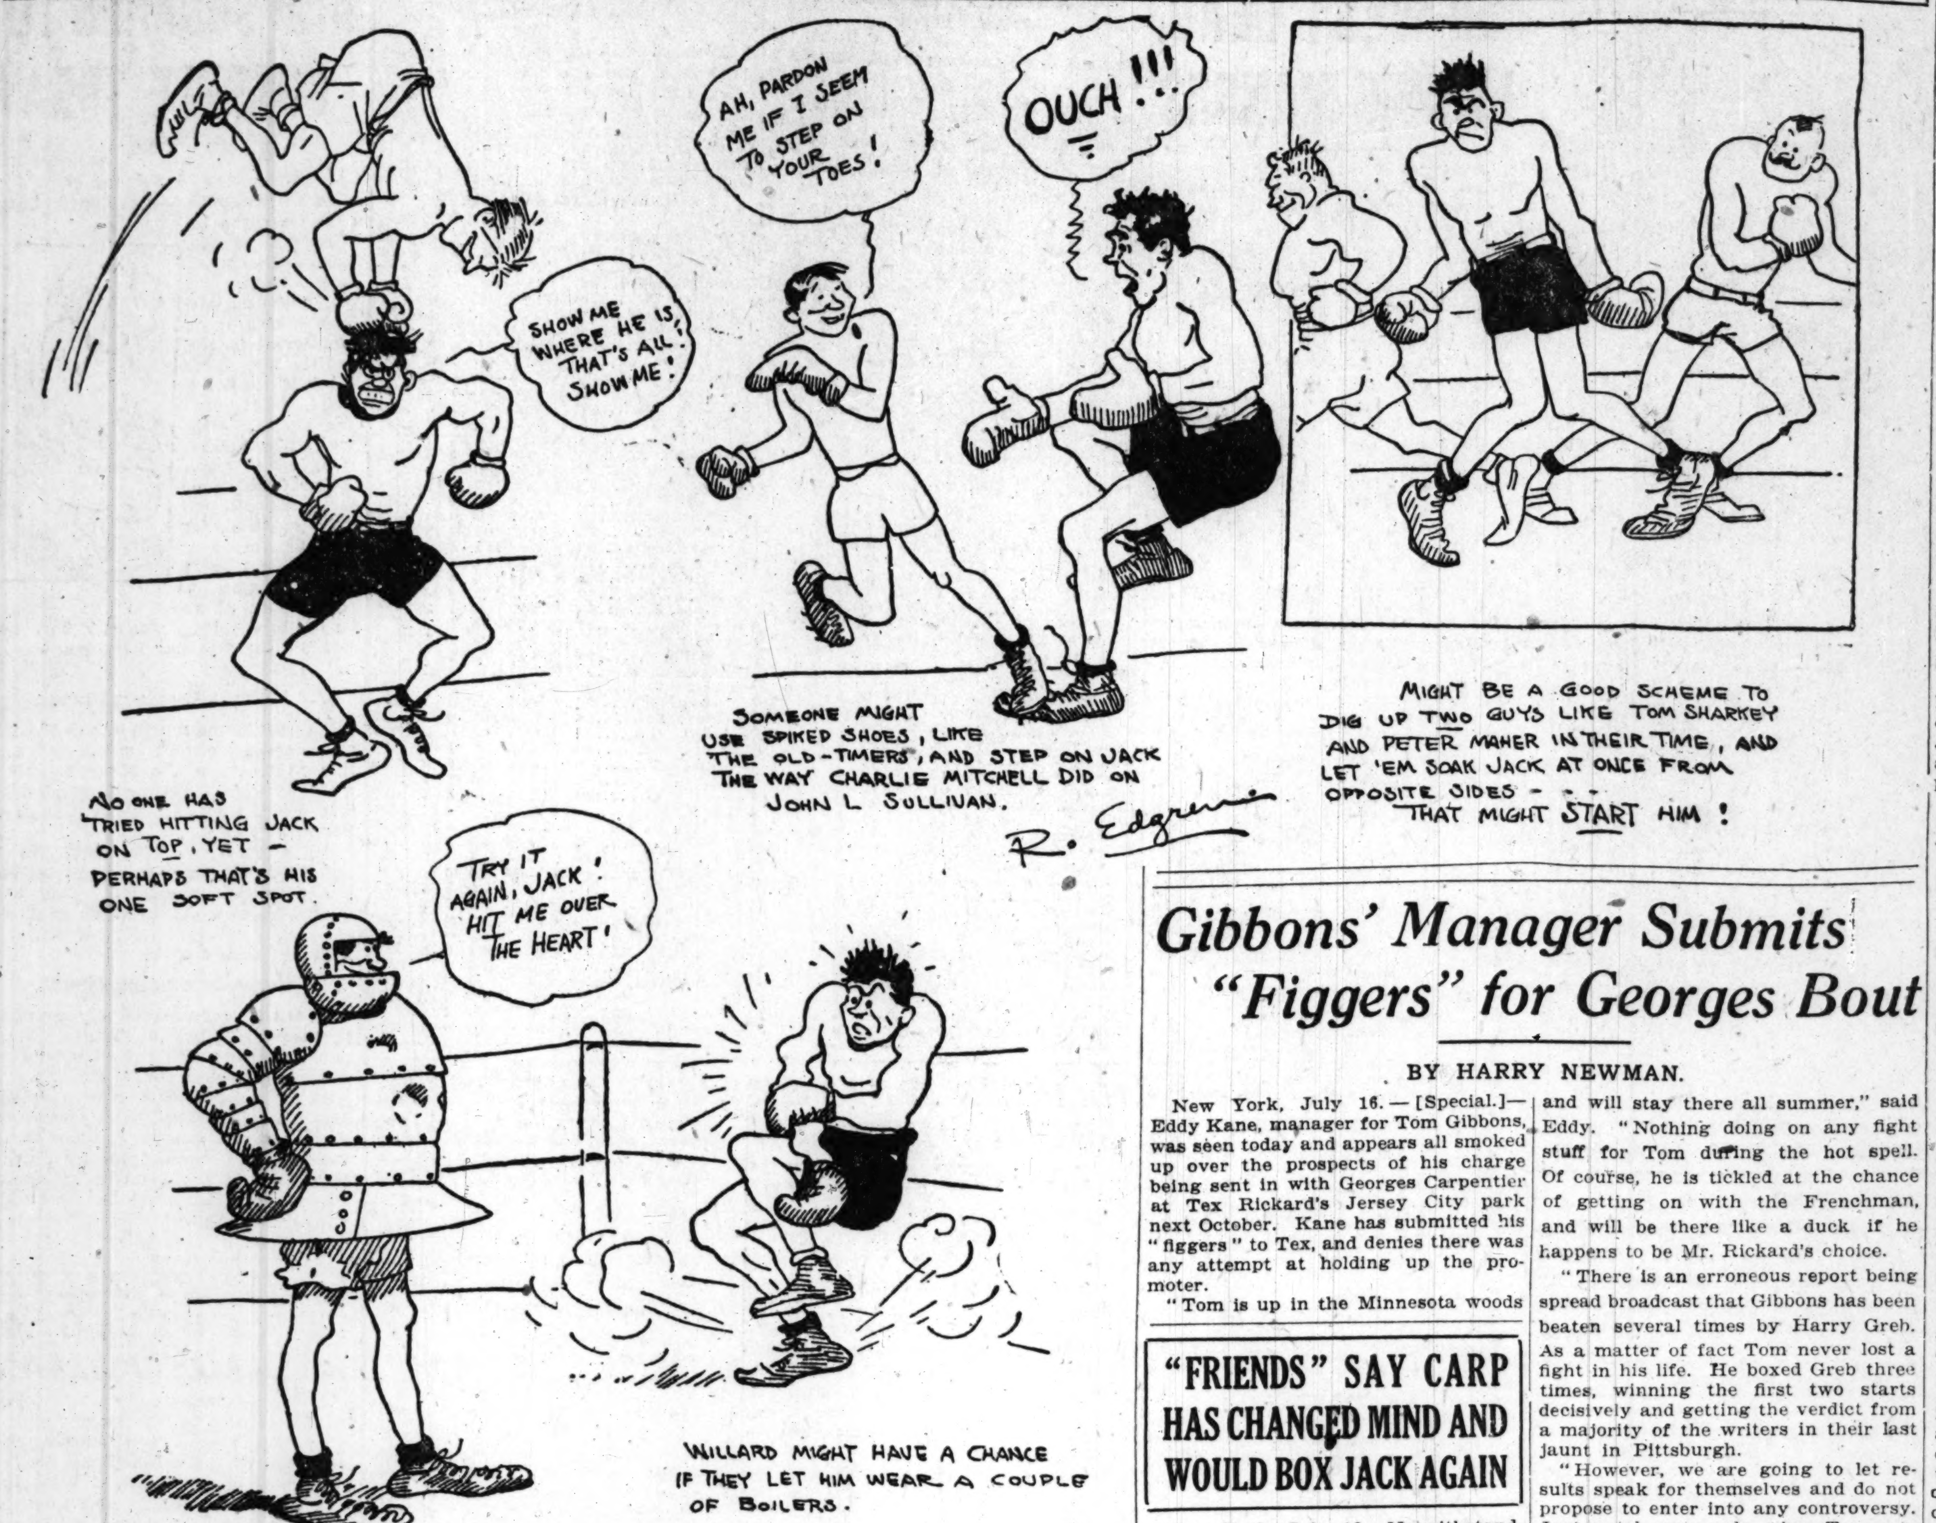
THEY'LL HAVE TO FIND SOMETHING NEW TO BEAT DEMPSEY



AH, PARDON ME IF I SEEM TO STEP ON YOUR TOES!
OUCH!!!
SHOW ME WHERE HE IS, THAT'S ALL! SHOW ME!
SOMEONE MIGHT USE SPIKED SHOES, LIKE THE OLD-TIMERS, AND STEP ON JACK THE WAY CHARLIE MITCHELL DID ON JOHN L SULLIVAN.
MIGHT BE A GOOD SCHEME TO DIG UP TWO GUYS LIKE TOM SHARKEY AND PETER MAHER IN THEIR TIME, AND LET 'EM SOAK JACK AT ONCE FROM OPPOSITE SIDES - - - THAT MIGHT START HIM!
NO ONE HAS TRIED HITTING JACK ON TOP, YET - PERHAPS THAT'S HIS ONE SOFT SPOT.
R. Edgren
TRY IT AGAIN, JACK! HIT ME OVER THE HEART!
WILLARD MIGHT HAVE A CHANCE IF THEY LET HIM WEAR A COUPLE OF BOILERS.

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

UNDER the old London prize ring conditions there might have been some chance of finding a man to down Jack Dempsey. Not that Jack would cut such a poor figure with the "raw 'uns," but so many things can happen where there's no electric lighted, padded floor, wrapped rope modern ring and soft padded gloves.

Reminds me of the time when Jim Jeffries was in his prime, and along came a persistent dusky challenger, as he stood in a café in San Francisco, and respectfully asked for a match.

"Nothing doing," said Jeff, "but I'll give you this chance if you want it. I'll put $10,000 in gold right here behind the bar with Tom Corbett. You and I go down into the cellar and lock the door. If you come out you get the $10,000. If I come out I'll pay your hospital expenses."

"Misto Jeffries," said the challenger, "Ah ain't no cellar fighter. When I fights I wants a ring and a referee, and a lot of lights."

Spiked Shoe Days.

Now apply a little of the London prize ring stuff to Jack Dempsey. There was little Charlie Mitchell of England. Mitchell fought John L. Sullivan at Chantilly, France, to a long draw. They fought in the mud. Rain poured down. The going was very slippery, and Sullivan, the big man, finally gave up trying to catch Mitchell and turned to face him as best he could, while the little man danced around and pecked away.

It was customary to wear spiked shoes to prevent slipping when fighting on turf. Mitchell raked Sullivan's shins and stepped on his feet with the spikes, which may have had something to do with the drawn battle. Probably Sullivan would have stepped on Mitchell, but he was too heavy and slow for that. His feet were planted in the mud.

Could Jack Fight in Mud?

Jack Dempsey fought Carpentier in a good dry ring with a two inch plank floor supported on iron trusses. There was an inch of felt on the floor, a canvas stretched tightly over that, and powdered resin stamped into the canvas to prevent slipping. But suppose heavy Jack had fought in mud and the light footed Carpentier had worn spiked shoes. Might have made some difference. Beside the old London prize ring game modern boxing is a tea party.

When Gene Corri, the famous English referee, came to America to see the July 2 bout he wore in his tie a figure of a boxer about an inch and a half long, a perfect portrait in enamel, diamond studded at the belt.

"That's Sayers," explained Mr. Corri. "Very old piece, that. Very great fighter, Sayers. A little bit of a chap besides your Dempsey and these modern champions. Weighed about ten stone four (144 pounds) when he fought your "Benicia Boy" Heenan a draw battle for the world's championship."

Example for Fans.

There was an example of what a small man could do under the old "cross-buttock and fall on 'em" rules. Heenan was over 6 feet tall, a Jack Dempsey in build and fighting spirit, and champion of America. Tom Sayers was champion of England and a tremendous favorite because of his great skill. He had beaten all opponents by opposing speed and science to bulk and strength.

The fight stirred up a tremendous interest in America—so much that Harper's Weekly sent over a cartoonist and a writer to cover it—a brand new idea in those days and the forerunner of the scene in Jersey City when over 600 writers sat at the ringside pounding out stories about the Dempsey-Carpentier contest.

Sayers was about in, according to old accounts, when his admirers broke up the ring and stopped the fight, making it a "draw." But the same thing happened in America when Carney of England came here to fight Jack McAuliffe for the lightweight title. McAuliffe's friends pulled up the ring stakes when McAuliffe was about done for. So that's that.

"Small" Ones Good.

The fact remains that Sayers, and Mitchell, and Jem Mace, the English gypsy, champions in London prize ring times, and some other men of middle size, did very well against the "big 'uns." And a Greb or a Carpentier might fight a Dempsey on even terms with bare fists and in rough going.

In boxing with gloves, especially big eight ounce gloves, size counts. The heavy man doesn't feel the weight of the gloves, and he can hit a thumping punch even with his fist in a pillow.

As for the man who is finally going to tap Dempsey where it will do the most good, from the way Jack handles himself now when in trouble, it looks as if something new will have to be done to find his "soft spot," if he has any. It isn't his chin, or his stomach. It may be somewhere about his head. I remember a fighter hit on top of the head as he ducked, and knocked him for a goal. After that every one was tipped off about that vulnerable spot and a clean string of "K. by" marked on his record.

Gibbons' Manager Submits "Figgers" for Georges Bout

BY HARRY NEWMAN.

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Eddy Kane, manager for Tom Gibbons, was seen today and appears all smoked up over the prospects of his charge being sent in with Georges Carpentier at Tex Rickard's Jersey City park next October. Kane has submitted his "figgers" to Tex, and denies there was any attempt at holding up the promoter.

"Tom is up in the Minnesota woods and will stay there all summer," said Eddy. "Nothing doing on any fight stuff for Tom during the hot spell. Of course, he is tickled at the chance of getting on with the Frenchman, and will be there like a duck if he happens to be Mr. Rickard's choice.

"There is an erroneous report being spread broadcast that Gibbons has been beaten several times by Harry Greb. As a matter of fact Tom never lost a fight in his life. He boxed Greb three times, winning the first two starts decisively and getting the verdict from a majority of the writers in their last jaunt in Pittsburgh.

"However, we are going to let results speak for themselves and do not propose to enter into any controversy. Just watch our smoke when Tom gets started against the Frenchman."

Tex Rickard skipped the town today to spend the week-end at Spring Lake. The big promoter will doubtless close all arrangements for the Carpentier match early next week.

"FRIENDS" SAY CARP HAS CHANGED MIND AND WOULD BOX JACK AGAIN

New York, July 16.—Notwithstanding defeat by Jack Dempsey in Jersey Cit, on July 2, it is reported in boxing circles here that Georges Carpentier will seek a return match, believing that by adopting an open style of battle he may be able to win.

In a statement made at his training camp after the Jersey City match Carpentier said he would fight any man in the world excepting Dempsey, but friends now say that he has changed his mind, and the French idol is on the high seas and cannot talk for himself.

Georges, friends say, disobeyed the orders of his advisers and forced the fight with the champion, and therein made his biggest mistake.

Should Georges again be matched with Dempsey and the bout held in New York state, where the boxing rules permit 15 rounds to a decision, he might win the championship by outpointing Dempsey. Carpentier's friends believe that he is clever enough to box Dempsey and stay away for 15 rounds.

Burman Must Show Class to Defeat Gotham Midget

BY WALTER ECKERSALL.

YOUNG MONTREAL. [TRIBUNE Photo.]

Interest of local boxing fans this week will center around the double windup of the boxing show to be conducted by the Twin Cities A. C. of East Chicago Friday night. The feature bouts will bring together Joe Burman of Chicago, and Midget Smith of New York, in one clash, and Young Montreal of Providence, and Jack Sharkey of New York, in another.

That Burman will have to be at his best to win from the New Yorker, is shown by the opinions of ring critics in the east, who refer to Smith as a second Terry McGovern. In all his fights, Midget has shown an eagerness to tear in from the first tap, and keep his arms pumping like piston rods.

Burman has never met Smith and knows little about the easterner's style of attack or defense. For this reason Joe has settled down to train in such a manner that he should be in the pink by Friday. The local boxer does not intend to take any chances.

While many look with favor upon this bout, close followers of boxing are eyeing the Montreal-Sharkey mill with intense interest. The Providence boxer has defeated Joe Lynch, bantamweight champion, and Pete Herman, former titleholder, decisively in no decision contests, and is expected to repeat against Sharkey.

Even Matchmaker Dick Curley prefers this bout to the one between Burman and Smith. He has seen both men in action and says the unexpected may happen at any time. As soon as the fighters and managers settle down to training, a conference will be held to determine which contest will get the place of honor as the windup of the card.

The principals will begin to arrive tomorrow and will be seen in action at local gymnasiums in the afternoon. Burman and Sharkey will train at the Arcade, while plans of Smith and Montreal are not known. Bud Christiano, who will trade punches with Red Dolan of New Orleans in one of the ten round preliminaries, will work at the Arcade, while Dolan will do his work at the Forbes-Ferretti gymnasium. Tickets are on sale at 129 North Dearborn street and 153 North Clark street. Promoter Harry Hyams will place 4,000 seats on sale at $3 each on the afternoon of the day of the show.

Woods and Waters by LARRY ST. JOHN

WHAT DO YOU KNOW ABOUT EELS?

THE eel does not rank high as a sporting proposition. In the waters of the middle west this fish is generally taken by chance when bait fishing for commoner kinds. It is a fact, however, that when an eel is taken it is considered a great prize, perhaps because of its comparative scarcity, as well as its deserved reputation as a choice food fish.

While few of us ever go eel fishing, all of us have wondered about the habits of this most mysterious of fishes. In fact, the eel has always aroused the curiosity of man, and to this day many of the absurd beliefs of the ancients concerning this fish are still accepted as truth by many uninformed folks.

Said good old Izaak Walton in 1653: "But that eels may be bred, as some kinds of worms and some kinds of bees and wasps are, either of dew or out of the corruption of the earth seems to be made probable by the barnacles and young goslings bred by the sun's heat, and the rotting planks of old ships and hatched of trees."

Don't laugh. The idea of eels breeding from dew and young geese growing on trees—Gerhard showed a picture of a tree bearing geese in his "Herball," printed in 1633—is no more absurd, than many views held by folks nowadays.

It was not until the eighteenth century that the female eel was differentiated, and the male eel remained a mystery until 1873. Incidentally, a male eel never exceeds fifteen inches in length.

Eels are catadromous. That is, they live in fresh water, and go to the sea to spawn, as distinguished from anadromous fishes—salmon, shad, etc.—that ascend to fresh water only to spawn. Just where the spawning of eels takes place was a mystery until last year, when a distinguished Danish scientist, Dr. Johannes Schmidt of Copenhagen, after many years of seeking, discovered the breeding grounds of both the European and American eels.

The center of these grounds for the European species is about 27 degrees north and 60 degrees west, almost in midocean, hundreds of miles east of the Bahamas. The American species breeds a little west and south of this point, but overlapping.

Speaker at Des Plaines Raps Dollar Chasers.

"The world's 'one room and kitchenette' mode of living is disrupting the peace of a nation. It is dealing a fatal blow to the great American home."

Thus spoke the Rev. A. W. Hamilton, pastor of the Wesley Methodist Episcopal church of Chicago, at yesterday morning's session at the Methodist camp meeting at Des Plaines. His subject was "We Need to Think Things Over."

"The principal interest of many modern wives is not to make a home for their husbands and to rear a family, but to create an almighty bank account," the speaker said. "They figure that they prosper more the less time they put in in the kitchen. Their slogan is 'More time away from my family the more money.' It's time to stop and think things over."

Ancestors Influence Religion.

Parents and ancestors influence our religion as they influence us in other ways, according to the Rev. Dr. Hugh Birney at the afternoon session.

"We go to heaven or hell as families," he said. "We ride in a carry-all with all our ancestors. A godly parentage means a godly posterity; an ungodly parentage, an ungodly posterity."

In the evening Bishop T. S. Henderson of Detroit addressed the Norwegian, Danish, and Swedish sections. F. D. Stone, superintendent of the Chicago district of the church, also spoke. He characterized the present series as "the nearest approach to the old time Methodist camp meetings I have seen in years." It was estimated there were 5,000 persons in the grounds last night.

Meeting Closes Today.

The camp meeting closes today and a record attendance is expected.

Bishop Henderson will speak in the afternoon and evening. Dr. R. J. Wade, secretary of the committee on conservation and advance, will speak at the morning session. The Rev. Eugene Antrim, district superintendent of the Springfield, Ill., district, is on the afternoon program. Dr. Birney will deliver the concluding evangelical sermon in the evening.

Two decades ago James Charles Bradley (at left) and his brother, William Eugene, looked like the pictures reveal. James was 12 years old and his brother was 9. Since grown to manhood, James served as an army lieutenant in the war, while William fought as a sailor. Now their aunt, Mrs. Minnie Workman of 27 North Curtis street, who hasn't seen them since the pictures were taken, would like to find them. She believes they are living "somewhere in Chicago."

Fireman Carries Comrade Down Seven Floors

Fire that did damage estimated at $10,000 and threatened to prove serious destroyed the upper floors of a seven story building at 322 West Van Buren street. Harry Nelson, a fireman connected with Fire Patrol No. 1 was working on the seventh floor. A plate glass window collapsed and fragments fell on his arm, severing an artery. Suffering from loss of blood and overcome by the heat he fell to the floor. William O'Donnell of Engine company 32 made his way through the flames and carried his unconscious comrade down the seven floors to safety.

DEAR DADDY NOTE FROM 'BABE' COSTS MAN A DIVORCE

A "Dear Daddy" letter won a divorce for Mrs. Stella Gaskin of the Grace hotel before Judge Harry A. Lewis in Superior court yesterday.

Mrs. Gaskin said George Gaskin deserted her in April, 1919, following her discovery that he had a sweetheart in Flint, Mich., who took him for rides in her automobile and spent money on him.

The letter read: "Dear Daddy: I want you to write to me. You said that you would and I hope that it will be soon. I am getting awfully lonesome for you. You know how I felt when we had to part and I certainly do not feel any better now. I am coming back as soon as I can, that is if you still want me to. Your Babe."

Mrs. Gaskin said the letter was mailed in Flint.

MORE WORRY FOR ALDERMEN ABOUT SECRETARIES' PAY

Law Department Isn't Sure About 1 Week.

The request of thirty-two aldermen for permission to appoint their own secretaries at $1,500 a year struck a snag in the city law department yesterday.

Assistant Corporation Counsel H. C. Foster, to whom City Clerk Igoe's request for authority to certify the thirty-two secretaries on the city pay roll was referred for approval, called attention to the fact that Mr. Igoe's letter is dated July 8, although the aldermen want their secretaries paid from July 1.

Civil Service Rule.

The rule of the civil service commission covering cases in which temporary appointments may be made subject to the commission's aproval is as follows:

"In the case of bona fide emergency, where the appointing officer can show the necessity for immediate appointment, same may be made subject to the approval of tho commission."

In his letter Mr. Igoe merely stated it to be a fact that the secretaries "are necessary to prevent the stoppage of public business."

Igoe Must Produce Reasons.

"In view of the commission's rule, it will probably be necessary for Mr. Igoe to give the reasons for his conclusion that the secretaries are necessary to prevent a stoppage in public business," said Acting Corporation Counsel James W. Breen.

If the law department insists on its view, Mr. Igoe is expected to ask the aldermen to write letters setting forth the necessity for the secretaries. The writing of these letters, city hall insiders declare, will "bring forth every ounce of imagination in the brains of the aldermen."

No action was taken on Mr. Igoe's request yesterday by the civil service commission, which is awaiting Mr. Foster's opinion.

Another White Essex on a Non-Stop Motor Run

Watch for it. Hail the driver and tell him where you want to go. He will take you.

At 6 P. M., July 5th, an Essex touring car painted white with the well-known red arrow was started on a non-stop motor endurance run. It will continue the test until the motor stops from some cause beyond our control. Day and night you will find it wandering around Chicago streets.

CAR PREVIOUSLY DRIVEN 15,973 MILES

The car selected for the test is one taken in trade from George F. Savage, 2638 Gladys Avenue, Chicago. At the start of the run the speedometer showed 15,973 miles.

THE MILEAGE AT NOON, SATURDAY, JULY 16TH, WAS 19,282

The car has been driven continuously for 3,309 miles since July 5th

Each day as the run continues the mileage will be shown in the windows of the Essex dealers whose names are shown at the bottom of this advertisement. Watch for it. Look for the car. Ask the driver to give you a ride. Compare it with other cars you have ridden in. Then judge the value for yourself.

A TEST OF FINE CAR CONSTRUCTION

None but the best of materials and workmanship could stand up under the gruelling of a long continued non-stop run. The Essex in this test is proving its construction. It is proving its right to leadership in the light car field. It is placed on the streets so that all may see its performance under the most trying conditions. Watch for it. Ride in it. Then come in and let us show you the construction which has made possible this test.

Paige Six-66 Is an Easy Car

Easy on Tires and Gasoline—Easy on Driver, Passengers and Pocketbook—$2875

There are cars which will go farther on tires than the Paige Six-66—cars which are too light for endurance and comfort. The Paige Six-66 weighs 3,600 pounds and averages about 12,000 miles on cord tires, which are standard equipment.

In gasoline mileage the Paige Six-66 is a wonder. Not that other cars won't go farther on a gallon, because they will—but not real cars. Power enough to go 75 miles per hour, to beat all cars at hill-climbing, fast or slow—that's the Paige Six-66. Such a car averaging 14 miles to the gallon of gasoline is a rare experience, as you know.

Paige is easy on the driver, because he doesn't have to change gears from the time he starts until he stops and starts over again. You can slow down to 2 or 3 miles an hour with the Paige Six-66 to go around corners or slow up in traffic, and then just step on the throttle to a quick get-away.

Paige Six-66 is easy to steer. The pressure of one finger against the rim of the wheel will handle the car beautifully. And the long wheel base, with sensational road balance, keeps the rear wheels "tracking" on rough roads at high speed. Every experienced driver knows what this means in relaxation.

Passengers in the Paige Six-66 sit rather low, as modern style requires. Body positions are exceptionally restful and relaxing. The 131-inch wheel base, extra long springs and low hung chassis do away with side swaying and jolting.

In the matter of pocketbook ease we suggest that you try to find the equal of the Paige Six-66 at anywhere near its price. Buyers of this car frankly tell us that to be satisfied with any other car they would have to pay $1,000 more than the price of this Paige. Please let us show you the kind of a car Paige offers today at $2,875.

BY AL CHASE.

Do you want to have a comfortable, well constructed bungalow built for you at absolute cost? We thought so, but you'll have to hurry, for there'll only be 100 lucky ones.

There have been several "built at cost" propositions brought forth at various times, but for various reasons they haven't proved a howling success. This, we believe, from careful investigation and personal knowledge of the persons back of it, to be a bona fide, praiseworthy effort on the part of one of Chicago's most conservative contractors, to aid the delayed revival of building.

The story of how the project originated has a human interest angle which is too interesing to leave out, though it may be violating a confidence to print it.

"Fine Idea," Says Dad.

When Frank H. Anderson, a senior at the School of of Commerce of the University of Chicago and editor of "Commerce and Administration," published on the Midway, decided he'd work during vacation, he took it up with his father, D. F. Anderson, of Anderson & Cowie.

"I want to work, but I want to do something constructive and something different," he remarked. "I don't want to plug along at the same old thing."

"Fine idea," said his father. "Go to it."

A few days later he breezed into his father's office.

"Discovered anything unusual, son?" asked dad.

"Sure, let's build one hundred bungalows and sell them at exact cost. It'll start that much building activity and get things lined up for more later on at a low profit."

"Couldn't be done," declared Anderson senior.

Got the Surprise of His Life.

"That's what I really did think till Frank convinced me I was wrong," said Mr. Anderson yesterday.

"Then I took it up with subcontractors, plumbers, furnace men, and others. I got the surprise of my life. Instead of having to urge them to try it, they jumped at it. Plumbers showed me their books and discounts and agreed to do the work at cost. Others did the same.

"The lumber dealers thought it a good scheme. Bankers were enthusiastic over it. They agreed to loan at 6 per cent plus the old prewar commission of 2½ per cent.

"Altogether we figure we can cut the price of a bungalow down 20 per cent and perhaps still farther. I know the hardest thing in the whole proposition is to convince the public we are sincere. It sounds too good to be true to the ordinary citizen. But we figure that it will not only help in the revival of building on a proper basis, but will start a program of volume business so we can later produce buildings of all types at a lower cost due to our increased purchasing power and decreased per unit overhead. Of course, anyone building under this plan will be protected against any declines of the future.

To Cost $2,000 and Up.

"Our proposition is limited to homes costing less than $7,500, but under this plan a fine bungalow can be built for much less. Buildings can be completed for $2,000 and up. In order that the buyer may know the extent of his purchase we will make a contract on a guaranteed price that the total cost will not exceed a certain figure. We'll then give the buyer the benefit of any saving that it is possible to make. Our figures will be open to examination for proof that we carry out this plan.

"As greater economies can be effected by building in groups than on isolated lots it will be our plan to concentrate the work in several locations about the city. Owners of individual lots will be able to make a big saving under the plan, but their homes will cost slightly more than those building near a number of others."

Preparations has been made to begin work under the plan immediately and the 100 home seekers to benefit under it undoubtedly will be signed up this week.

Syndicate Pays $125,000 for Sixty-third Corner

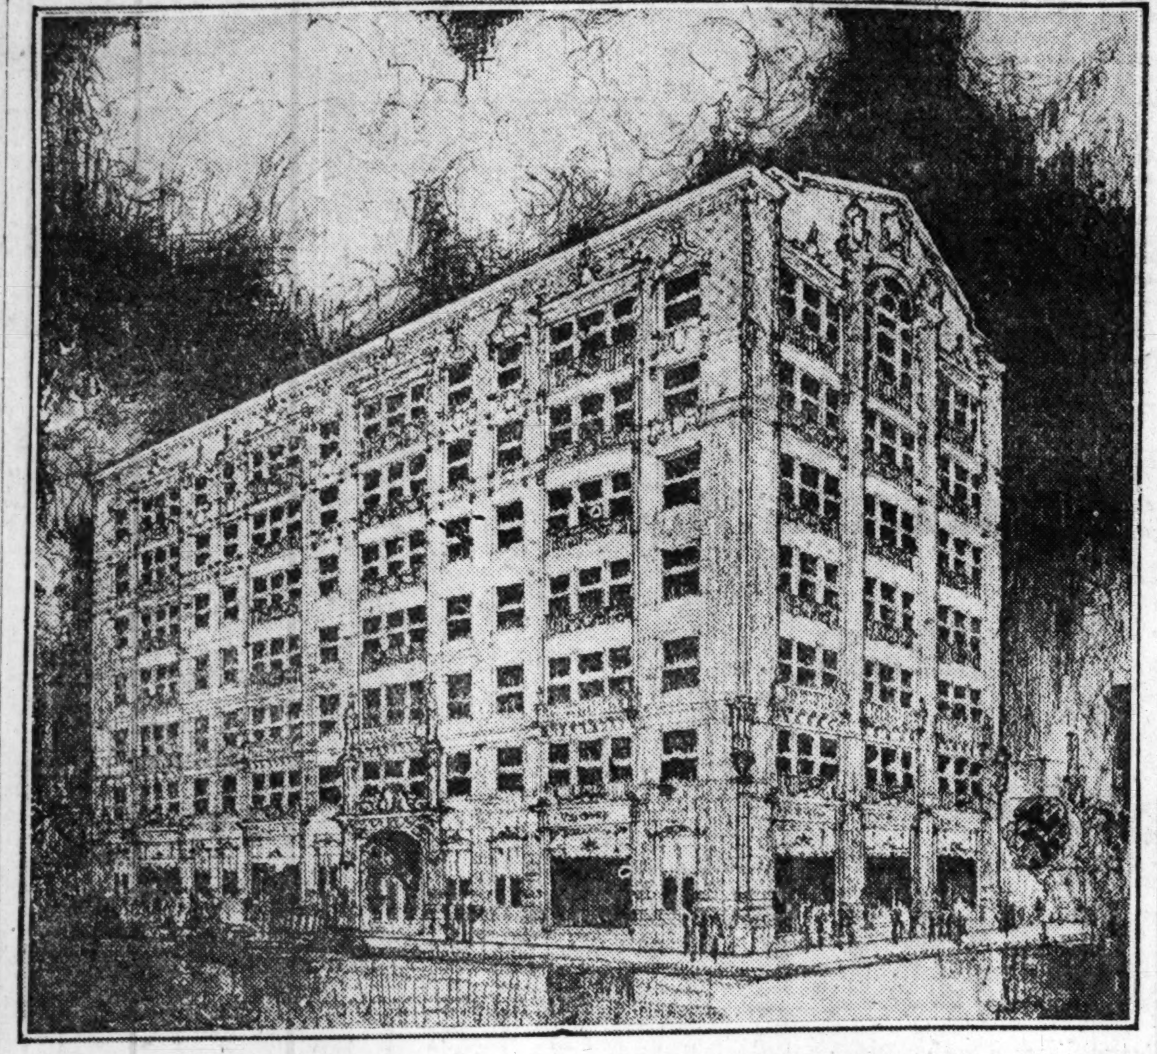
The third of a series of syndicate deals on 63d street made by Fred M. Lorish of W. K. Young & Brother is the sale of the southwest corner of Drexel avenue by Henry Wolf at a reported $125,000, subject to $35,000, to the Drexel Stores syndicate, comprised of F. J. Savoie, Grant L. Kidder, Fred M. Lorish, and James A. Lewis. The Chicago Title and Trust company took title as trustee. The property has a frontage of 132 feet on 63d and contains five stores, ten offices and twenty-one flats and is opposite the new Hartman Furniture company building now being erected.

$300,000 Paid for the Birchwood Beach Flats

A reported $300,000 subject to $243,000 has been paid by Albert N. Eastman for the Birchwood Beach apartments at 1357-67 Sheridan road, one-half block west of Sheridan road. Charles Pegler and Raymond F. Kirkman were the sellers. There are sixty flats of 2, 3, and 4 rooms. The lot is 120x176. Mr. Eastman conveyed as part payment some pecan and orange groves in Alabama. O. E. Gallup of William L. Wallen & Sons represented the buyer and Schoenlank & Kirchner the sellers.

POSTOFFICE LEASE.

Uncle Sam has leased for ten years from May 1 the property known as Station D, at 515-23 South Western avenue, from Bertram W. Frank and Harry M. Smith, for $18,000. There is 98x107 on the main floor and 20x50 each in the basement and on the mezzanine floor. The propery is used for postoffice quarters.



Work has started on the seven story studio apartment building at the southwest corner of Cass and Superior streets, designed by Walter W. Ahlschlager, Inc. The owners are the North Michigan Avenue Building corporation. It will front 109 feet on Cass and 56 feet on Superior street.

Convention Epilogue

HERE are some important last day happenings of the world's greatest realty convention, part of which were run in the early edition of THE TRIBUNE yesterday, but were crowded out of the city editions.

San Francisco was chosen for the 1922 convention.

Henry S. Ely of Cedar Rapids, Ia., was awarded the Chicago silver cup in the cities contest.

Cleveland and Norfolk, Va., were awarded the president's achievement trophies.

Cleveland won the cup for convention attendance.

Appreciation of the work done by Chicago realtors in making the convention the greatest of its kind ever held, was expressed by the National Association of Real Estate boards in the presentation of a sapphire and platinum cuff link set to President L. M. Smith of the Chicago board. Ivan O. Ackley, chairman of the general convention committee, was given a diamond stick pin. Mr. Ackley did an unusual thing by refusing the proffer of the presidency of the national association on the grounds that it would not be right for the convention city to be given this honor. Sentiment was so strong for his acceptance that one word of acquiescence would have swept him into the president's chair.

Secretary Tom Ingersoll of Chicago-Minneapolis was presented with a wrist watch—not an Ingersoll.

Retiring President Fred Taylor and Mrs. Taylor were given a silver coffee service.

The national association went on record in resolutions adopted on Friday for the gradual elimination of tax exempt securities and the consequent turning of funds into home building.

Charging that the present income tax blocks large real estate transactions, the realtors urged that changes be made to relieve the profits from sale of real estate from operation of the income tax in lump sums since March 1, 1913.

The St. Lawrence waterway plan, which will make Chicago a seaport, was unanimously indorsed.

The following recommendations were made to the senate committee on reconstruction and production:

Approval of an amendment to federal reserve act to permit use of savings and time deposits for long time loans, thus supplying a source of long term money for home building.

Creation of a broad and liberal policy assisting people financially to own their homes.

That savings banks and insurance companies be urged to loan money on medium and low priced dwellings.

Fostering of local home financing and home loan associations.

These recommendations were followed by a resolution to aid in lowering building costs by directing their influence against all combines acting in restraint of trade and by securing the adoption of standard building laws.

About the most unusual announcement of the convention was made by General Chairman Ackley, who stated that in addition to turning back to the national association the several thousand dollars in registration fees, the Chicago board had paid all convention and entertainment costs and still had a comfortable cash surplus on hand. The significance of this is emphasized when it is remembered that Chicago entertained at least 4,373. Previous to this Kansas City held the record attendance with 1,736.

Chicago Insurance Man Buys $95,000 Residence

R. A. Cavenaugh, secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Commercial Men's association, the largest accident insurance concern of its kind in the world, with headquarters in Chicago, has paid an indicated $95,000 for the brick and stone residence at the northeast corner of Sheridan road and Glenlake avenue. The lot fronts 100 feet on Sheridan and extends back 300 feet to the lake. Madden Brothers were brokers.

A prior incumbrance of $650,000 is mentioned. It is understood the new loan is to redeem an outstanding debt of $200,000 and to pay for the additional stories recently added to the Sherman.

DU PAGE COUNTY REALTORS PLAN A CO-OP LOOP OFFICE

Du Page county, which contains some of Chicago's most attractive suburbs, is going to try a coöperative plan of making it easy for the city man to buy a home without spending several days going back and forward between Chicago and various town.

The Du Page county real estate board has decided to establish headquarters in Chicago, where every realtor in the big county west of Cook can close a sale. (It will be a clearing house for all Du Page county realty advertising.

For instance, a realtor in Hinsdale advertises a house for sale. All information about it will be on file at the Du Page county headquarters, and the ad. will direct the prospective buyer to visit or phone either Hinsdale or the Chicago headquarters of the Du Page county realtors.

"We are now looking for suitable quarters," said E. M. Chase of Wheaton, secretary-treasurer of the Du Page county board. "We will assess each broker a pro rata amount on each sale and estimate that will pay office expenses. We figure it is the most important action taken since we formed the Du Page County Real Estate board several months ago."

FOX TROT FOE PLANS $1,000,000 DANCE HALL FOR 15,000

Either Chicago is going dance mad or the dancing hall owners are our most remarkable optimists. Every few days we hear a new toddle palace planned—sometimes, as at Cottage Grove and Sixty-fourth, two announced for the same block.

J. Louis Guyon, foe extraordinary of the fox trot, toddle, one step and other walking, strangle hold dances, now comes forward with a plan to erect a $1,000,000 home for the sedate stand apart two step and the old fashioned waltz. He has purchased from the University of Notre Dame, 252 feet on Independence boulevard, with a depth of 441 feet on Harrison street and 476 feet on Colorado avenue, at an undisclosed consideration but which is said to be over $1.10 per square foot.

Tentative plans call for accommodations for 15,000 dancers at once. It will have an oval shaped dance floor with an open air refreshment garden fronting the boulevard. It will replace Guyon's "Paradise" at Washington boulevard and Crawford avenue. Arthur S. Carruthers represented the sellers and Boehm & Winterson the buyer.

Boy, Page William Hale

While Mayor Thompson is getting near the end of the second year of his delay in appointing a zoning commission, some facts about what zoning is doing and can do were brought out at the realty convention which might possibly wake up his honor—if they ever got to the city hall.

Walter Stabler, controller of the Metropolitan Life Insurance company, declared half a billion dollars annually is lost in various American cities because of lack of zoning.

George B. Ford of the Technical Advisory corporation of New York City, nationally known zoning expert, said: "Within a few years zoning ordinances will be even commoner than building or sanitary codes. Zoning is logical and inevitable. It is good business. Zoning saves money."

The FLEX-A-TILE Way

FLEX-A-TILES

Pioneered in This Method of Roofing

Ten years ago we, the manufacturers of Flex-a-Tile asphalt shingles and rolls, introduced the over-the-old-shingle method of applying roofing.

We began then to tell builders it was unnecessary to have the yard littered and the house filled with dust from scraping the old shingles off before applying new. Since that time thousands have applied Flex-a-Tiles thus saving labor, expense and inconvenience, and making fire-resisting, weather-tight roofs with a minimum of trouble and expense.

WE CONTROL THE MATERIALS —THE PROCESS—THE QUALITY

The well-known Richardson felt from our own mills is saturated and coated with Flex-a-Tile natural asphalt scientifically processed in our refineries, and then the slate chips from our own quarries are rolled into the hot asphalt. This really enamels the surface with a natural colored slate.

Your Flex-a-Tile Housetop of natural slate green, or red if you prefer, will be a beauty spot in the landscape. You will have the proper kind of a roof, the product of over half a century of felt and roofing manufacturing experience.

National Conduit & Cable Goes in Receiver's Hands

New York, July 16.—Judge Knox of the United States District court has appointed Clarence G. Galston receiver of the National Conduit and Cable company, Inc., with plant at Hastings-on-Hudson, under a bond of $50,000 in a suit brought by John B. Post, a stockholder and holder of $162,500 worth of 6 per cent gold bonds issued by the corporation.

The complaint stated that the corporation floated a bond issue of $5,000,000 in April, 1917, which was secured by a mortgage on the property. It was stated that that corporation is without funds or resources to pay the principal and accrued interest on the outstanding bonds which aggregate $4,217,500 and current liabilities which are not stated in the complaint.

The net quick assets of the corporation of Dec. 31 last were estimated at $3,530,197, the complaint stated, but since that time, it is said, these assets have depreciated to the extent of $300,000.

Some time ago the management of the corporation endeavored to put through a financing plan, but it failed to secure the support of the majority of the stockholders and made a receivership necessary.

Safe Cabinet.

B. R. F.—The Safe Cabinet company, which has been operating successfully since 1906, issued $1,000,000 of serial first mortgage bonds last August. Earnings in 1918 were $213,832 and in 1919 $297,202. Net tangible assets, before giving effect to this financing, were $1,058,980. No report of earnings previous to 1918 available. The notes have a wide margin of safety as to interest. They are suitable investment for the funds of a business man.

West Virginia Water and Electric.

S. L.—The West Virginia Water and Electric company had $1,890,600 of first mortgage bonds outstanding at last accounts and interest on them was being earned more than three times. This entitled them to a high rating. We have no report later than that of 1919. If any one is offering you these bonds he can probably furnish a report for 1920.

St. Cloud Public Service.

S. R. B.—The St. Cloud Public Service company earned $280,550 net in the year ended Sept. 30 last. This was about $80,000 more than earnings in the calendar year 1919 and covered interest on the first mortgage bonds well over twice, giving them a good position.

FINANCIAL NOTES

It is reported the stock of the Anglo-American corporation of South Africa, Ltd., a favorite stock on the London stock exchange, soon will be listed for trading on the New York stock exchange. The corporation, which is among the four largest owners and producers of diamond mines in the world, now owns, it is said, a stock of 346,675 carats of diamonds above ground.

The General Electric company has under consideration a plan calling for the discontinuance of stock dividends on the present outstanding stock and the creation of a new issue of preferred stock of par value of $10 a share, which will be substituted in payment of stock dividends for the present stock, which is being utilized for that purpose. It was stated that the purpose of this action is to eliminate the extensive issuance of fractional shares.

For the first time in many months all but one of the departments of the McKeesport Tinplate company is to be in full operation this week. Thirty-six of the hot mills are to be operated, and the cold rolls, pickling and tinhouse departments, along with the storeroom and shipping room forces, are to work 100 per cent capacity. About 2,500 men at the Fore River plant of the Bethlehem Shipbuilding corporation have been laid off indefinitely and 1,500 others on part time. Curtailment is due to reduction of government contract allotments. The Standard Oil Company of Indiana has cut another 150 men from its pay roll, reducing the working force in Casper to 1,200, at which figure it will probably be kept for six months, until work on the extensions is renewed.

The Chicago Federal Reserve bank reports the weekly movement of credits as follows: Debits to individual deposit account reported for the week ending July 13, by 196 banks in twenty-three leading clearing house cities in the seventh federal reserve district, aggregate $899,003,000 compared with $838,079,000 a week ago. Aggregate debits to individual deposit account reported by twenty-two clearing houses amounted to $897,330,000 compared with $1,187,521,000 for the corresponding week last year.

The First State Pawners' society has declared a regular dividend at the rate of 9 per cent payable quarterly beginning Sept. 30. The rate has been 6 per cent since the society was founded.

The investment and brokerage business of John Burnham & Co., previously operated as a trusteeship, has been incorporated under the laws of Illinois with $2,000,000 capital stock.

The Colonial Steel company, which manufactures tool steel, has announced reductions of 15 to 20 per cent in its quotations on all grades. This is the first important change made in the prices of tool steel.

LIGHT & HEAVY MANUFACTURING.

MACHINE MANUFACTURING PLANT.

Normally employing 600 men, located in Middle West, foundry forge shops, and fully equipped machine shop, all under one ownership and management, for economically producing medium and heavy machinery [castings up to 30 tons]; ample erecting and assembling floors, railroad alongside plant with loading cranes directly to cars; low wage scale; nonunion district. Business established 65 years and under present conservative management 40 years. Dun rating AAA1; actual responsibility about $2,000,000; no debts, no bond issues.

Plant now practically idle for want of orders and the nature of the business is such that no return of activity is probable under two or three years.

We seek new line of manufacture. If an offering is such that we can see a definite market for the product, if the nature of the work is such as to lend itself to economical manufacture in our plants, and volume is such as to be an incentive to us, we would seriously consider an arrangement to take over a large volume of business on a mutually satisfactory basis; may arrange to finance meritorious offering; will not conside anything in experimental stage. CORN, OATS GAIN; WHEAT OFF; RUSS FACING FAMINE

BY CHARLES D. MICHAELS.

Weakness and lower prices for wheat and strength and a good advance in corn and oats attracted attention in the grain markets yesterday. The finish on wheat was at nearly the lowest, with losses of 1@2c, while corn was up 1⅛@2c, oats 1@1⅝c, and rye unchanged to ½c lower for the day. The most sensational news came from Russia, but it was like the crop news from the northwest and had little effect.

It was a constructive week in all grains, with broadening trade and a close well toward the best figures. Net gains for the week were 11¼@13¾c on wheat, 3¾@5c on corn, 4⅝@5⅝c on oats, 13¼@16c on rye, and 6c on barley. Provisions have moved up sharply, with an increased trade, lard gaining 90c@$1.00, short ribs 32½@37½c, and pork 35c compared with a week ago.

Drought, Famine in Russia.

The foreign situation in wheat needs close watching. Cables from Russia were the most alarming of the season. Drought and famine prevail in central and southern Russia, and crops have been lost owing to intense heat. This removes Russia from the export class for this season, as had been expected by many close students of the wheat situation.

Black rust and blight reports from Manitoba and North Dakota, sent in by Snow and Le Count, were regarded as bullish, but the trade has had bad reports all week and is getting tired of them, so that only the most sensational count as a strong constructive price making factor.

Traders on the whole, while favoring higher prices, were more intent on obtaining profits than on making new commitments, and a general selling movement was on, wtih September sold by the largest seller of Friday, while commission houses furnished the buying. A good business was on with buying of December and selling of September at 4c difference, and selling of September and buying of July at 1½c discount for the July. At the top July was $1.32, while the finish was $1.29@1.29½. September touched $1.33¼ and reacted 2½c, and December, after selling at $1.37½, was off 2½c at the finish.

Seaboard houses were good buyers and there was a fair export trade, with no figures mentioned. Export inquiries here were numerous, but no sales were reported, although millers took 21,000 bu. Primary receipts for the week at 12,000,000 bu were the largest at this time in more than five years, and 6,814,000 bu more than last year's.

Corn Makes Advance.

Local traders with corn sold and wheat bought were active in closing them. This advanced corn and depressed wheat values. The finish on July corn was 65⅛c, September 64⅛c, and December 62⅜c, or a slight recession from the top. Crop news was not especially changed from that of late, with reports mixed. News was not necessary, when the large volume of local buying was considered, as it made the market. The week's movement suggests a decrease in stocks for the week, although there are large supplies on track.

An active business was on in oats, with an advance to the best prices on the present upturn, all futures being above 40c. Scarcity of feedstuffs abroad and a probable increase in the export trade were features. Shorts were active buyers.

Rye was hard to buy and July sold at 3½c over wheat, an unprecedented condition at this season. Top prices were not entirely held.

Lard Prices Gain.

Good buying of provisions was on, with lard advanced to 12c and above, the close being around the top. Export trade is taking the offerings. Deliveries were 400,000 lbs lard and 200,000 lbs ribs. Shipments of lard and meats showed a good increase for the week. Prices follow:

NEWS OF THE CROPS

George M. Le Count wired Stein, Alstrin & Co. from Wahpeton, N. D.: "From Fargo here wheat fairly heavy growth and ten days ago had promise of a splendid crop. Harvest will start next week. All early wheat badly blighted. Fields a dull brown color and late heavy wheat that looked like twenty bu per acre a week ago will make about ten bu of low grade grain as the result of black rust. Conditions further north are favorable for black rust, and I think the crop will be greatly reduced this year."

After a drive of around eighty miles around Portage la Prarie, Manitoba, B. W. Snow wired Bartlett, Frazier company: "Prospect has been much above the average, but tip blight from recent heat now showing up. Black rust infection in every field examined. A few fields badly hit, but in most cases it is not severe. A little wheat may be ready to cut in two weeks, but most of it needs three weeks. Usually rust does not show on the head straw until after the lower sheaths are heavily infected. Fields here often show postules on head straw as early as it shows on lower sheaths. This causes me to doubt the severity of the attack, as the centers of local infection are not pronounced. Aside from rust possibilities, a heavy yield is assured. Oats crop very heavy."

R. O. Cromwell wired E. W. Sanger & Co. from Winnipeg, Manitoba: "From Brandon along Souris branch to within forty miles of Winnipeg find a good wheat crop. A few fields now very heavily cut by rust. Infection general, but mostly no damage yet. It is a weather proposition, and situation is serious. Heads are of average size and not filling properly for a bumper crop. Only a moderate good crop suggested, and scattered localities will be cut by rust. Oats and barley outside of drought zone are spotted."

GRAIN RECEIPTS LARGER

An increase in receipts of wheat and oats and a decrease in corn was a feature of the week's movement. Wheat receipts at primary markets increased 5,712,000 bu and were 6,814,000 bu over last year. Of oats there was an increase of 481,000 bu for the week and a loss of 985,000 bu from last year, while corn decreased 1,570,000 bu for the week and 1,275,000 bu from last year. Receipts of wheat were the largest and of oats the smallest in over five years, while the run of corn was a little under the average. Chicago received 2,334,000 bu wheat, or 1,786,000 bu increase for the week and 1,767,000 bu over last year. Corn, 1,622,000 bu, or 1,362,000 bu under the previous week and 626,000 bu below last year. Oats, 1,437,000 bu, a drop of 384,000 bu for the week and 134,000 bu from last year.

Primary receipts, with comparisons, with the last three ciphers omitted, follow:

	Wheat.	Corn.	Oats.	Tot. all grain.
Last week	12,000	3,501	2,999	19,450
Prev. week	6,288	5,071	2,518	14,777
Last year	5,186	4,176	3,984	14,926

CASH·GRAIN N·E·W·S

While there were numerous inquiries for cash wheat received in the west from the seaboard and a good business was done in Europe no quantities were mentioned, although it was reported as certain that sales had been made. Germany was credited with being the best buyer of wheat.

Domestic shipping sales at Chicago were 21,000 bu wheat, 60,000 bu corn and 70,000 bu oats. Deliveries on July contracts were 47,000 bu corn and 110,000 bu oats.

Cash wheat prices at Chicago showed no change as compared with the July, No. 1, and No. 2 red, selling mainly at 1c under the future while No. 1 hard was 1c over and No. 2 hard ½c over. Receipts 408 cars. Outside wheat markets were easier, with St. Louis 1@2c lower, with a good export demand, while Kansas City declined 1c and Omaha 3@4c. At Minneapolis premiums were unchanged to 5c lower, with choice leading the decline.

Offerings of corn were not large and sold readily, with prices ½@1½c higher, closing at the top. No. 2 yellow and white brought ½c under the July. Receipts 107 cars. Outside markets were unchanged to 2c higher, with St. Louis leading.

No. 2 white oats on track at Chicago sold readily at ½c over July for old. Sample values were ¾@1c higher, with receipts 65 cars.

·WORLD'S·GRAIN·MARKET·NEWS·

Traders are moderately bullish on wheat and are disposed to buy on good setbacks. The outside interest has increased, and many of the local professionals were active on the weak spots yesterday. They do not expect the market to run away for the present, but the majority are disposed to buy on breaks. Weather conditions are a big factor, and crop news is being watched closely.

Those who are figuring on a big movement of wheat from first hands are inclined to be bearish and are selling the September. Orders for cars have increased and some of the roads are short. The Rock Island has closed twenty-two houses in Kansas and Oklahoma owing to a car shortage. The holdings of grain in car lots on track in Chicago will tend to create a shortage of equipment. Railroads are loading about 100 per cent more grain than two weeks ago, and are doing the largest business in months, with an increase over last year's.

Kansas City mills made 105,000 brls of flour the last week, a new high figure, showing an increase of 10,400 brls over the previous week and about twice as much as last year. Mills there report a good demand.

A bullish view of the world's wheat situation is taken by Charles Sincere & Co., who say they believe that North America will be forced to try to satisfy an immense foreign demand.

Good rains are reported in India and the soil is in much better condition than at this time last year.

A Board of Trade membership sold Saturday at $8,200 net to the buyer.

A private cable from Germany indicated the crop situation in that country was improving, although there have been no rains reported. England was reported as offering wheat to Germany on credit.

Minneapolis mills who have made tests of new winter wheat claim that it is 3 to 5 per cent poorer than last year in milling quality. E. F. Leland's Minneapolis office wired that this would necessitate using a larger percentage of spring wheat.

The movement of corn is expected to fall off and stocks to decrease. This was part of the basis for the buying yesterday. A number of shorts covered and at the same time sold out their holdings of wheat. The market has numerous friends, but the trade on the whole is disposed to go slow on the buying side on bulges.

A number of local traders have taken the constructive side of the oat market, and yesterday was the first time they had any encouragement in the way of help from the outside. There appears to be a shortage in supplies nearly everywhere, except in the United States, and requirements from abroad are expected to be a factor later in the season.

A cash grain specialist who made a trip the past week from Winnipeg to Calgary and back says the Canadian crop is generally good. Some people in Canada are claiming 350,000,000 bu, while others estimate it at 300,000,000 bu for the three western provinces.

"Everybody agrees that the northwestern crop is very spotted and an uneven proposition," wired Thomson & McKinnon's Minneapolis office. "A spotted crop generally turns out better than estimated, as poor spots turn out some wheat, while everybody in estimating the poor acreage, figure it a total loss."

PULPWOOD SALE.

One million cords of pulpwood on the Tongass national forest, Alaska, has just been sold by the forest service of the United States department of agriculture to the Alaskan-American Paper corporation. The timber is located along the east shore of the Behm canal, Revillagigedo island, about thirty-two miles from Ketchikan, the largest city in the territory. The contract price of the timber was 60 cents per 100 cubic feet for spruce and cedar, and 30 cents per 100 cubic feet for all other species. The sale area covers 45,000 acres and extends for fifty-five miles along the coast. Twenty per cent of the forest is spruce, 66 per cent hemlock, and 14 per cent Alaska and western red cedar.

The national forests of the territory probably contain 100,000,000 cords of timber suitable for the manufacture of news print and other grades of paper. Under scientific management expert say that these forests can be made to produce 2,000,000 cords of pulpwood annually for all time, or enough to manufacture one-third of the pulp products now consumed in this country.

60% DISCOUNT UNITED STATES OF BRAZIL EXTERNAL 4's
Or 40% of Normal Par Value
Issued in Pounds Sterling to Yield About 8.50%

More than one-half century ago, at the close of the Civil War, our fathers and grandfathers had the opportunity of buying safe bonds at considerable discounts. Today offers similar opportunities as a result of the World War.

Millions of dollars of stable, high-grade bonds, which prior to the War paid 3% and 4%, today may be purchased at prices yielding 8%, 8½% and 9%. For example: £200 UNITED STATES OF BRAZIL 4% EXTERNAL BONDS (par value with exchange at normal, $973.30) may now be obtained at a discount of over 60% from Normal Par Value. Subject to market changes, on this basis, such investment will yield an income of over 8.50%, and upon return of Pounds Sterling to normal and bonds paid at par, the investor will receive $973.30 for each £200 bond purchased, showing a profit of about 159% on the investment, not including interest.

In Pounds Sterling bonds the purchaser will profit from any increase in exchange rates, whereas in Dollar bonds the benefit of the increase accrues to the country borrowing the money.

All indications point to a gradual return to Normal Times. When they come, upturn of bond prices is bound to follow, and there will be no more issues of Government Bonds to be had at these unusual prices and rates of interest.

Take time by the forelock while you may. Profit by the experience of investors of sixty years ago, and buy Government of Brazil External 4% Bonds.

The New York Times.

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—The midsummer character of the stock market recently was intensified today to the point that trading brought a turnover of only 111,000 shares, the smallest volume of business recorded since Aug. 11, 1918. For the most part fluctuations in prices were within narrow limits and at the close such changes as were recorded were in fractions and meaningless.

The signs have been apparent for some time that the market was drifting into a period of quietude such as has not been seen in many months. That which is taking place is the aftermath of the big rise in prices in 1919 and the subsequent decline which has carried quotations to levels in many instances that are lower than those prevailing at any time since early in the war period.

Public Out of Market.

With public participation in the market absent in anything other than moderate investment buying, there is apparently getting to be a monotony which is influencing even the operations of professionals, who until recently have been meeting with success in driving prices down.

While there are underlying factors in the industrial affairs of the country which appear to be paving the way for better conditions in the future, the stock market seems to be still governed by affairs of moment, and while adverse factors are not so plentiful as some time ago decreased earnings and low volume of business loom up as the influences of greatest importance from the stock market point of view.

Foreign Exchange Heavy.

The exchange market today presented no new elements and trading was on a restricted basis, but with some degree of heaviness apparent. Losses were trifling. Sterling was down ⅛ at $3.62 and francs were off 1 point at 7.79. Lire declined 2 points to 4.50½.

The foreign exchanges are in something of a waiting position until there is a clearer view as to the bearing which Germany's transactions will have on the course of rates. Speculation, which was such a pronounced factor in the market some weeks ago appears to be entirely absent at the present time.

New York Loans Low.

The statement of the New York associated banks is of interest in that it shows loans and discounts of $4,446,048,000, the lowest recorded since the figure of $4,428,325,000 on Aug. 31, 1918. At the outset of this year loans and discounts stood at $5,220,197,000. The tendency since then has been steadily downward, but during the middle of June the trend was temporarily broken by an advance in loans apparently for the purpose of taking care of the July 1 requirements. A week ago loans were $4,501,355,000.

The statement of this week shows a decrease in excess reserve of $20,775,650. The reserve held in the vaults of the Federal Reserve bank shows a decrease of $16,027,000, indicating that the banks have been paying off rediscounts. The figures, with comparisons, follow:

Report Lever Bros. Seeks Union with Palm Olive Co.

Milwaukee, Wis., July 16.—Rumors of an impending affiliation between the Palm Olive company, one of Milwaukee's largest industrial concerns, and Lever Brothers' company of England, the largest soap manufacturers in the world, were partially confirmed yesterday afternoon by officials of the Palm Olive company. They admitted that conferences between representatives of the companies had taken place.

Lever Brothers' company, which is understood to control 95 per cent of the soap trade of Great Britain, is known to have been looking toward the United States for further expansion.

Lord Leverhulme, president of the company, was in Milwaukee about six months ago, it was said at the Palm Olive offices.

Back to Normalcy! B. & O. Restores Travel 'Stopovers'

New York, July 16.—[Special.]—Stopover privileges amounting to ten days were restored July 10 by the Baltimore and Ohio railroad for the convenience of travelers at all cities and resorts where the custom obtained prior to government control, according to an announcement today. The stopover is ten days on one-way tickets and thirty days on round trip and convention tickets. Where all-year and season tourist tickets are used, the stopover privilege is permitted within the final return limit, but deposit of the tickets is not necessary.

PAGEANT TO BE GREATEST SINCE COLUMBIAN FAIR

With the opening of the Pageant of Progress exposition only two weeks off, the officials are confident they will present to millions of visitors the greatest industrial show Chicago has seen since the World's Columbian exposition in 1893.

Nearly 900 exhibitors have taken space in the exposition for the display of the products they manufacture or distribute. Every exhibit is being arranged under the guidance of a scientist or educator closely in touch with industry, that the exhibits may truly form a pageant of "progress," illustrating the strides that science and industry have made in the last three decades.

In addition to the industrial and business show an entertainment program of unusual merit is being planned. New features are being added to this daily.

Exhibits on Pier.

The scene of the exposition will be Chicago's $5,000,000 Municipal pier, extending from the foot of Grand avenue far out into Lake Michigan. The pier itself is a wonderful attraction, swept by cool breezes and attracting hundreds of thousands of visitors every summer season. The exposition will open at 10 o'clock Saturday morning, July 30, and will continue for sixteen days, closing Sunday evening, Aug. 14.

For the purposes of the exposition the two great upper decks of the pier, each 2,340 feet long and 67 feet wide, without a post to obstruct the view, have been divided into seventeen general sections. As the visitor enters the south hall at the west or shore end of the pier he will find himself in section A, given over to paper products advertising, and office appliances. Machines manufacturing various articles of paper will be in operation here, and the newspapers, advertising agencies, printers, and others interested in advertising will have their exhibits.

Section B includes furniture, rugs, musical instruments, and shoes, in the manufacture and distribution of which Chicago is one of the world's greatest markets.

Section C is devoted to general merchandise.

Striking Floral Display.

One of the beauty spots of the exposition will be section D, devoted to horticulture. The florists of Chicago, with $15,000,000 invested in greenhouses and power plants, are arranging a floral display of striking variety.

Food industries will occupy section E, including the great packing houses, the Board of Trade, the butter industries, South Water street, and beverage manufacturers.

Milk and ice cream manufacturers have taken section F. An unusual feature of this section is that there will be no attempt by any manufacturer or distributor to adverise his own particular wares.

Public education in health matters is the aim of sections G and H. Public health and sanitation will be treated in section G, and section H will be devoted to children and medical science. A motion picture theater, complete, has been constructed, in which educational films will be displayed.

Fashion Show Each Night.

Section R, on the north side, will be entirely occupied by Chicago furriers, who will have more than a million dollars worth of fur garments on display. They will also have a working exhibit showing all the processes between the wild animal and the finished garment. The furriers and the Chicago garment manufacturers will also furnish the gowns and wraps for the great pageant of fashion to be held each evening in the public auditorium on the recreation end of the pier.

The United States government, the state of Illinois, and many of the large educational institutions of the middle states will occupy section S, which includes government departments, education, history, chemicals, and miscellaneous subjects.

Section T will be occupied by school industries, and section U by building industries. In section U a complete history of the types of dwellings used by man, from his first cave in the cliff or hillside to the huge modern apartment building, will be presented.

Unusual Inventions Shown.

Many inventions with which the public is not yet familiar will be shown by the electrical industries and public utilities in section V, including some uses of wireless energy which are almost uncanny.

Section W will be occupied by the laundry industries, and section X by manufacturers of public safety devices.

The last two sections, Y and Z, will be occupied by the automotive industry, passenger cars being located in Y and accessories and trucks in Z.

Get Off the Track! De Witt Clinton Express Is Coming

New York, July 16.—The historic De Witt Clinton train, which made its first trip out of New York in 1831, will start on its trip to the Chicago Pageant of Progress tomorrow. The quaint old locomotive and its three coaches will travel a short distance on the New York Central on its own steam, then will be loaded on a couple of modern flat cars for the rest of the trip. Making stops at Elkhart and South Bend, the train will arrive in Chicago under its own steam Friday, July 29.

AUGUST LEARNS THE MEANING OF "ANNIHILATION"

John and August Prenschke of 2443 Sedgwick street were lodged in a cell yesterday after they had been rescued by policemen at Sedgwick and Schiller streets. They were booked for assaulting Lazar Borberly and his son, 1407 Sedgwick street.

August, according to the police, had been drinking and was quarrelsome, and when the elder Borberly attempted to board a street car Prenschke started a fight.

"I'm minding my own business; I don't want to fight with you," said Borberly Sr.

The next instant he was knocked down, with a gash in his forehead as evidence of the Prenschke blow. Pedestrians immediately rushed to the Borberlys' rescue. Fists flew, knuckles thudded against faces. When the melee was at its height some one telephoned the East Chicago avenue station.

"There's a riot on," he shouted. The flivver squad found the Prenschke brothers in the process of being annihilated. The police rushed the mob with their clubs and rescued the battlers. August was suffering from a fractured nose, a sprained wrist, and numerous bruises. Borberly signed the charges against the Prenschkes.

HOW CROOKS OF INCOME TAX ARE MADE TO PAY UP

Washington, D. C., July 16.—[Special.]—Approximately $20,000,000 was added to government revenue during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1921, in additional taxes, penalties, and fines resulting from the discovery of false and fraudulent income tax returns, the bureau of internal revenue announced today.

Fraud, filing false and fraudulent tax returns, appears in many unique ways, officials assert. Some taxpayers are extremely crude and reduce their taxes by merely omitting large items of income. In one instance a prominent merchant in one of the larger cities owned and operated two stores. For three years straight he omitted entirely from his returns the income of one of them.

In another instance a prominent man received approximately one-half of his income as salary from a corporation of which he was president and of which he owned practically all the stock. The corporation took this salary as a deduction and a necessary expense; the man himself entirely omitted to report this salary, never thinking that the corporation's return would be checked on his individual return.

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

ESSEX

ESSEX MOTOR CARS

Men say these things about it—

"Like New After Two Years"
"Purchased my Essex in the Spring of 1919, and after covering over 18,000 miles my motor is running better than ever. Battery has been out of my car only once. No mechanical expense has been incurred."
HENRY R. GAMMETT,
The Downham & Gammett Co.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

"Favorite of 15 Cars"
"Have driven 9,000 miles to date, and instead of depreciating in efficiency my Essex has increased daily.
"It is the greatest of 15 makes I have driven."
BRUCE CHISHOLM,
City and Suburban Realty Co.,
Cleveland, Ohio.

"Snug As New After 32,500 Miles"
"In 17 months have driven my Essex 32,500 miles. Bearings are still as snug as when I received the car. It has all the power and speed of a new car. 20,000 on a set of Fabric tires still good for 3,000 miles."
WM. J. LYNCH,
Ft. Bliss Auto Stand,
El Paso, Texas.

"Best of 31 Cars"
"During the past ten years I have owned 31 automobiles, ranging in cost from $1,500 to $10,000, but my Essex Sedan does everything and more than any of them did."
The Writer's Name and Address Will Be Furnished on Request.

"Over 20,000 Miles on Tires"
"Have driven my Essex Sedan over 20,000 miles on the original tires. Has given excellent satisfaction—upkeep has been very slight. Am also driving an Essex Touring which has covered 14,000 miles, and my experience with this has been equal to that with the Sedan."
J. M. BROS, Secretary,
Wm. Bros Boiler and Manufacturing Co.,
Minneapolis, Minn.

"Too Good to Trade"
"We will not trade in any of our Essex cars, but will use them another season. They were used continually since the Spring of 1920, and the men who drive them requested me not to trade them in this year, as each is convinced he has the very best car on the road, and the best motor he ever rode behind."

"As rapidly as our F——s are retired we will take on the Essex. They are just as light on tires, use less gas than the F——, cover mileage faster, are easier on the men. Practically no time out for repairs."
WALRATH & SHERWOOD LUMBER CO.,
Omaha, Nebraska.

"Just Try It After 22,000 Miles"
"One ride in my Essex as it stands, after 22,000 miles, will convince anybody that it has as much power, speed, reliability and freedom from noise as when new."
E. L. MORRILL,
Merrick Medicine Co., Inc.,
Waco, Texas.

"Absolutely the brightest, liveliest little engine I ever found in an American Car"—S. F. Edge in "The Autocar," London, Eng.

Essex set the official 50-hour record, traveling 3037 miles at better than a mile a minute. For cars of its motor size it holds all official stock records for speed and endurance from 1 to 50 hours.

It set the world's 24-hour road mark of 1061 miles, and the official 24-hour dirt track record of 1261 miles.

Essex also set the New York-Chicago record—24 hrs., 43 min., and the San Bernardino hill climb record.

—because it is built this way

The Essex did not bring costly car performance and reliability to the light, moderate-priced field without duplicating or excelling the design and workmanship of the finest high-priced cars.

For instance, S. F. Edge, England's most noted automobile authority, says: "This motor might have had a Coatelen* or a Pomeroy* as its sponsor (*Respectively designers of two English cars of higher price than any American car).

And so throughout, Essex gets its long endurance, and continued smoothness and quietness of operation, from the way it is built. It has eliminated squeaking bodies with a frame so designed that it does not weave. This frame, with one exception, is sturdier for the duty it is to perform than any other car.

Devices which provide for longer wear, or for taking up wear at no expense, are Essex features that only a few of the highest priced cars duplicate. This is the reason that Essex cars that have seen 2 years' service and upwards of 20,000 miles are running as well and as quietly and economically now as when new. Bearings are snug. Joints are tight and free from squeaks. Doors are solid and flush-fitting, without rattles. You never have seen an Essex with weaving wheels, and bar accident sufficient to smash a car, you never will.

These are not spectacular advantages. You may not notice them in comparing Essex to another new car. But you will know what they mean if you compare an old Essex to another old car.

Time serves to show the real difference between the way cars are built. That is why Essex owners who have had their cars through long, hard service speak with such conviction of its goodness.

It is easy for you to find and examine the real proofs regarding any car you may think of buying:

What have cars of the same make shown over a period of several years?

What is the future expectancy of good service from such cars after twenty or thirty thousand miles?

You have the all important advantage of being able to ask owners. Make use of it. It is an inexpensive insurance against the risk of making a selection you may regret.

We will be glad of an early opportunity to explain the many points of advantage that only costly cars share with Essex.

The RED FISHER by Owen Oliver

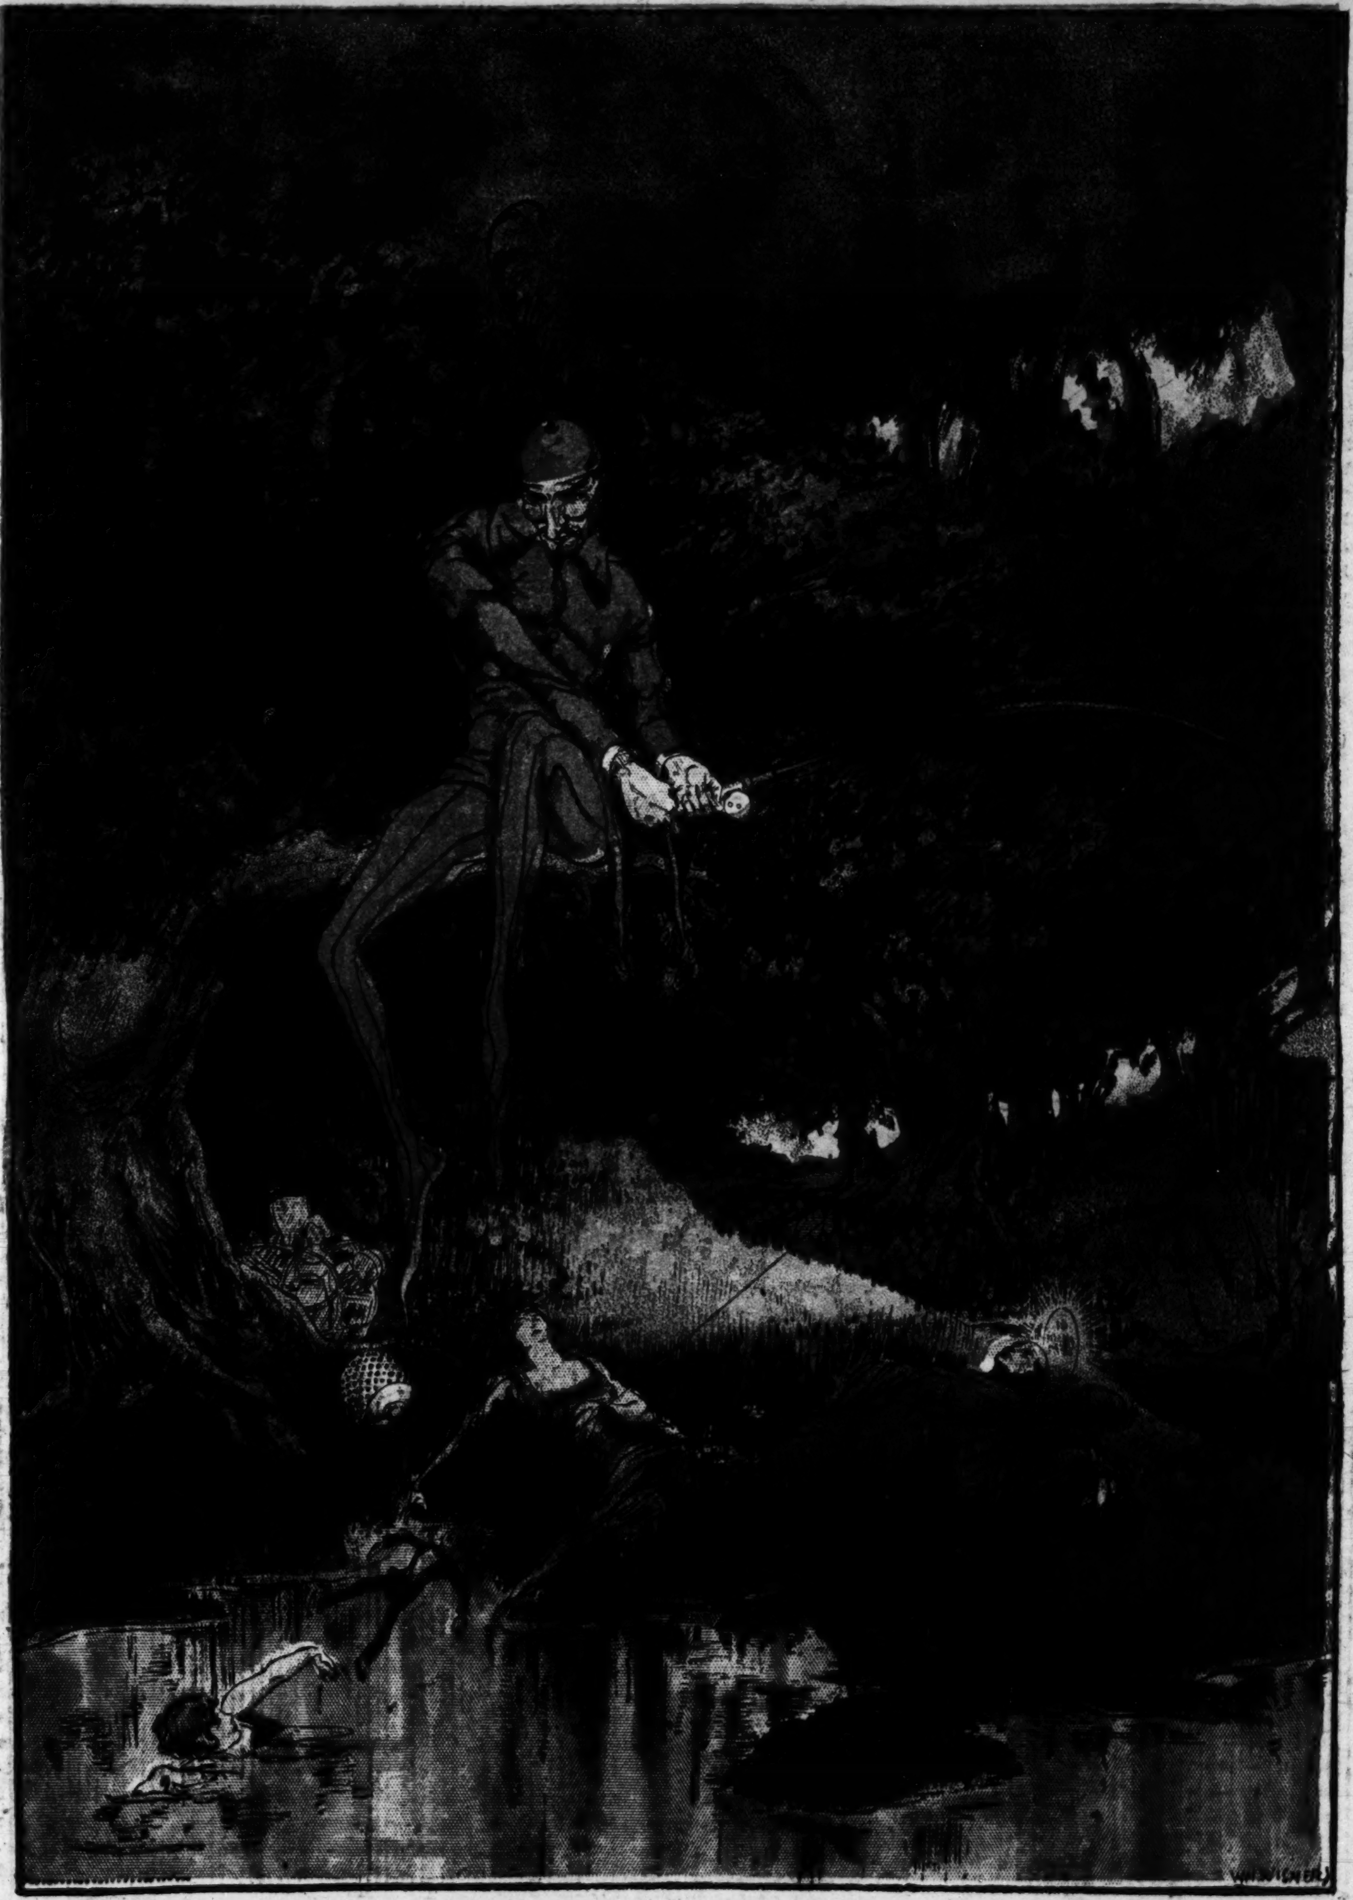
What May Happen to Any Woman When the Devil Does the Angling and Mere Man's the Bait



A very proper Mephistopheles, long, lean, sardonic . . . He sat upon an overhanging branch, dangling his pointed shoes above a glassy stream.

THE Red Fisher knows the bait for every one. He took me with Robert Carr. You'll think that's only a figure of speech, but it isn't. There is a full bottle of strong sleeping-draught in my bedroom, marked off into sixteen tiny portions by lines of glass. I would take the whole bottleful if I could escape a picture of the Red Fisher waiting to pull me out of the river of sleep.

The Devil may be only a superstition that ages haven't quite wiped off the slate of heredity; but the picture is a fact. You can see it on the walls of Nugent's Gallery:

874. The Red Fisher. Arthur Dane.

It shows up best if you stand just beside the left hand seat of the settee. You get the full malignity of the grin then. I stood just there when my duel with conscience began. I suppose I am not ultra-modern. I have a conscience.

It was on a rainy Friday afternoon three years ago, and I had a dull hour to kill. I passed the gallery. "I may as well be bored by myself as bored by pictures," I reflected. "I can't be more bored by pictures than I am by myself," I thought fifty yards down the road. I turned back and went in.

I saw my own thoughts rather than the pictures, until I found myself staring at the devil; a very proper Mephistopheles, long, lean, sardonic, and habited in hard red. He sat upon an overhanging branch, dangling his pointed shoes above a glassy stream that came from nowhere into a green wood and ran out to nowhere again. A network bag lay upon the grass behind him, with his varied bait peeping through the meshes; a miniature of a pretty, enticing woman, and a cardinal's hat; a diploma, a seal of office, and a fat packet of bonds; a necklace of diamonds, and a president's chair. A pale young monk lay dead upon the bank, caught by a saint's aureole; and a red-faced woman captured by a wicker flask. The wine was dribbling out and staining a little white daisy purple. The Red Fisher was angling now with a pretty mannikin. A wistful, elfish girl was swimming away from temptation; but she looked back over her round shoulder, and her pouting mouth opened a little as if she wanted to come back and snap. I wondered foolishly whether she was going to be caught; moralized tritely upon the vanities that catch women and men; and then suddenly——

"I wonder," I thought, "what bait he'd use for me?"

I turned over temptations hopefully in my mind, but could find none strong enough to haul me to the devil's bank. I was a dull bachelor woman, I told myself impatiently, half-past temptation, and growing into an old maid with a hundred weaknesses and no grand vice; not warm enough to nourish a sin.

"Isn't there anything you'd risk the hook for, Nina?" I asked myself. "Surely you aren't quite dried up yet." I looked into my secret mind, as if it were a picture book, and the burly form of Robert Carr grew slowly out of the mist within; dear old Robert, manly, and clever, and courteous, and kind! I felt my eyes widen and my mouth open and close with a snap. I am telling the truth. I did not know before how much I liked him, though I would have said any day and anywhere that he was the nicest fellow in the world. . . . Well, I did like him, in a perfectly proper way; liked him very much. What of it?

"My dear Devil!" I said contemptuously. "You've chosen the wrong fly! I don't nibble at the husband of my friend. . . . And besides he doesn't want me."

I gasped again at the self-betrayal of the last words; reddened and then turned very pale. I could see my face in a little mirror. I have a conscience, as I have said. There were many virtues that I had no great care for, but I cherished an idea of myself as loyal to my friends. Margaret was a cat of a woman, and I was another, but we were pals; had been all our lives. "Not her husband," I said, even in the dark depths of my mind; but the heart is deeper. That said I was lost if the Fisherman won over Robert Carr, to help him angle for me. I must fly from temptation, or risk the consequences.

"Well," I decided deliberately, "I take the risk, if there is one. There isn't. Robert loves his wife, if she doesn't care much for him. She is ten times better looking than I. He likes pink, smiling young prettiness. He'd never want this pale, old snappish thing, except perhaps as a friend. . . . Poor boy! He needs some one to comfort him. Fish away, my dear Devil! I'll risk all I have and am to be a little help to dear old Bob."

I went to their house on the Saturday afternoon, as I generally did. Margaret was animated. Robert was gloomy. She was going to drag him away to the seaside on Monday; and his roots are in his business and his study.

PLAYING SAFE, a Blue Ribbon short story........................By Henry C. Rowland

"It's all very well for you," he grumbled. "You'll have drives and excursions and dances and whist drives, and two or three admirers hanging round. I shall have nothing to do but potter along the beach. I hate pottering. I'd rather stay and work in town."

"Don't potter," I advised. "Take to golf or something. Get an admirer yourself, if Maggie doesn't behave."

"That introduces a subject for me!" Margaret cried gaily. "Come with us, Neen, and take him off my hands for a fortnight. You can teach him golf, if you like; or sailing. He'd love that! Nag him and wake him up! Wanted an experienced lady, with a stimulating tongue to take entire charge of a dull infant! You just fit!"

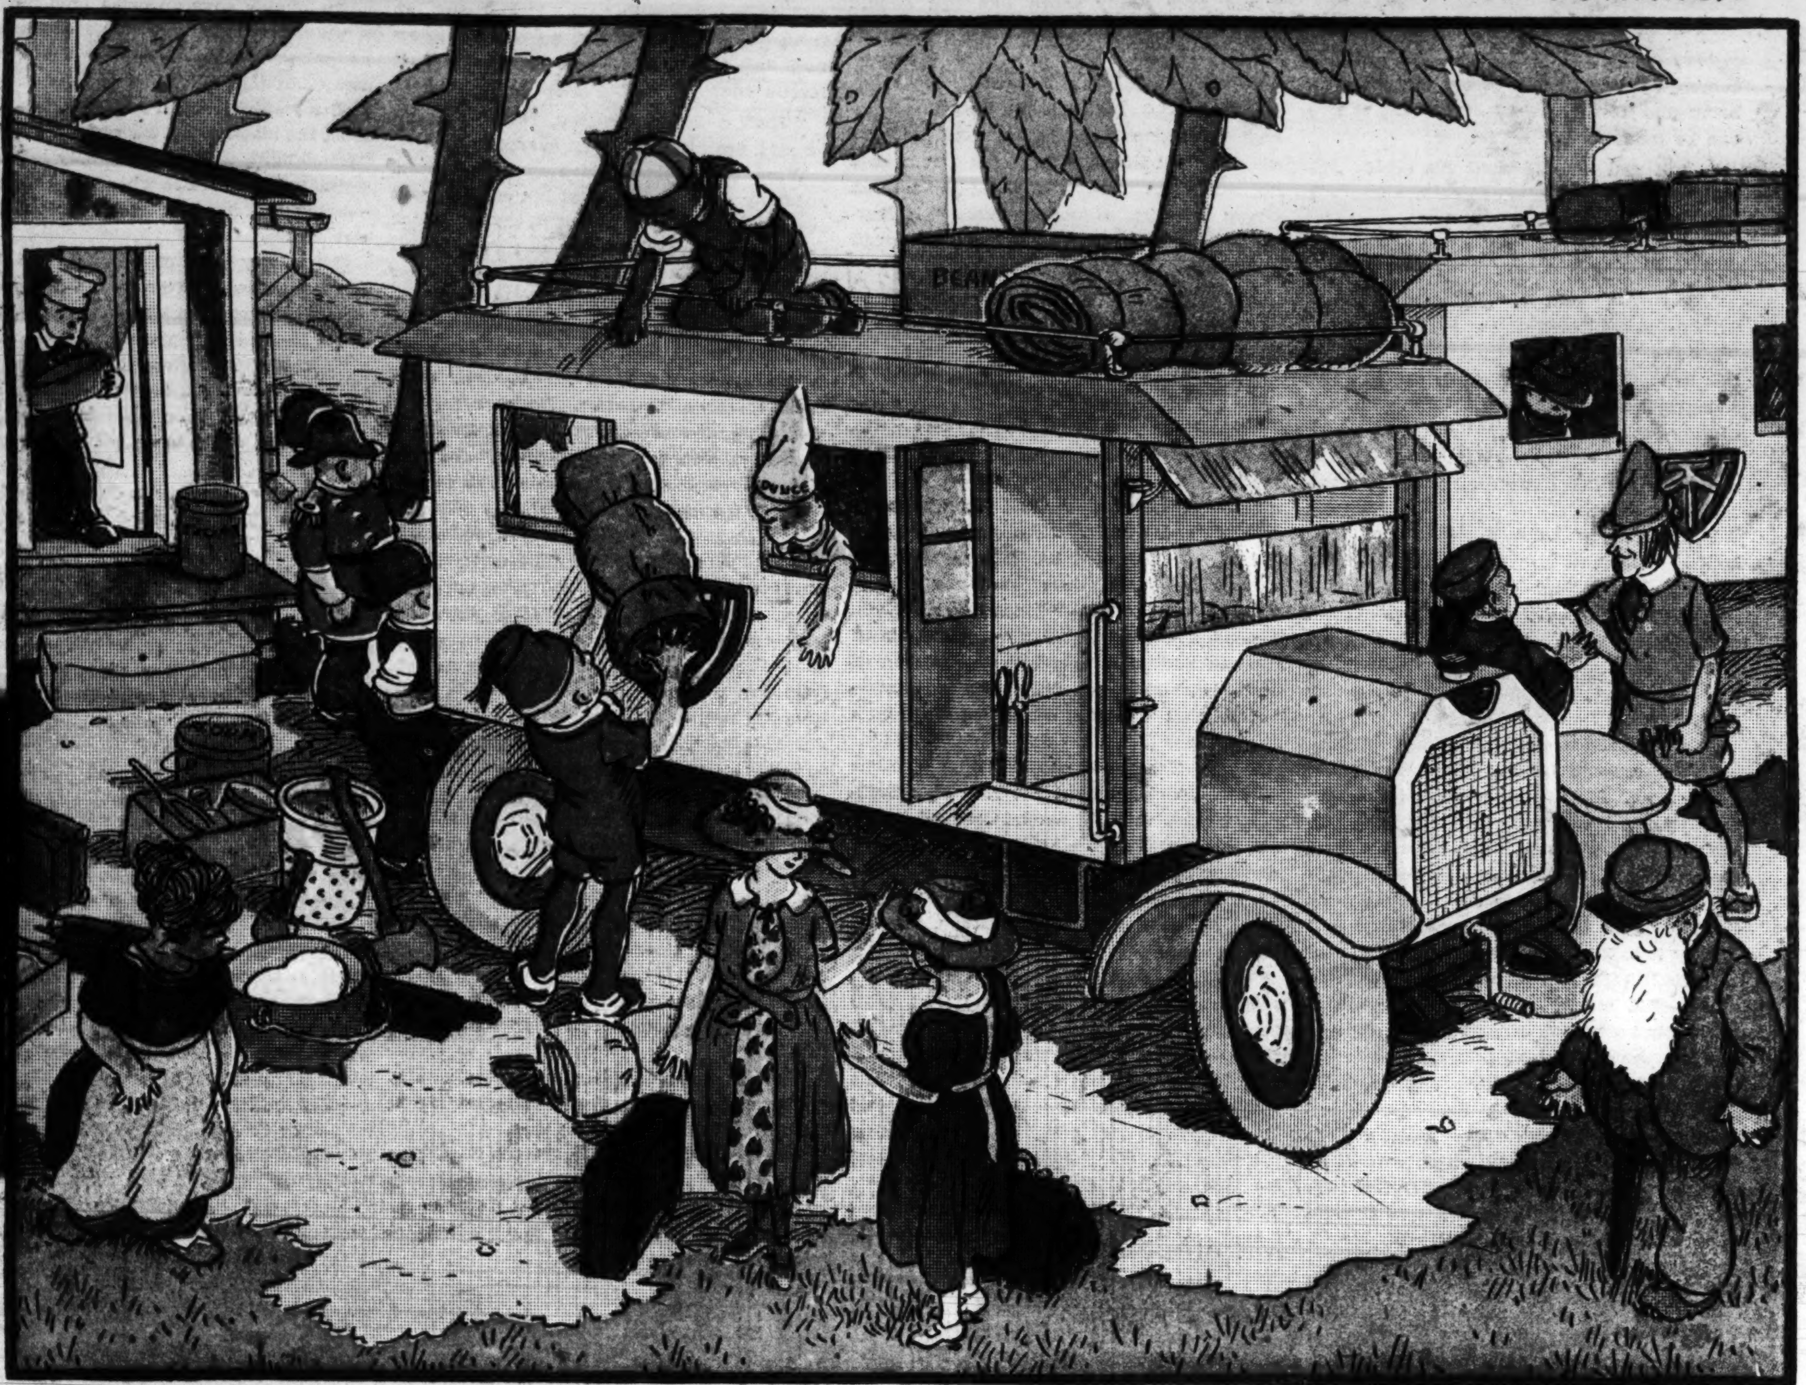
"Poor Robert!" I said. "My sailing's all right; and my tongue! But I don't know golf. Don't be afraid, my dear chap. I won't add to your troubles."

"I'm sure you won't," he declared heart-

THE TEENIE WEENIES.

THE LITTLE FOLKS START ON AN AUTOMOBILE TRIP.

BY WM. DONAHEY.



FOR several years the Teenie Weenies had talked of building an automobile.

"I can build 'em all right," the Turk said. "But it's so awfully hard to get gasoline to run 'em."

"Just give me a little time to experiment, and I think I can find a way to get plenty of gasoline," said the Doctor to several of the Teenie Weenies who sat in front of the Hospital one evening discussing the old, old question.

"I know where there's a barrel of gasoline," cried the Dunce.

"There's plenty of gasoline," laughed the General. "But we can't get it without stealing it, and that we cannot do."

"Couldn't we get the gasoline that big people throw away?" asked the Dunce.

"Big folks don't throw away gasoline," answered the General. "And besides if they did, gasoline dries up so quickly we'd never be able to get it."

"We could get plenty of oil," said the Cowboy. "You can find oil almost any place on the street where it has dripped from the big automobiles."

"Now that's the very idea I'm working on," cried the Doctor. "I'm trying to make gasoline out of the waste oil we could get along the street."

"Well, I hope you succeed," said the Turk. "Paddy Pinn and I will furnish the automobiles as soon as you can furnish the gasoline."

For almost two weeks the Doctor gathered up buckets of waste oil which had dripped from the big autos, and carried it to his tiny office in the hospital where he experimented for many days.

Sometimes the little fellow worked all night, and one morning he told the Teenie Weenies that he had discovered a way to make the desired gasoline.

"I can make enough gasoline out of a thimbleful of oil to run an auto a hundred miles," he said. "And the best of it is that we can carry the machinery right in the car to make all the gas we want, providing we can find oil, and that will not be difficult for you can find waste oil almost anywhere."

The Turk and Paddy Pinn set to work at once to plan for the auto.

"Wouldn't it be nice if we could have a nice long auto trip when you have built the auto," said the Lady of Fashion.

"We'd have to have more than one auto if we all took a trip," said the Turk.

"We could build a couple of big trucks," suggested Paddy Pinn. "They'd be more practical than just passenger autos, for we could use them for hauling things, and they could be used for the army, too."

Under the direction of the Turk and Paddy Pinn the little people carried many nails, screws, wire, bits of copper and brass, and piled them in a great heap near the tool house.

Then for many weeks there was much molding of brass and copper, pounding and drilling in the old tin can which served the little men for a work shop.

The Old Soldier and Gogo made the tires for the trucks, and it was no small job, for the little fellows had to cut up, melt and cast the tires and tubes from the rubber they stripped off an old overshoe.

After many weeks of hard work the trucks were finally finished, and when they had been covered with a coat of paint they were two of the prettiest and certainly the smallest autos ever seen.

While the trucks were being tested out, the General ordered the Teenie Weenies to get their things ready for a long trip.

Most of the little fellows were to go on the trip and for several days there was much cleaning of clothes and packing of tiny suit cases and grips.

Most of the things needed for camping, such as tents and the Cook's pans and kettles, were piled on top of the trucks, which left plenty of room inside where the little people could ride.

"Where are we g-g-goin', G-G-G-General?" asked the excited Dunce when the trucks were finally packed ready for the trip.

"Oh, I don't know," answered the General. "We're going to travel the open road. We may go to Waukegan, or Dayton, or Pittsburgh, or the Bronx."

When all was ready Paddy Pinn and the Turk cranked the tiny engines, and jumping into their seats they steered the little trucks from beneath the old rose bush.

lly. "Come and teach me sailing, Nina. I'd like it."

I went.

There aren't too many red letter days in my calendar; but there wasn't a black one in that fortnight. Margaret spent the days on the pier, showing off her new hats and dresses, and smiling at competing cavaliers. She always had a train of adorers. O! She was a pretty woman! She danced all the evenings. Robert and I sailed away the days in a twenty-foot half decked boat. In the evenings we went to concerts and entertainments, or walked—generally walked.

It did not occur to Robert to make love to me, and I did not try—I swear it—to put the notion in his mind. I just wanted him to be happier, and I made him. I was a fine pal, he told me, as we scudded back before the wind on the last afternoon.

"I'm glad," I said. "I like to be your pal, Bob."

"Thank you," he acknowledged, "dear old girl! Lord knows, I need one. Margaret——" He set his lips. "Our tastes differ a good deal," he concluded.

I nodded.

"It's just that," I consoled him. "Margaret is all right in her way. I am fond of her, you know." That was fairly true. "There's nothing in her little flirtations, Bob." That had a large element of truth. She skated on thin ice, but she did not go in. "She's fond of you, really." That was quite true. "I think, Bob, if you spoke to her frankly. If you said 'I'd like us to get on better, Maggie. I much prefer you to anyone else, and——' "

"I don't, Nina," he said, very, very quietly. "I haven't for several years. . . . Don't ask me questions."

"No," I promised faintly. "I won't."

I opened my mouth a little to catch the salt wind. It seemed to me that there was not air enough in the whole world, and that my heart was too small to hold my hot blood. I loved him as a mother loves her little child just then; this big, strong man. Our love should be silent and pure, I vowed, and everything else in my life should be set aside to do little things to brighten him.

"We won't talk about troubles," I said cheerfully. "Let's make the best of the comfort we have. . . . A good pal to sail a good boat! I'll put her nose into the waves and make her splash; and we'll get drenched and laugh like kids. Kids who are out with their pal!"

"Their pal!" he echoed. "Let's shake hands on that!"

O! That was a red letter afternoon. We went back to town that evening.

Things went badly between him and Margaret during the next year. He was too civil to her, and she was not civil enough to him. They had a bad quarrel, cold on his side and hot on hers, and decided to occupy separate rooms. Margaret told me herself. Her pink face was very red, and she gritted her splendid teeth.

"As he does not want me," she said, "the inference is obvious."

"That he thinks you want another man," I answered sharply.

"No one in particular," she rejoined pettishly. "I like dozens. That's my safety! He likes very few women. That's his danger. If you only like one you like too much."

"If," I cried scornfully. "It's like you to try and put the blame on him. He's worth a dozen of either of us. You're a silly, suspicious woman. Are you working round to object to me being friends with the poor, neglected boy?"

I never had a greater insult than her look of amazement then.

"You!" she cried with her big blue eyes wide open. She had lovely soft eyes and mine are hard, beady things. "You!" She laughed. I'd have liked to take her full throat in my hands and strangle the sneer. "No, I'm not so absurd as that. You just take the place of a sister to him. . . . You and I have been rather like sisters, Neen. . . . Don't look hurt, dear old thing. I didn't mean that a man couldn't like you very much, only—you are far too good a pal to me to let him flirt with you."

"I am his pal also, Margaret," I said steadily, "and, since you mention the matter to me, I don't blame him nearly so much as I blame you."

"I don't either," she agreed, "but still—I'm a cat, of course, but I only wanted just to have a little amusement. If he'd pulled me up as he ought to have done I'd have been pulled up after a kick or two, and—I suppose you know that I like him?"

"I suppose so," I answered, "but you've had a funny way of showing it."

"Well, you see, it may be only my fancy, but three or four years ago I thought that he cooled to me. If he'd been just angry or nasty and we'd quarreled I'd have made it up very nicely, but he didn't seem to want to make it up, and I thought—you'll laugh, but I did think that there must be some one else. I thought so the other day when we met—some one. I watched him talking to her. I am sure she likes him anyhow."

"Who?" I demanded. My voice was more anxious than I liked.

"Joyce Reed," Margaret told me.

"Joyce!" My laugh was very genuine. "You donkey! Why she's about twenty-four, and he's getting on to forty. He always likes kids, but he's quite fraternal to them. He doesn't even see her more than once in six months."

"Doesn't he? You know more of his doings than I do."

"More shame to you," I said vigorously. "Well, I don't think his doings concern baby Joyce. Robert's tastes are mature. I don't suppose his doings concern any woman, but he has not broached the subject to me."

"He might if you led him on a little," she suggested, with one of the pretty sideway looks that trap a man and warn a woman.

I rose to go.

"Margaret," I said sternly. "You disgust me. Robert is my friend. His friendship is a precious thing to me. I don't mind saying that to you, or on the housetops! He is absolutely the best man I know. If you dream that I would win his confidence and betray him to you, you are greatly mistaken. Look here! If I found him out I shouldn't tell you. That's flat!"

"No," she agreed. "I don't believe you would. You're a stiff creature! But you'd influence him. You're a better sort than you know. Influence him a little in this direction, Neen." She held out her grand arms. "He's my husband, and—" The red rushed over her handsome face and superb neck; even over her rounded arms—"I want him!"

"Umph!" I said. My voice was indifferent enough; but my heart was knocking to and fro, and screaming that she should not win him back from me.

"I know what you're thinking," she charged me; "but you're wrong. I don't want him to plague. I'd be good to him—now. Try, Neen. If you could put the idea of making it up into his head? It's natural to him to do the kind thing if he thinks of it. You could say it's a pity we squabble, because I can be nice, and—you could say you know I like him. . . . Will you, Neen? We never had sisters, you and I; only each other."

"I'll try," I answered.

That was a lie. I did not try to lead him back to her. I tried to alienate him; warned him against being fooled by her.

Margaret's affectionate mood soon passed. I knew it would! Their dissension became sharper and more in evidence. They never went out together; and whenever one dined at home the other dined with friends, or "in town."

I spoke to him frankly one evening when Margaret had gone out, and I had dropped in.

"Bob," I said, "you look upon me as a pretty trusty friend, I think."

"Indeed," he assured me, "I do! I'd trust you blind, Nina."

"There's something on your mind, I know. Would it help you to tell a pal?"

He leaned back in his chair and opened his cigaret case.

"No," I commanded, "a cigar! One of those you keep for special occasions. It will unruffle you. I'll get you one. Give me the key of the cabinet." I took the key from him and fetched him one of his "extravagances," as he calls them.

"There, old pal; the precious red band. See! Now you can talk."

"Good old Nina! How you know my ways and study me. . . . You see there are things that one can't talk about; things that concern other people."

I nodded.

"Talk about a man you know," I suggested, "and leave out people's names; and I'll advise you in the abstract."

He shook his head.

"I'm no good at acting, Neen. I'm talking about myself. . . . Eight years ago I married Margaret. Nobody blamed us. We appeared to be just suited. We didn't really suit, Neen; not even on the honeymoon. I remember—Bah! I'm gossiping like an old lady. Well, wherever the fault lay, we drifted away from each other. Possibly she didn't mean much harm by her flirtations; but they were sufficiently in evidence to humiliate her husband. I was too proud to own my hurt. I just gritted it out, till I didn't care a hang. Well, not much. . . . Anyhow, I was very lonely for a long time; and then I found . . . a very wonderful woman. . . . O! A very wonderful woman!"

"You thought her so," I said. I sighed.

"She was; and is. There has never been a word of love between me and her, Neen; but we know."

"Both of you?" I asked unsteadily. I caught sight of my face in the beveled mirror of a wall bracket just then; and it wavered. Pale, and with the young bloom gone, and never beautiful; but it looked loving, I thought. Ah! loving!

"Both of us," he said unhesitatingly. "Yes. Sometimes we have been near to the word; but we have paused in time. It is not my strength that keeps us as we are, but the strength that I get from her; my reverence for her goodness and daintiness. She is above all women. She——"

"Hush!" I said. "We are not talking of her, but of you. This is your story, which you are telling to your friend. . . . So truly your friend, Bob, you know."

"I know. . . . I don't want to sink in your estimation, friend. I will tell you how I looked at it. There is no wrong to Margaret, I said. For years she has not wanted me; and she has not scrupled to flirt with others. I do not say that she has been untrue to her marriage vow, as the world estimates it. I do not know."

"I do not know," I said in a faint whisper.

If I did a shameful, damnable thing from first to last it was when I said that. Margaret was an honest woman then. I had not the slightest doubt of it.

"There can be no wrong to myself. For love of—her whom I love—I am a better man; and our love is innocent and pure. . . . The question was about the girl. I kept out of her way for some years, for fear that her love for me—I knew it—would spoil her life. Then I saw that she meant to die a maid for love of me. Why should not she as well as I have the comfort of friendship, I argued. Well, we have it. I think life is just the hours that we spend together. . . . Is it very wrong, Neen?"

"Only unwise," I said still very faintly. "Is that all?"

"No," he put his cigar to his lips, but I saw that it had gone out.

"I'll light it," I offered.

It was growing dusk, and when the match flared up I seemed to see the Red Fisher in it, laughing triumphantly in the flare.

"Hook me, then!" my mind told him fiercely. I expected Robert's arm to go round me as I stood beside his chair, offering him the light. I held his wrist with one hand to steady the cigar. . . . The touch that I hungered for did not come.

"Thank you, Neen. You spoil me. . . . The devil of it is that Margaret has taken one of her turns—turned toward me as she might to a new flame. She wants to make it up. . . . Neen, I don't want her. I should not want her, if the other woman weren't in the world. Don't tell me it's my duty to make it up! . . . That's what I have on my mind; what I wanted to ask you, my good friend."

There was a long, long silence. I sat with my chin on my hand staring into the fire; made a picture there with the black and gold and amber and the gray smoke. . . . The Red Fisher dangled his feet merrily in the flames; set his teeth and forgot to smile as he played me at the end of the line; wondered—so did I!—if I was firmly hooked. I swam round and round, I thought, till the water ran in fast ripples that I could hear. Hiss-s-s-s. . . . That was only the sound of the flames. . . . Flap — flap — flap. . . . Only the puffs of the jets of coal-gas catching fire. . . . I put my hands on the arms of the chair. One more tightening of my nerves and I should go to Robert. I paused only for the right words. . . . Just his name. I would say "Bob, dear!" I drew a breath; half rose. . . . And heard Margaret's voice in the hall. She had come home. . . . What a magnificent woman she looked when she switched on the light at the door!

"I had a fancy to be domestic tonight," she said laughingly; "but I suppose you're going out, Bob?"

"I am going out," he told her and rose.

They looked hard at each other. Several times I thought they were going to speak, but they did not. She gasped when he had gone; clenched her hands. Presently she clutched my arm.

"He's going to her!" she hissed.

"Don't be a fool," I said.

"He wants to get rid of me," she said in my ear. "He thinks—Neen, he's having me watched!"

"He would, if I were he," I told her—that was not true. I had no suspicion of her—"but he isn't. I should think it's your conscience; if you have one."

"Until tonight I had," she told me furiously. "Now it's gone. I came home to try and put things right. I was ready to humble myself to him." She laughed wildly. "You side with him, of course. I daresay you'd try to marry him, if I was gone!"

"Margaret!"

"I didn't mean it, Neen. Don't you turn on me. You're the only pal I have. Women don't like me . . . Well, men do! . . . Can't you help me, Neen? I tell you I'm desperate. Do you understand?"

"What do you mean?" I clutched her arm.

"Why should I stay with a man who despises me when another adores me? I've been a good woman till now, but . . . You don't know what temptation is——"

"Who is it?"

"I didn't say it was any one. . . . Don't stare at me like that! You look a—a devil! . . . If I did, he'd have driven me to it; he's a cold brute. He——' '

"I won't listen to abuse of him," I said.

"Don't go," she pleaded. I want help—I —I——"

I closed the door upon her.

I called at Robert's office the next morning and saw him alone.

"Bob," I said, "I've got to be disloyal to one friend or another. You have to come first. . . . You are—of all friends—dearest to me. . . . I can't see your life spoilt by a tie that you honor, and she—if I were you I should have Margaret watched. . . . Not a word. It doesn't bear discussion."

He rose slowly; staggered; rested his hand on the table.

"Nina?" he said hoarsely. "You know that she——?"

"Have her watched," I said sharply. Then I turned and walked out. I went away for a month. When I came back he had taken proceedings for his divorce.

I don't know what kink in my character took me to the court. He had kept me out of it, of course, and I needn't have gone. Margaret was foolish enough to fight the case. I don't think she expected to save herself, only wanted to say what she said in the box.

"I have done things that lay me open to suspicion," she said, looking like a beautiful, pale statue, "things that I should not have done. I deserved to lose my husband's affection; but I tried to win it back. He did not want me back. That made me desperate, and I——"

"You have not answered my plain question, madam," Robert's counsel interrupted. He repeated the question—I need not name it—and she fainted in the box. She did not reappear and her counsel accepted judgment against her. I sometimes wonder whether she merely let judgment go by default to give Robert his freedom. The man protested her innocence, but he married her afterwards. I do not trouble very much about Margaret even now. I did not trouble about her at all then. My brain was in a mad whirl thinking of the time when Robert would come as a free man to me. I went away to the sea, which we loved, to wait for him.

He did not come.

It was his idea of my 'goodness' and 'delicacy' that delayed him, I suppose. He thought that I should not wish him to speak yet. I meant him to keep that idea all our lives. I decided to go back to town and wait patiently till we met in the usual course of friendship. He was away in the country, I found. His mother told me.

"You were a friend of Margaret's," she said, "but I think you wish for Robert's happiness."

"Indeed," I said, "I do, Mrs. Carr. Believe me I was, and am, a friend of Robert's, too. . . . He deserves happiness; and if it depended on my wish——"

I drew a deep breath; wondered whether the foolish fellow feared that I would refuse him for some scruple, because I had been Margaret's friend. . . .

"Then," she said, "you will like to know that he has it. . . . He is staying with the Reed's. There is no engagement yet; but he and Joyce . . ."

I do not remember the rest. I found myself wiping my face with my handkerchief and feeling as if I had just 'come to' at the dentist's from laughing gas.

"It is very hot," I said; "very hot. . . . I feel as if something is sticking in my throat!"

The Red Fisher knew what it was.

cut Bee short in a marvelous and luxurious yawn.

"Oh, you go, Nan," she said. "If it's for me, excuse me, please. Probably, though, it's for you."

It was. I heard Sylvia's voice with a muffled sob in it at the other end of the line.

"Nan, dear," she said. "Could you manage to get away now, right now this minute, without telling Bee why?"

"I don't know. Perhaps," I answered.

"It's important," she said. "Thorne is coming up for you now in his car, and he'll bring you down here to my studio, if you can be ready."

"Can't you tell me what it's about, Sylvia?" I asked. "You know it's late, and if it could keep until tomorrow——"

"Oh, no, no," she wailed. "You must come now. I must tell you."

"Very well," said I. "I'll be ready when Thorne comes."

I hung up the receiver, and explained to Bee as well as I could that Sylvia had left something behind her and that Thorne was coming back for it, and that she, Bee, might go to bed, and after seeing Thorne off for the second time I would crawl into the downy myself.

Bee took my lame explanation like a lamb. The truth is she was so tired that I might have told her nothing at all, but just gone, and she never would have noticed any lack on my part. However, I did give this much of a reason for Thorne's return, and when his car stopped at our door a few minutes later I was waiting.

"Sylvia and I are married."

I could scarcely believe the words that he flung at me. It was as if somewhere, not too far away, a bomb had burst and the fragments of a shattered world were tumbling about my ears. I did my best in the whirling mists where I seemed to stand to grasp as it swung past the conventional phrase and convey it to him.

"How? What? Congratulations—I am so glad——" I stumbled dizzily and wondered miserably how much of what I mumbled got through the mists to him.

"Hold hard, Nan! What's the matter?" sounded his cheery voice.

I felt without knowing that I was crying. Certainly I was not crying on my own doorstep, but somewhere, wretchedly, far off, where nobody was near me, where Thorne Shorey had never been heard of, where I trailed alone like a fallen star doomed to eternal night and eternal falling.

"Nan, dear! Nan!" It must have been Thorne's voice though I never had heard it with just that note in it before. "Nan, dear—darling! Don't cry!"

How could Thorne call me darling when he was married to Sylvia?

"You are married to Sylvia? You told me that?" I asked, wondering if my lips would ever really move like lips should move again. They felt hard and set—so hard—so set.

"That's what I said," Thorne chuckled.

How could he? How could he? The lightness with which he took the words he was speaking cut through the black clouds that hid him from me. A wave of indignation swept over me, saving me from that fearful place of utter darkness. I pulled myself together and faced him sternly.

"I hope you'll be very happy," this time I heard my voice more distinctly. "Sylvia is perfectly wonderful——"

"Much too good for me," assented Thorne. "Oh, Nan darling, you are marvelous!"

The "darling" swept me off my feet again, threatening me with returning waves of red shot black.

"Listen, Nan," I realized he was more serious than I now. "I'm not married to Sylvia, nor ever will be. It's you I want to marry—you. I have loved you since—since—" he stumbled—"I can't think when. Always, I guess. But you were so sure of yourself and so independent, and so full of business and so scornful of the mere masculine, that I never dared speak to you much."

"Why, Thorne Shorey!" Some of what he was pouring out at the rate of a thousand golden words a second reached me in my land on the edge of things. He never spoke to me? He, with whom I had grown up, afraid of me! He—loved me! This last thought roused me, and silenced me. I stood and waited.

"It's true, Nan, dear. Then Sylvia came along, after Bee and your advertising business and the war and everything, and I saw you thought I was falling in love with her. She saw it, too. She made me see that you were. She thought of this scheme. Was it cruel, Nan? But I had to know whether you cared for me, just a little." How soft his voice could be when he pleaded! "I had to know, darling—because I love you—I want you—to marry me." His voice dropped for a minute, but not too low for me to hear each word.

Then he went on. "Sylvia thought of this plan finally to startle you. She said, perhaps, if you cared, it would startle you if I told you I had married some one else. Did it, Nan?"

It had sent me to the regions of outer darkness. It had spun my little world for me in a thousand rings, each ring heavier and more black with pain. It had cast me from the earth I knew to an earth I knew not, and from which I shuddered. Did it startle me? I took a step forward.

"Then it did startle you, Nan?" was all he said, but his arms went around me.

When the world steadied again I realized suddenly that the motor of his car was still running. I reminded him of it, shyly. Thorne as my lover scared me a bit—just a bit. I would not have had the scare different for all the gold the earth might hold.

"The car?" I murmured.

"Let it run, sweetheart," said Thorne. "I wish the horn would start up blowing, too—the more noise the better. I wish every one would hear it and come out and let me shout to them: 'Nan is going to marry me!' O, Nan, dearest darling, what makes you do it?"

"Just because," said I, and with that he had to be satisfied. Then a thought struck me. What about Sylvia? Did she really want to see me? Or had her message been from end to end a fake? I asked Thorne, and he reassured me. It had been a fake—an absolutely respectable, self-explanatory fake from beginning to end. Even the sob had been an histrionic bit suggested by himself, but elaborated by Sylvia. If I had not been so happy I should have shaken him.

"Then Sylvia is all right?" I said.

"Right as rain," he assented cheerfully.

"And we don't have to go to her studio?"

"Not a bit of it."

If Bee had not yet just then opened the window above our heads, we should probably be standing on my front doorstep still. As it was she startled us. Thorne sprang away (about three inches) and I looked up.

"Have you given Thorne Sylvia's wrap?" said Bee.

"Sylvia's wrap? O, yes, yes—he has it. He's just going," I gave Thorne the tiniest push in the direction of his car.

"Listen, Bee," he said. His face lit with a smile and he twinkled mischievously at me as he caught my hands and held me close to him again for a minute. "Nan's going to marry me! How does that strike you? Sylvia settled it tonight."

"It's a very good plan." Bee was too sleepy to jump with enthusiasm. "I always thought she would anyway."

"Why, Beatrice!" No one ever called Bee that except in intense moments. "You—you—fibber!"

"Have it out with her tomorrow, darling," Thorne suggested.

His engine gave an extra loud purr.

"Well, all right, old car; I expect I must be going." Once more the world dropped away, but this time it was clouds of rose and gold my spirit trod, a million miles removed from the black abyss where first I had fallen. "Good-night, darling. You may settle Sylvia—and settle with Bee when you get her alone—but, thank heaven, Sylvia settled this without you!"

Before my gasp of astonishment he fled. His car moved swiftly around the corner. I turned and went back into our flat. Was it—could it—had it happened?

"I think," said Bee from the door of her room, "that I shall make the firm 'Marshall, Sutton & Dare'—Sylvia is too good a matrimonial agent to be left in the cold any longer."

"Sylvia had nothing to do with——" Then I stopped. Thorne's words shone before me. "All right, Bee," I said. "We'll let Sylvia in. Now, is she settled in your mind satisfactorily?"

"Yes." Bee stifled a yawn. "I do, honestly, darling, wish you the happiest of lives. I'll tell you more about it in the morning. But tell me something — didn't you think Richard Stuart seemed nice?"

Bee is incorrigible.

"Prospect for Sylvia?" said I.

"Or Jean La Reigne?" but she blushed as she spoke.

I looked at her thoughtfully. It was all very well for one of us to marry, but for three? No. I drew myself up.

"Bee," said I, "there must be moderation in all things. If you want to spoil a perfectly good story you'll marry Jean and Sylvia will marry Mr. Stuart. Then we'll have the customary happy ending and every one will be satisfied. But you aren't sure you love Jean, and you know Sylvia doesn't care a scrap in the world about Mr. Stuart, so why drag them in to ruin the whole thing? Do have a little sense. You know I'm right, don't you?"

"Perhaps," assented Bee, "And, again, perhaps not!"

Which Ne'er Forgot Shall Be

By Oney Fred Sweet

ON summer evenings, Mrs. Ed McTosh liked to take her rocking chair out in the yard and sit there until it grew dark or the mosquitoes became to thick. The McTosh house had been built for winter coziness, and it was a stuffy place along in July.

Mrs. McTosh sought the yard when her work was done. There was her peony bed and the apple tree, and if one pumped long enough, the well outside the hot kitchen gave up a cool drink of water. And at that time of day Ed was never around to bother. He always hit off downtown right after supper. Neighbors dropped in but seldom. Mrs. McTosh was sour of visage and sharp of tongue.

Mrs. McTosh was seated in her rocker one evening when Ed, who had not been gone more than an hour, came along the board sidewalk and turned in on the narrower walk that led to the slanting front porch. What on earth had brought him back? Then came the explanation. He was carrying a traveling bag, and just back of him was a woman.

"Come over here, Annie."

"What ya want?"

"Come over here." And then in explanatory tones to the owner of the battered traveling bag, "Annie's getting on in years. She'll be 80 next November."

Mrs. McTosh did not budge from the rocker. And, like Mohammed, Ed went to where she sat.

"It's a chautauqua lady," the old fellow began. "I was down to the hotel when she came in. Rooms was all taken by traveling men. I spoke up and I says we had a room we might rent for the night."

The aged woman's reply reached Madame Tretino, clearly. "You old fool. Don't think I'm going to give her the parlor, do you? Needn't think I'm going to let her use that bed with the silk piece spread. What was you thinking of?"

"It's all right, madame," called Ed McTosh back over his left shoulder. "Just step right in and make yourself welcome. I got to get back downtown now, myself."

Mrs. McTosh grunted, and Madame Tretino opened the screen door and stepped inside. She had no difficulty in locating the parlor. The silk piece spread had been in evidence the moment she had opened the screen door.

The parlor proved to have other features. There was a faded framed photograph of the house, taken thirty years before, that hung on the wall, and in front of the house there was a boy on a pony—no doubt that of a lad whose name was McTosh and who was now—well, where? And there was a bit of scripture worked in yarn above the door. And on the dresser there was a flowered toilet set that apparently had never been used more than a couple of times.

It was evident that Ed and Annie McTosh had pioneered it in Daleville, had lived for forty years in that same house on the edge of the town. But Madame Tretino hardly gave the room a glance. She flopped her bulk on the silk patch spread and felt of her shoe at the place where her corn pained. She was thus sitting when Mrs. McTosh neared in the deepening twilight.

"I don't see what Ed——"

Madame Tretino was on her feet, corn or no corn. "Don't bother me just before I sing. I must get right over to the tent. My voice! I must collect myself."

"Well, you'll not collect yourself on that silk piece spread."

It was woman against woman. Temperaments as opposite as the poles clashing.

Mrs. McTosh went to the bed and carefully folded up the silk piece spread and bore it triumphantly from the room. The madame let loose in foreign tongue.

Annie McTosh was alone again in the rocker. The madame had gone to the tent. Folks were passing on the sidewalk in front to attend the evening's program. Mrs. Christensen called to her.

"Better come and go along, Mrs. McTosh. I got an extra ticket."

"I guess not. I'll sit right here. Ain't been to any of 'em yet."

"Now you just come on. You're spry enough. I think it's remarkable the way you hang on and the way you get around. You ought to have heard that concert last night."

"I said, no."

Mrs. Christensen crossed the blue grass and the foxtail to the rocker. "Now you come on. Just the way you are."

And when the program started in the big tent Mrs. McTosh was there. She was sitting with the Christensens near the back.

We come on an American town as it is, and we forget that its people represent so many different nationalities. So thoroughly does the small town assimilate its folks that we forget that this heart—far back in a hidden corner—retains traditions and memories so vastly removed from what is hidden in another.

The memories are locked. It is on the babies that are born and grow up and marry in the new environment that conversation turns. There is the weather, and the automobiles, and the crops, and the presidential election. The banker is building a new house and the wife of the clerk in the dry goods store is said to be poorly.

Mrs. McTosh had come along with Mrs. Christensen. But she did not permit herself to enter into the spirit of the thing. When Madame Tretino came out to the footlights, made possible by a connection with the power plant, she did notice that the lady wore a gown and a smile that had not been associated with their meeting in the parlor. But the face of Mrs. McTosh remained sour as the madame gave her first number—a foreign thing that it was impossible to make anything out of.

There was perfunctory applause, and Madame Tretino came back. She had left her plume fan behind. The orchestra played a bar or two that sounded familiar to Mrs. McTosh. And then—there was no mistaking—Madame Tretino was singing—she was singing "Annie Laurie."

She was singing with an accent now, but it was with an accent, a perfect accent, that caused Mrs. McTosh to forget that she was sitting beside Mrs. Christensen and her neighbor's daughter, Ella, made her forget that she was in the tent, that she was in Daleville. Forty years vanished.

Mrs. McTosh was back in the days when her face had been "like the snowdrift" and she had given Ed "her promise true."

He had been a fine, upstanding man in those days, Ed had. All the other girls back there in the little town had wanted him, but he had chosen her.

She tried to recall just when she had started to complain in all her conversation with Ed. Had he started it or had she? There were just a few more years together for them—a few years, at the best. He had his faults. But they had stayed by each other. And they had their home in a peaceful country, and their wants were few.

The song was over. Madame Tretino was giving another number that might be operatic, but it was hard to understand. Mrs. Christensen leaned over to whisper that the Ellis boy was there that night with Jim Reardon's youngest girl.

Mrs. McTosh hardly heard her. She hardly realized when the program was over. She walked slowly home with Mrs. Christensen. She was sitting up when Ed came.

"Little late getting home, Annie. We got into an argument down there at the hotel."

Madame Tretino came in and made straight for the parlor and shut the door.

"Was you down there to that hotel talking politics all evening, Ed?"

"Well, you know how it is when a bunch gets started."

The clock on the mantel struck midnight when Mrs. McTosh crept from her husband's side. She crept quietly. Softly she opened the parlor door. She had something on her arm. And she tucked it over the tired sleeper without arousing her—the silk piece spread.

Mrs. McTosh was stealing back into her own bed again when Ed heard her.

"What's the matter, Annie? What you up tearin' around this time o' night for?"

And Mrs. McTosh replied, sharply, "O keep your mouth still."

The Story of Three Girls and a Venture in Business That Turned Out to Be an Adventure in Love

BETWEEN what Sylvia thought she wanted and what she really wanted there was a world of difference. Not that Sylvia saw the difference, but we saw it—Bee and I, who had been Sylvia's bosom friends from our mutual perambulator days. Sylvia thought she wanted a job—what she really wanted was, of course, a husband.

Bee put it more delicately when she and I talked over Sylvia and her future at one of our weekly fudge meetings. Bee said Sylvia needed a controlling influence in her life—a masculine viewpoint. She even tried to be pathetic and murmur something about "tiny hands," but I shut her off promptly. There is no use in allowing Bee's sentimental nature to run away with my common sense. She has none herself, so I have to keep mine intact for the two of us.

Bee and I are advertisers. We have an office and a name (followed by "Inc." most prominently slanted to catch the doubting eye), and we really are doing a fair amount of business. We started in wartime, and have kept on the job ever since. Bee took it up to comfort herself for the loss of Bob Mathers, the man she was engaged to who got killed somewhere in France—and I got into it because I thought advertising was jolly good sport. Now Sylvia had turned up, seen us, and in consequence thought she wanted a job, too.

Sylvia is twenty-five, but she looks about seventeen. She is tiny and blonde, slim and graceful, with hair as yellow as a field of buttercups in the sun and eyes bluer than the August depths of the North sea. She is quick, clever, feminine—and has no more business in business than any girl you can possibly imagine. Still, she thought she wanted a job, and Bee and I felt bound by our perambulator remembrances to help her to what she wanted.

"And," said Bee to me confidentially, "there are lots of nice men in business."

"I'm not going around like a matrimonial bureau agent, Bee," I warned her. "If Sylvia gets a job through us it's strictly business."

"Very well," said Bee, but I knew she was cuddling her little nefarious schemings for Sylvia's husband in her heart. From that time on every man who darkened our office would be (in Bee's mind) a prospect for Sylvia.

Only one thing reassured me—Sylvia's attitude about herself. She was sure that all she wanted was a job and that a job was all she wanted. What job? was the question.

"It's not as if I were trained to anything, Nan," she said to me, bringing out the platitudinous remark with an air of sweet originality. "I can do a lot of things, but I haven't any one special thing that I can do especially well. What do you think I had better try?"

"If you could have your choice of all the jobs in the world, what would you choose?" said I, feeling my way.

"I'd rather be a writer," said Sylvia, "or a painter, or——"

"Wait! Wait! For heaven's sake, Sylvia! Those aren't jobs—those are professions. You can't fall into writing or painting—it has to be born in you. Certainly you haven't a chance in a thousand of dropping successfully into a niche occupied by an author or artist, and saying, 'Let me help you, please,' and getting away with it."

Sylvia became unexpectedly stubborn.

"I don't see why something like that might not come up," she said. "An author might get sick or even have a bad stye in one eye" (Sylvia can be horribly practical when she chooses), "or an artist might, and they might long for some one to dictate to or to ask for brushes or paints from. It could be possible."

"Perhaps," I scoffed.

"Anyway," said Sylvia, "we can advertise for what I want, and see if we get any answers."

"We"—evidently Bee and I were in Sylvia's job for good.

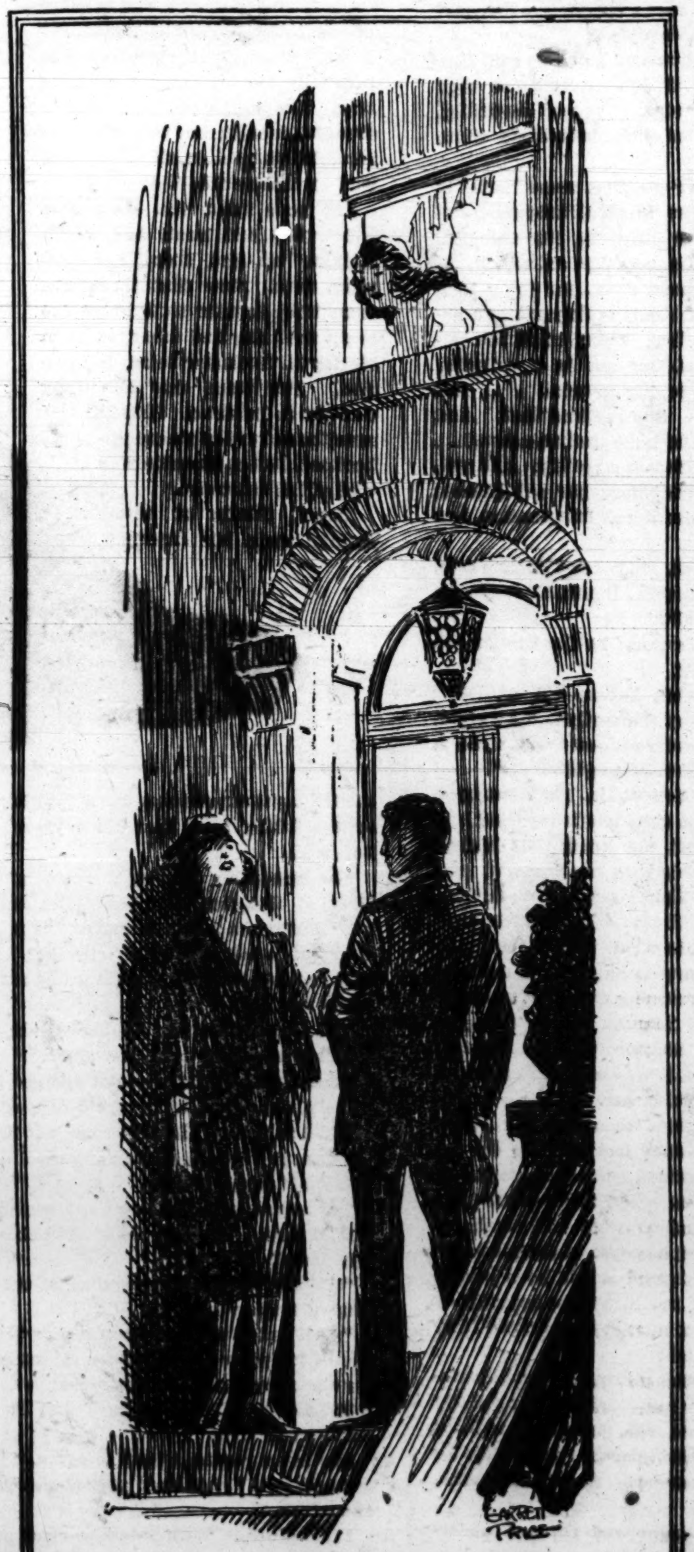
I thought over several ways of putting Sylvia's idea of making herself useful into words which might attract a sick or curious writer or painter. It seemed hopeless, but finally Sylvia approved of this: "If you want the help of a mind trained to know good writing, or of an eye that appreciates good color—if you are a writer or an artist who wants encouragment and cheerful suggestions—call Midway 8620."

Bee read it over my shoulder, and laughed.

"Where are you going to run this, Sylvia?" she asked. "It will cost you a small fortune to put it in all the Sunday papers."

"That's exactly where it is going," said Sylvia firmly. "You pay for it, Nan, and have it put in big letters at the top of a page, and we'll see if there isn't a discouraged or styey somebody in Chicago who won't jump at the chance of a little cheerful encouragement.' She looked the lines over again critically. "It was brilliant of you to put the word cheerful in. Everybody needs that in every kind of business."

It is hard to squelch Sylvia. She seems so harmless and innocent and young, even when she is engaged in the most scatterbrained actions. I looked from her to my typed paragraph, and groaned.



"Sylvia's wrap? O, yes, yes—he has it. He's just going."

"If you don't get any answers you can blame yourself for your wasteful extravagance," was all I said.

We sent the ad to the papers in time to make the Sunday editions. While we waited for Sunday to come, Sylvia began to plan her atmosphere. She had been living with Bee and myself in our little flat near the university campus, but now that was too prosaic a setting for her budding job genius. She needed more room for thought—so she said.

We went studio hunting with her, and called in Thorne Shorey to take her about after she had worn us out. He was tremendously enthusiastic over her at once, and wished loudly that he were a painter or writing chap so that he might come in for some of those cheerful suggestions she was so soon to bestow.

"But at a salary," Sylvia chided his enthusiasm soberly.

"You'll charge enough, I guess," said Thorne.

"I haven't thought about that part of it much," Sylvia confessed. "I thought I'd wait and see what my discouraged employer looks like first. If he turns out very poor I couldn't ask much."

I laughed. Bee stopped me with a glance. She believed in Sylvia if I didn't, and, anyway, from her point of view it was not the money that was important or that she wanted for Sylvia, but the prospective husband.

"Why wouldn't Thorne do?" I whispered wickedly.

Thorne Shorey is one of the nicest young men I know. He would make any girl a marvelous husband. I really thought him too good for Sylvia—though she is an awfully nice girl.

"Too practical," sniffed Bee.

I saw she had made up her mind to secure flowing ties and long hair under a wide brimmed gray felt hat for Sylvia, and I left her to her madness.

Sylvia found her studio Friday. Thorne really found it—through a friend of his who was a student in Lorado Taft's studio on the Midway—but Sylvia never let him claim a scrap of fame for the discovery. She said: "I just walked in; and there it was as if made for me. It belonged to me as though I had known and loved it always." (Sometimes I feel like shaking Sylvia.) Then she looked at Thorne with those North sea blue eyes of hers, and added, "It was so convenient that Mr. Shorey's friend had planned a trip to France about now." But not a hint more came from her that the whole arrangement whereby she got her duck of a place for the infinitesimal sum of $35 a month was due to Thorne Shorey.

Sunday morning Sylvia was at our flat before breakfast. We were glad she came, for Chicago seemed full of people all in desperate need of just the assistance her advertisement offered.

Sylvia had a quick way of disposing of them. If she liked the sound of their voice she took their telephone numbers and promised to call them in the evening. If they were impertinent (and some, I grieve to state, were) she told them icily that her services were already engaged. If they seemed nice and strictly businesslike she assured them she would call in person at their studios or offices the following morning before twelve. She finally had promised to make fifteen calls before twelve o'clock the next day, and I suggested, a trifle caustically, that she had better fill her afternoon, too.

Sylvia let the sarcasm roll from her like water off a duck's back, and started making afternoon engagements. Then she remembered she was going somewhere to tea at four o'clock, and changed her business appointments to Tuesday morning. As Sylvia rarely gets up before ten, I doubted whether all the writers and painters who needed encouragement would get it at the stipulated time. However, that really was not my affair, so I tried to bury myself in the news section of the paper, and close my ears to Sylvia and the ringing phone.

Finally I heard her give a gurgle of delight—"Jean La Reigne!" she said and then a torrent of French, ending with a phrase that hastily translated into English would run: "Of course, I'll meet you—tomorrow? Yes, at three o'clock—at Adams and Michigan. By the institute? Yes—so glad to know you are here. Good-by." And Sylvia hung up the receiver to turn a delighted countenance on us.

"Who do you suppose that was?" she gasped.

We expressed proper ignorance.

"Jean La Reigne! My French god-son! I haven't seen him since Paris, the night of the armistice. What do you suppose he's over here for?"

Again we confided to her our intense ignorance as to the young man and his movements.

"Why, to paint, of course, stupids! He's a marvelous artist, really he is, and he's here now doing some portrait commissions. He's gotten into sort of a tangle with one of his pictures, and he saw my ad and called up. Isn't it wonderful?"

I agreed it was. Too wonderful. But I also promised myself to take more than one look at the young La Reigne. He sounded a bit, just a bit, you know—incredible—to me.

"That's enough," said Sylvia when the persistent telephone rang again. "You go, Nan, like a dear, and tell every one that I am already engaged. I have taken a job!"

To my secret delight the next morning Sylvia was up before either Bee or myself had got down to the breakfast table. We found her sipping a cup of steaming coffee and busily arranging in alphabetical order a list of the names of the persons on whom she had promised to call.

"I feel as though something horrible were hanging over me," she laughed nervously to Bee. "Is it very hard to interview people?'

"You shouldn't be frightened," said Bee. "Your Red Cross work should have left you nerved for any ordeal."

"Besides," said I, "this isn't something hard you have to do. Just be cheerful and be sure that the men who want your services are really in need of them."

Sylvia shot me a troubled glance.

SETTLING SYLVIA

"That's what's bothering me," she confessed. "How can one be sure?"

"In business and with a salary to pay," I reassured her drily, "men don't take something which they can do without. If you are doubtful, double the money you meant to ask for and see what happens."

We left Sylvia at her first address, on the way to the office.

"It may be a hard lesson for the child" (Bee always spoke as though Sylvia were ten instead of two years younger than herself), "but she can't come to much harm."

"To none at all," I answered promptly, "if she keeps her wits about her. I don't think we need worry."

"At twelve o'clock Sylvia turned up smiling.

"What luck?" we chorused.

"I have one man for three hours a week who writes poetry. He wants some one to listen to his verses and criticise them intelligently."

Bee and I exchanged glances.

"Then I promised a Miss Winslow to come two mornings a week and sit for her. She had been looking for a girl with yellow hair to pose for a picture she is painting for the fall show. She said mine was just the right shade."

"Where does Miss Winslow work?" I asked cautiously.

"She has a dear little studio on Ohio street—not too far from my poetry man. I think I can manage them both on the same days." Sylvia was flushed with triumph.

"Any one else?" said Bee.

"Four doubtful ones," said Sylvia. "One sort of fat man who smiled too much, and a thin, nervous man, a painter, whose studio smelled of garlic and who kept rubbing his hands together. I told them my charge was ten dollars an hour, and they didn't think they could pay that much."

Bee gasped, but I felt like patting Sylvia on the shoulder. We could trust her at least to keep out of unpleasant company.

"Then another was a woman, quite nice, too, but she is a musician, and, though I do know some music" (Sylvia could play at sight with one finger, readily, and by ear if she didn't pay too much attention to what notes came next), "I didn't think I could play duets with her or those four handed pieces some people are so thrilled about."

I did not think she could, either, and felt relieved, for the poor lady's sake, that Sylvia's cheerfulness had not led her into taking that opportunity.

"Who was the fourth?" said Bee.

"A sad-faced boy," Sylvia's tone took on a reflective note, "who was playing a flute when I knocked. He asked me to come in, most politely, but there was only one chair, and he sat on a trunk. I decided I couldn't be much help to him. I encouraged him to go home and get his father to help him. His father had wanted him to go into a bank, but he wanted to be a sculptor, so he had run away from home." She drew a long breath. "That part of it," she said, "was just like a piece from a book."

"How did it finally come out?" Bee interrupted her reverie.

"O, he promised to think about going home, and I promised to come in again some time and see if he had gone. I can't think he's much of a sculptor. He seemed too—too—oh, more like some one who asks you, 'Is there anything I can do for you today, Miss?' You know, he belongs more to hardware or rugs or a bank or something, than to the art of Michel Angelo."

"I hope you didnt say that to him?" I snapped, sharply.

"Of course not," said Sylvia; "I just hinted it to him."

"So, all told," reflected Bee, "you have now two jobs, and how many more people to see?"

"Six this afternoon, Jean La Reigne, and five tomorrow morning."

"That's quite enough," said I, shutting my desk. "Let's go to lunch now, and discuss something sensible."

"Roast beef and gravy," Bee knew my failing.

"If you like, anything you like, only do hurry. I'm starving."

We found Sylvia at home that night, waiting for us on the couch. She had arranged for three afternoons with the young French painter and for two mornings with a busy club woman who wanted numerous notes and papers gone over and filed in orderly manner.

"I've called up the rest of my clients," Sylvia breezed through the words with an air quite comme-il-faut, the newness of her job was already an old tale to her, "and told them I was sorry but I could not arrange just now to undertake more work. I promised to keep their names and to telephone if I had an hour to spare later on."

"You mean, by clients, the people you promised to see tomorrow?" I asked.

"Yes, of course," Sylvia looked surprised.

"You are a remarkable infant," said I, "a prodigy of the first water, to transfer the position of employer and employé respectively, to all intents and purposes, with only twelve hours between changes."

"Don't laugh at her," said Bee. "I think Sylvia is being remarkably clever."

"That's just what I was commenting on—her cleverness," said I. "She's phenomenal."

"Wait and see if I make good," Sylvia interrupted, quickly. "I may fall down on the job."

"You will not!" Bee never could brook a touch of cowardice in some one she loved. "Of course you'll make good! You'll be perfectly splendid. You do know poetry, and you can pose, and you——"

"Hear! Hear!" sounded Thorne Shorey's cheerful voice from the door. "Who is this having bouquets thrown at them? Please don't forget me. I'm next in line."

He came in brimming over with good spirits. He is a most likable boy. Why Bee should speak of him with a sniff as "too practical"—but there, you never can always understand Bee.

"Just in time, Thorney," said Bee, "to hear all about Sylvia's job. I think we've got her settled."

"If she's the one you were spouting those things about poetry and posing and so forth at, when I came in, I'll say you've got her settled." He gave a laugh and crossed over to plump himself down on the couch by Sylvia, after giving Bee and me a hearty grip in passing.

"Sylvia's hired herself out to four different people," said I, "and now she's feeling a little worried that she may not be able to give them their money's worth."

"Don't let that worry you long, Miss Dare; they'll get all they want from you. What are you contracting to do?"

"Pose," said Sylvia, "and listen to poetry, and fix up notes and papers for a club woman."

"Sounds like a full week ahead," said Thorne.

Just then San Wing, our young Jap man-of-all-work, who took care of us like so many children in the leisure hours of his acquiring a university education, opened the door of our apartment to a brisk ring. There was a murmur of voices in the hall for a minute before San Wing announced a name so unintelligible that none of us caught it.

It was Jean La Reigne, a tall, slim, dark chap who followed close upon the Jap's introduction. Sylvia sprang to her feet.

"It was nice of you to come up this evening, Jean," she said. "Nan, may I introduce M. La Reigne, my war god-son I spoke to you about—and Miss Sutton, M. La Reigne—Mr. Shorey. M. La Reigne. This is so nice, Jean," she flashed again, and motioned him to a seat beside her as we all paused a moment after the first hearty greetings.

In the moment's pause between Jean's entry and the conversation becoming general again, I could feel Thorne Shorey and the young Frenchman summing each other up—with an eye, you may be sure—on the effect the other was possibly creating upon Sylvia. At such times I long, occasionally, for golden hair, blue eyes, and a cherub's smile, but perhaps it is just as well that I am without those attributes; some one has to be just everyday good looking to set our beauties off.

I came back from my day dreaming in time to catch Bee's question.

"But what possible use can you make of Sylvia in those hours for which she tells us you have engaged her?" Bee's voice was more gentle than her words.

"Did she not tell you that, too?" Jean's accent was slight, but you felt he would have a delightful way of twisting the English language to convey his French idioms. "I am just now painting the portraits of little children. Five or six of them. Beautiful as angels—but naughty as—as——" the shrug expressed it. "Miss Sylvia is delightful with children. I have seen her play with them by the hour in the little town of Dijon, where I, too, was quartered for some time with your Yankee troops. I want her to tell stories to my Chicago children while they sit to be painted, just as she told them to the Dijon children to bring smiles to their faces that would chase away the tears. France wept too easily before our armistice day in Paris."

"France may have wept," said Sylvia, "but she could smile, too, and more than anything else she could fight."

Jean turned to Thorne.

"Perhaps—but, of course—you were there, monsieur?"

"Yes," said Thorne, "I saw most of it. I got in early in the Foreign legion."

The impulsive young artist sprang to his feet and grasped Thorne's hand again.

"I am proud, M. Shorey, to meet you."

"O, that's all right," Thorne wriggled uncomfortably. He had never in all the years I had known him cared to be praised or fussed over. It may have been the British reserve of his forefathers showing through, but a less vainglorious boy than Thorne Shorey I have rarely met with.

San Wing saved further embarrassment by appearing at this minute.

"Dinner," was his laconic salutation.

We received it joyously. There was, at our table, always room and to spare for guests. It was the kind of a table with leaves that opened easily, and the kind of a kitchen where an extra plate or two was always to be found, and San Wing was the kind of a chef to whom cooking was an art to be practiced with the more pleasure, the more numerous the persons who would partake of his culinary triumphs.

During dinner we discovered that La Reigne was something of a musician, and he and Bee were deep in a discussion of our modern composers by the time cigarets were passed and the coffee was put on the table. Sylvia dabbled on the edge of the talk, but for Thorne and myself the waters rapidly became too deep. We exchanged glances. Bee had not shown so much interest in anything as she was showing now, since the cable in January of 1917 telling of Bob's death. That message seemed to kill her enthusiasms. But in this talk with La Reigne much of her old time vivaciousness was springing to life.

I suddenly realized where my thoughts were leading me, and checked them. Bee might plot for a husband for Sylvia as much as she liked, but I would not consider any man in the light of a possible husband for Bee. Bee and I were partners, a closed corporation, manproof, and though there were no "keep off" signs visible, yet I was not a bit desirous of masculine efforts at entry. So I shook myself hard, and suggested that we adjourn M. De Bussy and Rachmaninoff to the living room.

Bee sat herself down at the piano and illustrated the point she had been trying to make with a few chords.

"Yes, yes," said La Reigne, "but do you mind if I show you this—listen—it goes——" and striking a note he hummed a melody that made Bee suddenly clasp her hands tightly together.

"Where did you hear that first?" she said in such a funny choked voice that we all looked at her startled.

"Let me think," La Reigne paused a moment. "Ah, I have it! It was a Captain Robert Mathers who showed me how that point you brought up should be pictured by this song."

"Captain Mathers!" I spoke sharply. "Where did you know him?"

"I first knew him at Reims." La Reigne seemed to feel of a sudden that we were all hanging on his words. "Pardon me, was he a friend of yours?"

"He was the man I was going to marry," said Bee softly.

"O, I am sorry. I did not know. I——"

"It's all right," said Bee. "I should like to hear you tell about him. Did you see him often? Look, this is a picture of him taken before he went over. Had he changed much when you knew him?"

She took a photograph that had been standing facing the other way from La Reigne and gave it to him. The young man's face lit with emotion.

"Not a bit," he said. "This is just the way I remember him. The last time we talked was the night before he went over the top on that last desperate charge."

"We had a cable and afterward a message, quite long, from the war office and his superior officer," Bee spoke again softly. "Tell me how he happened to play that song to you. It was the song he wrote before he left me."

The two of them had forgotten us. Sylvia and Thorne slipped quietly from the room. I followed, and we settled ourselves for a chat in the den, which generally was sacred to whomever of us wished for absolute silence and time to think. It was modeled on the ancient retiring room where the queens of the Nile sat in peace when their world seemed shattered about their ears, tears were their only refuge, and their royal spouses refused to listen to their lamenting. Bee and I had rigged up our den to correspond to such moods, leaving out the royal spouses and the lamentations. The first we had not, the second we had no confidence in. But the Egyptian rule which reigned also with us was that of a deep and serene quiet.

This evening the three of us talked things over, making much of La Reigne. Thorne, too, showed himself in his best colors and I felt hopes—but, there, I shook myself again; it was Bee who was the matrimonial bureau agent, not myself. I refused to allow myself to be debased to the contemplation of any matrimonial prospects, no matter whom or what they concerned.

When La Reigne took his leave it was with the promise that he would return before long. Bee was quiet after he had gone, and when she slipped away to bed I looked in vain for the photograph of Bob Mathers that had stood on the piano. Bee had taken it to her room with her.

In the days that followed I felt Bee's interest in advertising slipping. She was subtly different. I put the blame to the young painter's account, and rightly, for scarcely an evening passed without reference to him. Often he was with us in person, running up for an hour or so of music with Bee, dropping in to talk over some matter of French interest with me (he did his best to close my eyes to his real interest), or stopping by with a new children's story book from which, so he said, he thought Miss Sylvia might get fresh stories for his restless little models.

A month had gone by when one afternoon Sylvia telephoned me at the office and asked if she might bring her poet in for dinner. From occasional remarks she had let drop about him I had come to the conclusion before this that his verses were probably not the least attractive things about Mr. Richard Allen Stuart, so I said "Yes" promptly and with great pleasure. The interest that had been Bee's in Sylvia's welfare apparently had fallen to my lot. So be it. I would do the best I could by the child.

Mr. Stuart turned out to be charming, a southerner, a lawyer, and, in embryo, a poet. We had no chance to test his powers in this last direction that night. He refused positively to permit Sylvia to mention his verses, nor would he give us even a fragment of them himself.

"Miss Dare knows," he said smiling, "how bad my poetry is, and I would hate to prejudice two good friends of hers the first time I met them by letting them in on my secret, too."

Instead Thorne came in, casually as is his custom, and we had a wildly exciting game of bridge in the den while La Reigne and Bee played fragments of the Wagner scores (which I at first thought odd for a Frenchman to choose) in illustration of the painter's contention that Wagner and Strauss were more nearly brothers under the skin than was generally supposed.

Thorne Shorey took Sylvia home that night. There was, I thought, a subtle air of excitement about him as he said good-night. Sylvia was calm, but her pressure of my hand as she left was a trifle warmer than the clasp she usually deigned to give. Thorne offered Mr. Stuart a lift, and the three went out together. La Reigne followed on their footsteps, but refused to ride. He was a true artist in this that he liked long tramps by night through the ghost haunted city streets lit by flaring lamps occasionally, to make the more striking the Stygian blackness where in back ways and abysslike alleys the crimes and terrors of night so casually stalk.

What happened next followed so quickly, the one incident upon the other, that I scarcely know in writing which to place first and which last—in fact, I am hardly sure it has, any of it, happened at all. I—but wait.

It was not later than eleven when Thorne and Sylvia, Mr. Stuart, and Jean La Reigne left the studio. Bee and I sat up a little while, and then started leisurely to make ready for bed. The ringing of the telephone

THE BOGIE OF FEAR

THE STORY.

ALLAYNE GUERNSEY has inherited the Guernsey millions and an inborn dread of scandal. Her besetting fear of being talked about leads her, at twenty-four, to magnify a trivial quarrel with SPENSER BOURKE, her fiance, break the engagement, and rush into a heedless marriage with BENNETT HALSEY, a smooth crook who is at the end of his resources and needs Allayne's money. At the start of their honeymoon the couple are intercepted by a woman known as ROSA HALSEY, who has been the crook's companion in crime. Allayne's suspicions are quickly aroused, and before their journey is fairly started she tells Halsey she is through with him. The train on which they are passengers is wrecked and Halsey, in despair at the failure of his scheme, conceives the idea of "playing dead" by exchanging papers with one of the wreck victims. Allayne has been carried from the wreck by Spenser Bourke; their romance is renewed and, supposing Halsey to be dead, they are married. Allayne is supremely happy, especially when she persuades Bourke, against his will, to let her put all her money into his business. Then, one day, a caller is announced.

THIRD INSTALLMENT.

Blackmail.

THE man advanced toward her: his lips curved in a smile that was more evil than any frown could have been. He held out his hand.

"Hello, Allayne, dear girl. Haven't forgotten me so soon, have you?"

Into the holy present leaped the unclean past. This man, Bennett Halsey, from whom she had shrunk in loathing. . . . She fell, rather than sat down, into a chair. One of her hands, the one that had gripped at her throat, brushed wearily across her eyes, as though the man's presence were some unclean dream which could be pushed away. Her other hand hung limply at her side.

"Somewhat of a shock, seeing me, eh?" said Halsey.

Her eyes opened and she stared at him. Twenty months had not improved him; the suavity of appearance that had once been his had gone from him now. Lines that might have been illness, but which were more the expression of a dissipated past, were now graven in his face. His eyes, burned as though with fever, were shifty, uneasy, yet blatantly bold.

He was her husband! Suddenly the knowledge raced through her mind. This man was her husband! She rose clumsily, all the grace gone from her lithe body, to her feet. She staggered toward the door. Halsey blocked the way.

"Where are you going?" he demanded harshly.

Out of her horror, her fear, she answered him.

"To telephone my husband," she said. Her utterance was thick, heavy.

"That's naive," sneered Halsey. "Who do you think your husband is?"

She reeled against the wall, one hand steadying her trembling body, the other held out as though to fend him off. Of course! She'd just realized it. This was her husband. Spenser Bourke was—what was he? What was she? Her eyes closed; she slid limply down to the floor.

When her eyes opened her mind also opened to complete consciousness. She was not in her bed, awakening from a dreadful dream; she was lying on the floor of her living room, staring up at the sneering face of Halsey. He had made no move to assist her. Instead, his legs crossed, he was quite calmly smoking a cigar.

"Well, now that's over with, get up and listen to me," he said.

Shaking in every muscle, she gained her feet. Her throat was dry, her lips burned.

"Sit down," he ordered.

She shook her head and retreated until her body pressed against the wall.

"You were killed," she said.

He laughed. "That's what you thought."

"Why?" she demanded.

"Why? Because you were a little fool, so damn good that you hadn't a bit of mercy for any one who wasn't as pure as yourself."

He lied; yet there was something of truth in what he had said. She flinched from his smile.

"That sweet, forgiving nature of yours, that broad tolerance," he jibed, "hasn't done much for you, has it? Well, well; how times change. Last time I saw you you were quite upset because I'd been living with a woman. Ordered me out of your holy presence."

"Stop—please," she cried.

"Situation annoys you, eh? Well, it is embarrassing—for you. And for your so-called husband, Bourke," grinned Halsey.

"What do you want?" she asked.

Halsey brushed the ash from his cigar.

"Well, a man might want his wife, under the circumstances. Then again, under the circumstances, he might not want her."

His voice, more than his words, sprayed her with insult. She seemed to shrink as she pressed against the wall. Halsey eyed her appraisingly.

"Then again, under the circumstances, a man might be indifferent to his wife; he might want money."

He puffed at his cigar.

"Yes, money is a good thing. Especially to a man who's in bad health, who hasn't long to live, who's been ordered by doctors to retire to a farm. Money! If a man had that, enough of it, he might—well, disappear."

Again he eyed her as she stood there, mute.

"A couple of hundred thousand dollars, let us say. A lot to me—nothing at all to you. Suppose, my dear Mrs. Halsey-Bourke, that you give me that amount. Or," and he shrugged, "if you don't feel like parting with that much money, suppose you telephone to the man whom you call your husband, as you were going to do a few minutes ago."

He leaned back complacently in his chair. He waited a full minute. Then he spoke again.

"No? Don't feel like sending for Bourke? I thought not. Scandal is a most unpleasant thing, isn't it? Well, then, suppose you write a check."

Slowly she began to understand. Halsey was not here to wreck her life; he wanted money; with money he would be content, would consent to leave. . . . What difference did that make? He was her husband; she was his legal wife. . . . She must leave Bourke. . . . The scandal would become known; it would kill her. . . . If she had time to think, to plan what to do. . . . She was innocent of any wrongdoing. Why must she be mired? Why must Spenser be shamed, humiliated? Weren't there such things as quiet divorces, carefully arranged? Couldn't scandal be avoided?

"Two hundred thousand dollars," said Halsey again. "And if you haven't the cash handy in a bank, why, any good securities, that can be turned into immediate cash, will do."

The irony of her position came home to her. She hadn't two hundred thousand dollars available. Her stock in the chemical company was not a security on which, in these parlous financial days, she could realize anything. The bonds which she had acquired for three million dollars could be realized upon, perhaps, but not in a moment. Further, it meant telling Bourke. . . But she must tell him. She realized that. And still she clung to the hope that somehow. . . It was an evil dream, not a reality. And yet, clearly, menacingly, before her sat Halsey, no figment of a disordered imagination, but an unclean reality.

He rose to his feet. "Do I get it?" he said. "Or do I go down, this minute, to call upon your—er—husband?"

She gasped. She must be the one to tell Bourke, not Halsey.

"I'll—I'll do—what I can—I'll try——"

Sure of his victory, he smiled. "All right. I'll phone you tomorrow and we'll make a date. Goodbye, Mrs. Halsey-Bourke."

She could not believe in his departure. Even after he had gone she looked for him to return. She did not know that Halsey feared any encounter with her husband. She did not know that Halsey feared that Bourke, outraged, might kill him with as little compunction as one kills a rat. She did not realize that she had only to have defied the man to have sent him cringing from her presence.

But if she had realized it her thoughts would have been no more pleasant. For it was not blackmail, it was her own equivocal position, that horrified her.

How long she stood there, staring at the chair on which Halsey had sat, she did not know. How she gained her room and picked up the desk telephone she never could have told. Her legs ached with the strain of climbing the stairs; her eyes could not focus; her body felt as though it had been beaten with heavy clubs. For such is the ascendancy of the mind that a mental or spiritual blow reacts upon the flesh.

But, somehow, the picking up of the telephone clarified her mind. She put it quickly down. How could she, brutally, without warning, notify her husband that—that he was not her husband? She must think, plan.

And as she thought and planned understanding of Bourke's position came to her. Up to now she had considered only herself. There had been a momentary thought of the mire that would engulf Bourke, but mostly she had thought of herself only. Now she began to understand that Bourke would suffer even more than herself. He would suffer more because he loved her so greatly and that which affected her would affect him. His own burden would be doubled by his effort to carry hers.

And then, suddenly, the thing that Halsey knew but which had not occurred to her as she listened to the blackmailer, came fully into her consciousness. Bourke might kill the man who blackmailed his wife.

She knew Bourke. Gentle-hearted, generous, long-suffering, good-humored, controlled of temper. . . But if he lost that self-control. . . She knew the firmness of his mouth, the stubborn tenacity of his jaw, the coolness of his gray eyes. If those eyes should flash with anger, that mouth harden in wrath. . .

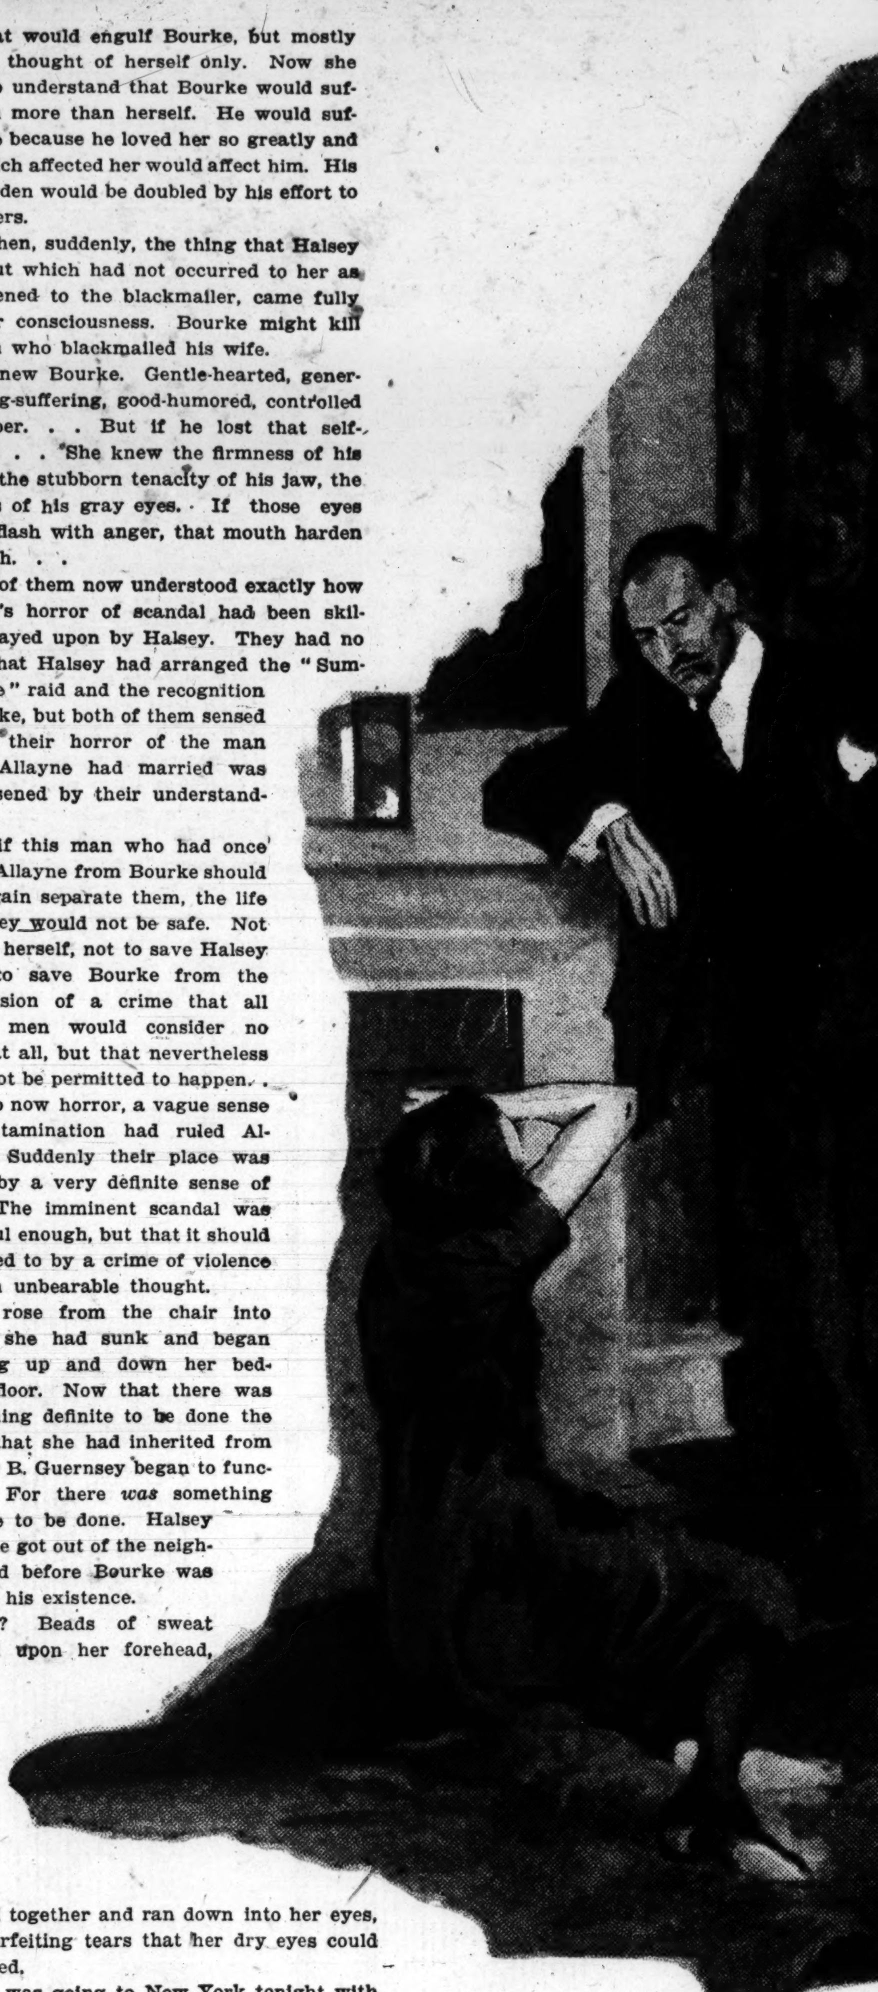
Both of them now understood exactly how Allayne's horror of scandal had been skilfully played upon by Halsey. They had no proof that Halsey had arranged the "Summertime" raid and the recognition of Bourke, but both of them sensed it, and their horror of the man whom Allayne had married was not lessened by their understanding.

And if this man who had once driven Allayne from Bourke should once again separate them, the life of Halsey would not be safe. Not to save herself, not to save Halsey—but to save Bourke from the commission of a crime that all decent men would consider no crime at all, but that nevertheless must not be permitted to happen. .

Up to now horror, a vague sense of contamination had ruled Allayne. Suddenly their place was taken by a very definite sense of fear. The imminent scandal was dreadful enough, but that it should be added to by a crime of violence was an unbearable thought.

She rose from the chair into which she had sunk and began walking up and down her bedroom floor. Now that there was something definite to be done the brain that she had inherited from Harley B. Guernsey began to function. For there was something definite to be done. Halsey must be got out of the neighborhood before Bourke was told of his existence.

How? Beads of sweat formed upon her forehead, melted together and ran down into her eyes, counterfeiting tears that her dry eyes could not shed.



"Well, now that's over with, get up and listen to me."

She was going to New York tonight with Bourke! She shook her head. She could not go. But what possible excuse, other than the real reason, could she invent? If she said that she were ill Bourke would refuse to leave her. . .

The telephone rang. She knew that it was Bourke; intuition told her and for half a minute, while the instrument clanged imperatively, she stared at it, afraid to pick it up. She did so finally. Intuition had not lied.

"Can you stand a little disappointment, Allayne?" asked Bourke.

For a moment her heart stood still. He wasn't going to New York! The trip was postponed!

"I'll try," she said, marveling at the lightness of her tone.

"Just got a wire from Keenan." Keenan, as she knew, was the western sales manager for the company. "He has a chance to place a big order in Chicago. Says that he needs me to put it over."

Her heart resumed beating again.

"And you think that you ought to go?" she asked.

He laughed. "With orders as slack as they are, I certainly do think so. And as I'll only be there a few hours, between trains, I thought that you might not want to go."

"Well," she said slowly, "there are a lot of things to be done about the house—we'd go to New York—later?"

"Of course. It's only a temporary disappointment, dear."

"No disappointment at all, silly man," she assured him.

"Then will you meet me at the station in half an hour with my bag?"

She told him that she would and hung up the telephone. Luck had been with her! Bourke would be gone for the next two nights; in that time she would, somehow or other, have got rid of Halsey. She would be able to tell Bourke their dreadful predicament without the fear that it would be made infinitely worse by the killing of Halsey. For now, oddly, she had not the slightest doubt that anything other than the killing of Halsey could possibly happen.

How she was going to manage this riddance she would not bother to think now. Her brain had stood all that it could for the present. She would endeavor to compose herself. . . . Once more she marveled at herself. She knew that her cheek was cool when Bourke kissed her good-by, that her voice held not the slightest tremor. It was queer, afforded one an insight into the complexities of life that she could not see her beloved husband leave her without regret. For it was necessary that the first skirmish in the battle be fought by her alone. Later, when Halsey had been persuaded to leave Hillstown, Bourke could stand at her side, but now now.

She drove slowly home, for the first time in her life summoning to her mind the figures in her checkbook. Memory was brutal. It told her no cheerful little lie to ease the next half hour. It told her the truth, as she verified it when she reached home again. She had in the Hillstown bank exactly fifteen hundred dollars, wherewith to persuade Halsey to leave town. And he demanded two hundred thousand! There was the bitterest mockery in her laughter as she closed the book. Had Halsey come a week earlier. . .

But at about the time that she was wishing that Halsey had come a week earlier that gentleman was wishing that he had come much longer ago than that.

His tricky heart had not been bothering him much since the South African attack. He had been careful, cautious to the degree of cowardice. Also, Rosa had watched over him alertly. For Rosa loved him.

Not a woman of any particular morality, the vicious things that he did to others had no effect upon her love. Again and again she even forgave the vicious things he did to her. He had strained, almost to the breaking point, that animal-like devotion which she accorded to him when he had entered into a marriage with Allayne Guernsey. But she was the kind who refused to cry over spilt milk. Halsey always came back to her; he would come back now. And when, slinkily, he returned from the railroad wreck with his story of failure, the fact that he came back offset the fact that he had gone away. Wanting the man, craving him with every bit of her animal nature, it was easy for her to believe what she wished to believe. He'd never intended to stick to Allayne; he'd intended to get her money and desert her for Rosa. As a matter of fact, the marriage to Allayne had been most repugnant to him.

Women of the Rosa sort forgive the unforgivable, believe the incredible. They want to.

To get away from New York had been their aim. They had drifted to South Africa and luck had broken badly. Halsey's illness had eaten up most of their funds. Also, the particular kind of swindling that was Halsey's long suit found no profitable field in South Africa. Rosa, further impelled by the belief that a sea voyage would benefit Halsey, consented to try Europe. Once there, Halsey told her that he had been recognized by a Parisian detective. They fled to London. A few days later he told her that he had learned that the London police were on the lookout for him. And so she was easily persuaded to go to New York, whence they fled so many months ago.

Once there, Halsey had pretended to meet a man from Hillstown, told Rosa that by going to Hillstown he would be able to put across a profitable swindle. Rosa, timorous wherever they were, fearful lest Gelstein or some other old acquaintance run across them, cheerfully accompanied him to Hillstown.

For Rosa had not seen the society magazine that contained the account of Allayne's second marriage. And Halsey never told her of that marriage. He knew Rosa. He had persuaded her that he had never cared for Allayne. But if Rosa had learned that he intended to see the girl whom he had married there would have been trouble. Not even the prospect of a fortune would have quelled her instant jealousy. Halsey had been unfaithful to her many times. But he'd never gone to the extent of a marriage ceremony save in the case of Allayne. Her name was never mentioned by Halsey lest he arouse the dangerous passions of Rosa. As for Rosa, whatever else she was, she was not the sort to remind Halsey of his peccadilloes. And she was entirely unsuspicious of the fact that it was to blackmail Allayne that er section of Hillstown.

Halsey would have left her behind in New York save for the fact that his health was a source of constant fear to him. Rosa was more than companion; she was nurse. He was grateful for her presence in the hotel where they had registered, in the cheaper section if Hillstown.

For he felt another attack coming on. So, a block or so from the hotel, he ordered his taximan to stop before a drug store. Another man wished to engage the car and as it was only a few rods from his hotel, he glanced at the meter and handed the man, as he thought, a two-dollar bill, instructing him to keep the change. Then he entered the drug store and ordered a common heart depressant. He drank it and felt better.

But he was a coward. Before entering Allayne's home he had watched, and seen Bourke depart, still, while he was there, he could not know but that Bourke would return at any moment. Fear made his heart race. Now, even the depressant which he had taken could not quiet the harried organ. When he reached the hotel, after his brief walk, a porter had to assist him to his room, and shortly he was in a state of collapse. Rosa, in panic, immediately asked the hotel clerk to send for a doctor.

The medical man, a general practitioner, managed to revive his patient. But when Halsey refused to go to bed the physician told him some plain truths.

"If you want to commit suicide, stay out of bed," he said.

"What do you mean?" demanded Halsey, fearfully.

The doctor was one who did not believe that it was fair to extend lying hope to a dying man. "I mean," he said, "that you've got the worst heart I've ever examined. You haven't a week to live. If you want to die in a day—get up."

Meekly Halsey climbed into bed. He swallowed the stimulant prescribed by the doctor. Immediately feeling better he began to doubt the physician's diagnosis. He asked him to send for a consultant. Shrugging, the doctor did so. Two hours later, lying on his bed, staring up at the ceiling, Halsey realized that he was waiting for death. He could hear, from the next room, the muffled sobs of Rosa. But no sorrow for her was in his heart. He could think only of himself.

And as he thought the veins in his throat swelled with impotent wrath. The last two years had been years of privation, more or less. Always had been the fear of arrest; every strange face had been a potential officer of the law. That feeble heart of his had leaped and pounded a score of times a day, due solely to fear.

And it was Allayne's fault! So he reasoned, half mad with dread. Had she acted like a sane woman that night on the train, worry would have slipped forever from his shoulders. With plenty of money he'd have found no need for continuing his illegal career. Without eternal fear his heart would have been quieted; he could have bought a country place somewhere, have given his health that care which it had needed. . . We never blame ourselves. Always it is some one else who has wronged us, been unfair. So with Halsey now. Toward Allayne arose a tremendous hate in his heart.

She, when he was dead, would be happy. She had wealth, position. Bourke he hated, too. Bourke had the things which should have come to him, Halsey. It never occurred to him to blame Rosa for her scene at the train-gate. He never had been particularly angered at her. For spilt milk was something over which, with his crooked philosophy to sustain him, he never worried. The luck either broke your way, or it didn't. Everything was luck, good or bad. Honest effort, earnest work—these things, according to his belief, never mattered a jot in the affairs of life.

It was Allayne whom he blamed! Rosa, in accosting him at the train-gate, had been fighting a battle for something that belonged to her. But Allayne, in sending him from her, had been acting the part of a conceited little prude, who thought all the world was bad save herself.

The privations, the worries of the last two years were due to her, Allayne! And when he was in his grave her life would continue placidly, happily. . . He writhed at the thought. The sobs of Rosa awakened in him no sympathy toward the companion of his ups and downs. He had no time to think of her. He had little time left in which to think of any one. He knew that the physicians told the truth; years ago other physicians had warned him; in South Africa he had been assured that only a miracle of luck had pulled him through. Now—there was no hope. He was doomed. Within a week he would be dead.

Through the rest of the day and through a sleepless night the thought confronted him. Doomed! And slowly into his hate-poisoned mind a plan came.

Revenge is, in its way, as powerful an emotion as love. It is the child of hate. We hate always the one whom we have wronged. To ruin Allayne, utterly, irretrievably, eternally. . . . It would make death less unbearable, bring comfort to the grave. If only his hate would sustain him, would enable him to carry out the plan that had come in the night.

Rosa, grief stricken, trying her best to pretend a courage that she lacked, was in his way. Halsey sent her downstairs, feigning an affection that thrilled her aching heart. She must not wear herself out tending to an invalid. She must eat breakfast by herself, not spoil it by constant attendance on him.

The moment she had gone he walked, gingerly, carefully, to the telephone. Yesterday, on his way to Allayne's home, he had passed, on the outskirts of the town, a roadhouse. He looked up its number and was connected with the clerk. He engaged for luncheon, in the name of Mr. Carver—the name under which he and Rosa were passing at the time—a private dining room for luncheon that day.

To Rosa, upon her return, he professed his belief that the doctors had been mistaken. He felt extremely well, he assured her. But when half-past twelve came he managed to drop a bottle containing medicine prescribed for him last night. He suddenly became irritable. He would trust no bell-boy to have the prescription filled again. Only Rosa could be trusted.

She, flattered by this absolute dependence upon her, deceived by his pretense of good spirits, left him while she went to the drugstore nearby. Five minutes later Halsey was dressed for the street. From a bag he took a revolver. He put it in his coat pocket, and left the apartment.

From the public pay-station downstairs he telephoned Allayne. He had been afraid to delay longer in his room. Also, he had felt no need of telephoning Allayne earlier. He knew absolutely that she was cowed, that she would remain at home all day waiting to hear from him.

"This is Halsey speaking," he told her. "I've engaged a private room at the Cresthill Inn for one o'clock today. In the name of 'Carver.' You be there."

Allayne made no remonstrance; she merely replied that she would do as he ordered. Whereupon he hung up the receiver, glanced around the lobby to make sure that Rosa was not returning, and then, slipping outside, in front of the hotel secured a taxicab and gave the address "Cresthill Inn."

He found that his private dining room was on the second floor. It was a pleasant room, that could be reached from outside, by a flight of stairs that ran from broad French windows to the ground, a few yards below, as well as from inside by a narrow short stairway leading to the office. He ordered luncheon. Then he asked the waiter for writing materials. He looked at his watch. It lacked fifteen minutes of one. There was time, before Allayne should arrive, for what he wished to do. He wrote:

"Chief of Police,

"Hillstown.

"Sir:

"I am the husband of Allayne Guernsey, who calls herself Mrs. Spenser Bourke. On our honeymoon I was injured in a railroad accident. My mind was affected and I have been confined in an asylum. On my release recently I learned that my wife had remarried. She knew that I was still living, but not wishing the publicity of a divorce conveniently forgot my existence, professing to believe that I had been killed. Yesterday, by accident, she met me and asked me to meet her at this hotel. I do not know what her intentions may be, but am afraid of her.

"Yours truly,

"Bennett Halsey."

He read it through carefully. He had plotted each sentence during the sleepless night. He would have liked to leave out the reference to the insane asylum, but in no other way could he conveniently explain why so long a time had elapsed since the railroad wreck without word from him. It might prejudice the careful case that he was building, but—and he smiled grimly—he'd chance that.

He rang for the waiter. To him he gave the addressed envelope and asked the man to mail the letter. Then he walked to the high windows and stared out. He saw the waiter, impelled to exact obedience by his tip, walk down the curving driveway of the Inn grounds to where, perched upon a post at the juncture of the drive and main road, stood a letter box. He saw the man post the letter and retrace his steps to the Inn.

Halsey smiled again. Then he saw a closed roadster, driven by a woman whose face was hidden by her heavy veils, turn into the drive. It was Allayne. He watched her until she passed around the corner of the building. Then, lighting a cigarette, to still the shaking of his nerves, he sat down and awaited her coming.

In a moment the waiter ushered her in. Halsey arose; he waved her to a seat at the table. She would have refused but for the presence of the serving-man, already busied setting out the table.

"Raining?" asked Halsey, carelessly.

There were drops upon Allayne's hat; fallen there in her brief walk from the parking-space to the Inn door. She nodded curtly.

"Cigarette?" said Halsey.

She shook her head. She looked impatiently at the waiter. Halsey smiled. He knew what torment it was for her to wait. And so he did not hurry the waiter. But finally the man was gone.

Allayne rose to her feet. From her bag she drew a roll of bills.

"I have fifteen hundred dollars. That's all I can give you," she said. "You'd better take it. My husband will be home tomorrow, and I'm going to tell him—everything. He'll kill you. Better take this money and get away."

Halsey smiled again. "Sit down," he said. The harshness of his voice alarmed the girl. She sat down without quite realizing that she obeyed. From his pocket Halsey drew a revolver. Then, because she knew the man for what he was, Allayne laughed. But before her mirth the smile of Halsey did not fade. And so the girl's laugh was stilled. Suddenly she read incredible menace in the man's attitude. She rose. But he was too quick. He locked the door and pocketed the key.

Use plenty of lather. Rub it in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips.

The final rinsing should leave the hair soft and silky in the water.

When thoroughly clean, wet hair fairly squeaks when you pull it through your fingers.

Why the Beauty of Your Hair Depends upon the Care You Give It

THE beauty of your hair depends upon the care you give it.

Shampooing it properly is always the most important thing.

It is the shampooing which brings out the real life and lustre, natural wave and color, and makes your hair soft, fresh and luxuriant.

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

When your hair has been shampooed properly, and is thoroughly clean, it will be glossy, smooth and bright, delightfully fresh-looking, soft and silky.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soap. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why discriminating women use Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product cannot possibly injure and it does not dry the scalp, or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just

Follow This Simple Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo, rubbing it in thoroughly all over the scalp and throughout the entire length, down to the ends of the hair.

Rub the Lather in Thoroughly

TWO or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

When you have done this, rinse the hair and scalp thoroughly, using clear, fresh, warm water. Then use another application of Mulsified.

Two waters are usually sufficient for washing the hair; but sometimes the third is necessary.

You can easily tell, for when the hair is perfectly clean, it will be soft and silky in the water, the strands will fall apart easily, each separate hair floating alone in the water and the entire mass, even while wet, will feel loose, fluffy and light to the touch and be so clean, it will fairly squeak when you pull it through your fingers.

Rinse the Hair Thoroughly

THIS is very important. After the final washing the hair and scalp should be rinsed in at least two changes of good warm water and followed with a rinsing in cold water.

When you have rinsed the hair thoroughly, wring it as dry as you can; finish by rubbing it with a towel, shaking it and fluffing it until it is dry. Then give it a good brushing.

After a Mulsified shampoo, you will find the hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft, and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage, and it will be noticed and admired by everyone.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Splendid for children. Fine for men.

MARJORIE DAW and the wedding gown (isn't it lovely?) which she wears as "Love" in the George Fitzmaurice picture, "Experience." If you must know, it is made of heavy white satin with a plain shirred skirt, held out over the hips and suggesting the pannier. The waist is broken only by a wide bertha, which falls from the shoulder, forming the sleeve. The gorgeous veil of Maltese lace is caught with a bandeau of orange blossom buds, with small clusters of the blossoms on either side. An old fashioned bouquet of old fashioned flowers completes the ensemble.

HOW · TO · RIDE · A · HORSE

A Picture Lesson in Equitation, Posed by Two Chicago Riders Who "Know How."

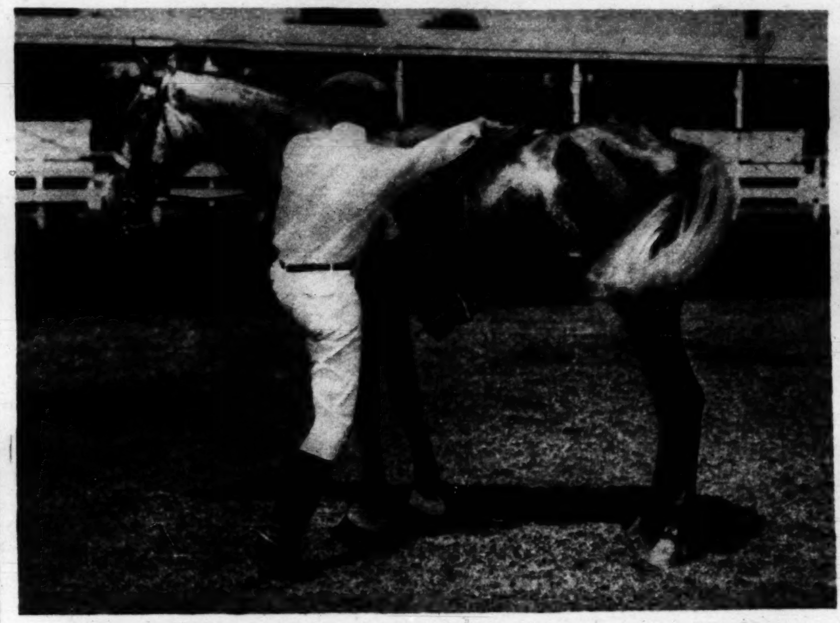
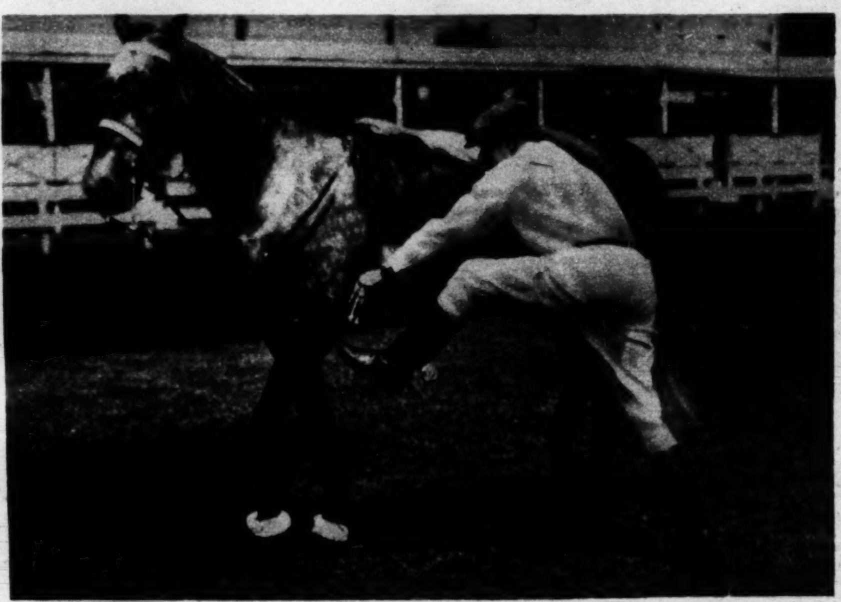
SWINGING INTO THE SADDLE. The man in the picture is C. Groverman Ellis, secretary of the Chicago Equestrian association, and one of the city's many hundred bridle-path enthusiasts. His method of mounting minimizes danger.



THE WRONG WAY TO MOUNT. This mistake is frequently made by beginners. If the horse moves forward the foot may hang in the stirrup and the rider is often dragged and kicked by the animal.



"WHOA! WHOA! WHOA!" If he stands in the "middle of the horse," facing his head, the rider loses his balance and he is unable to control the animal. This makes mounting difficult and dangerous.

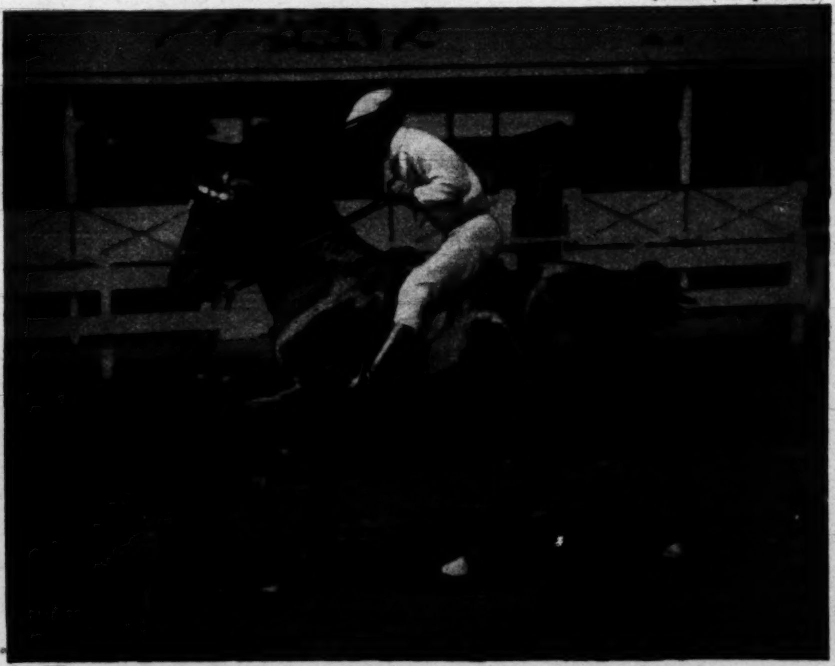
THE CORRECT SEAT. Frank M. Flynn, member of the South Shore Country Club, and his favorite mount, Autumn Vine. Notice that the rider's legs are straight from the knee down, covering the girth; head and body erect; bit and bridoon reins held separately in the right and left hands; stirrup under ball of foot.



THE INCORRECT SEAT. Hold a closer rein than this with palms of hands toward body to give play in the wrist. The incorrect way, as shown here, is to hold reins in one hand, palm up or down, body stooped forward, hands high and elbows out. This throws the horse "off balance" and the feet of the rider forward.

If you could see your skin through a microscope you would be amazed at how uneven a surface it really is—what a region of tiny hills and valleys. Think how infinitely fine in texture face powder must be to adhere to such a surface!

For generations powder manufacturers have tried to secure the necessary fineness by sifting face powder through silk—much as flour is bolted. But bolting cloth varies in texture—strands of silk continually break here and there—and this results in the powder being coarse and uneven—not blending perfectly with the fine texture of the skin.

Now we announce a revolutionary new process of making face powder—that gives a wonderful result! A process invented by and exclusive to Melba.

Floated on air!

Now Melba Lov'me face powder, instead of being sifted through cloth, is air-sifted. Gentle air currents passing through the chambers in which the ground material is falling carry away by flotation only the finest of the fine particles—only those that float on air. And only these are boxed. The result is an entirely new type of face powder—a powder of such remarkable fineness and delicacy that it blends evenly with the texture of the skin—and adheres under all conditions.

Far more clinging

Air-floating produces a powder divided into particles so much finer than is possible by any other process that Melba Lov'me is immediately distinguished from all other powders. The warmth of dancing makes no difference—it stays on. Motoring through the wind—it still adheres. For Melba Lov'me, though extremely fine, has "body" enough to withstand wind and moisture. It never becomes "streaked"—never "blows off."

Melba Lov'me, delicately perfumed with the delightful fragrance of Lov'me, the Perfume of Romance, is now sold for 75c a box. You will find it on the dressing tables of women to whom price is the last consideration. Regardless of price no other powder can be like it—for the process of air-floating is exclusive to Melba.

So let your next box of powder be Melba Lov'me. See for yourself what amazing improvements air-floating has accomplished.

In addition to the Face Powder, other products of the Lov'me line are—Lov'me Perfume, Toilet Water, Talc and Sachet

Along the shore of the lake, within the angle formed by Yates avenue and Seventy-first street, lie the spacious grounds of the South Shore Country club, with the diagonally set club buildings in the center and the dim outlines of the breakwaters projecting out into the lake. In the foreground is illustrated one of the eccentricities of Chicago building development, the neighborhood south of Seventy-first street being thickly settled, while that to the north shows great stretches of unimproved property.

Why The Chicago Tribune has the Largest Morning Daily Circulation in America

FRANK KING and SID SMITH have shared a tiny studio in The Tribune establishment for many years. This little room probably produces more genuine humor than any equal space on earth.

SIDNEY SMITH

Tribune readers are a jolly contented lot—tolerant—appreciative. Scowling, ultra-serious pessimists of either conservative or radical type are the exception in this jovial family. Credit for millions of smiles daily is due to the battery of Tribune cartoonists. Their influence is beyond calculation. Skeezix binds his multitudes of foster parents into a vast fraternity of love and mirth. Andy and Min Gump settle more domestic problems than all the courts in Illinois—settle them with laughs. Kernel Cootie is a tonic that retains its kick even in these days. Skinney is the really, truly fountain of eternal youth, who enables us to start the day right.

BRIGGS has been a feature of The Tribune for fourteen years. No cartoonist has been more widely nor more unsuccessfully imitated.

ORR has "rung the bell" with Kernel Cootie. More than a score of metropolitan newspapers buy from The Tribune the right to reproduce these daily strips.

Read The Tribune Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday—as well as Sunday

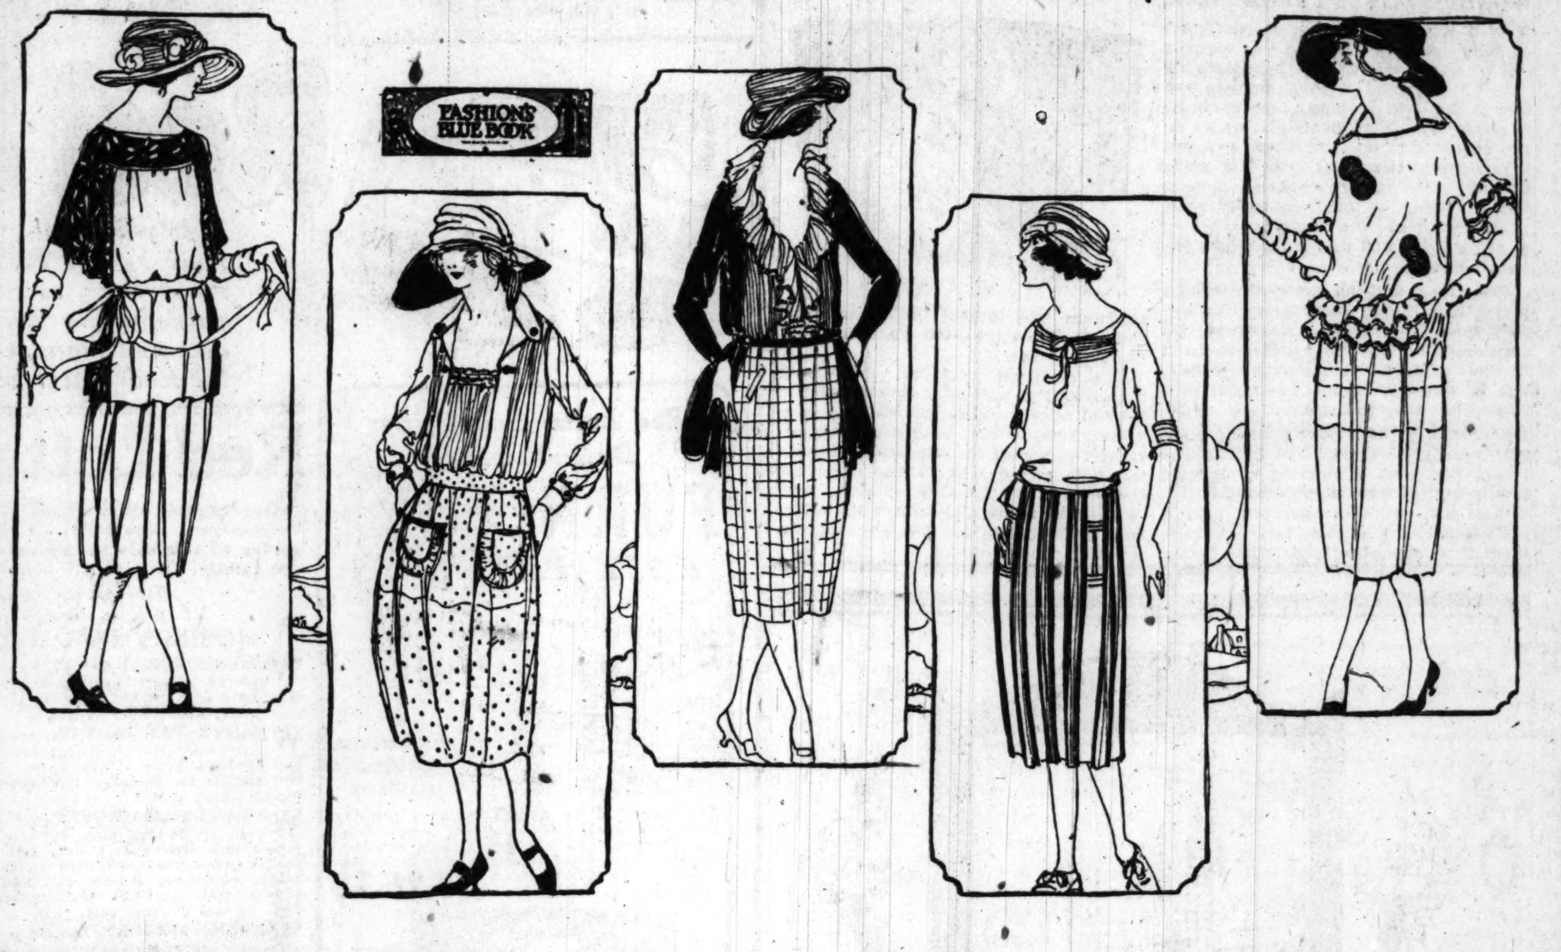
Fashions Beauty Contests

WE PUT ON OUR SUMMER FLANNELS

By Corinne Lowe

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.



THE popularity of red as a summer color is stressed in the center panel when a jacket of red flannel meets a skirt of checked red and white flannel through the kindly offices of a white lingerie blouse whipped in red. At the right of this a black and white striped flannel skirt is completed by blouse of white handkerchief linen trimmed with black cire braid and ribbon. Next a white crepe de chine skirt is allied with white crepe de chine blouse bound and embroidered in the favorite lavender. At the extreme left are shown the dressy possibilities of skirt of white crepe de chine accompanied by a blouse of the same fabric combined with black crepe de chine printed in white. Next a skirt of white organdy dotted in red is worn with white organdy blouse finished by red buttons and buttonholes bound in red.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—Mr. Kipling has spoken bitterly of " the flanneled fool at the wicket," but the flannel itself is not the basis of his accusation. We, however, go a step further and indict the fabric as chief agent in the folly. This is the age of flannel. Both skirts and jackets of this material are worn for sports wear by women from one end of the continent to the other. One admits, too, that this selection is sensible enough at the northern resorts. But in the oppressive climate of the middle states—what more saddening spectacle than to behold the vassals of flannel chained to their unending task of being warmer than they need be!

After this moral outburst, we hasten to give the favored forms of being flanneled. There are some skirts which are of all white, but the favored model is one which has stripes of either black or color. Next in popularity are the checked flannels. Both of these are worn chiefly with tailored blouses of crepe de chine, lingerie, taffeta, or wash satin, and frequently they are accompanied by a flannel coat in solid color. They are extremely plain in cut, and their pockets are inset at the side seams. Jackets are often sleeveless.

The flannel heroine of the year is illustrated in the center panel of this page. Here the skirt is a checked red and white affair worn with a jacket of red flannel. And, by the way, what a lot of red one does see nowadays at any smart outdoor affair! If we go on at this rate we shall soon all look like the cockatoos in a tropical forest.

Here are a few fashionable " get ups " noted recently which bring out the wide assumption of the red badge of Courage; a beige crepe of lusterless weave with a single plait running from low waistline to ankle length skirt traversed by brilliant red buttons—this frock accompanied by a hat of red satin faced with ivory straw and by beige slippers inset with red leather; a gray wool jersey skirt matched by a sweater of light wool worn over white blouse dotted as to collar and frill with red and confined by narrow patent leather belt of the crimson reasserted again in smart straw hat; a silk skirt of Paisley pattern in predominant tones of yellow and red combined with sweater of red silk echoed in satin sports hat.

The list of " Red Queens " might be multiplied indefinitely. But we proceed to the flannel costume under discussion by saying that the blouse worn with it—one of finely plaited handkerchief linen—has its frill whipped in red and that the bow of the quilted white satin hat is true to the sequence by being red.

Less reminiscent of grandpa's wrist warmers and also of grandpa's Zouave costume is the flannel skirt to the right of this creation. Here the popular black type stripe appears on a white ground in connection with a blouse of heavy linen trimmed with black cire braid and tied with a bow of black cire ribbon. The latter appears frequently, by the way, on the white blouse—particularly that of white crepe de chine—and there is evidence that the fancy will be continued all through the summer and fall.

The sports hats of the year are of moire, satin, ribbon, straw, duvetyn, felt, and all manner of mixtures of silk and straw. Very smart at present are those of quilted satin. This last mentioned in white was the choice of one debutante at a polo match last month. She wore it with a skirt of black and white checked flannel topped by a sleeveless jacket of black flannel which was so short and skimpy that it gave full right of way to the tailored shirtwaist of white silk. Her stockings of black silk ended in tennis shoes of black inset with white.

The last sentence brings us to one of the phenomena of the summer of 1921. Never were shoes and stockings so varied and never were they put together with such fiery abandon of spirit. As to the shoes, suede ones, inset with contrasting leather often sustaining some color note of trimmings or accessories, are popular. Thus, the girl whom I have described as wearing a frock of beige crepe jazzed up with so much red had insets of this latter color in the beige suede shoes of which I have spoken. Another woman clad in frock of blue crepe with sweater and stockings to match took up the theme of a pale yellow belt in the shoes of black suede which were trimmed with this tint.

Quite often your stockings are the tint of your gown, and you put them with various kinds of shoes. If your skirt be a gray jersey one, it is good form to don white shoes with the gray stockings to match it. To complete the popular chemise frocks of crepe you select self-colored stockings which may be mated with either white or black shoes. White tennis shoes or oxfords are perfectly correct in connection with black silk stockings. And before closing the subject of footwear let us not heedlessly pass over the epidemic of blonde stockings worn with black shoes which has raged this summer, quite irrespective of the tints of the frock.

I have spoken of the poularity of red as a summer note. This is brought out again by the costume to the immediate left of the center—a skirt of white organdy dotted in red, which is completed by a blouse of the same material finished in red bone buttons and buttonholes bound in red. Here is a delightful alternative for the morning frock of organdy and dotted swiss or gingham. And before turning from it do not overlook the charming skirt pockets with their fulled bands of self-material.

Those who have not succumbed completely to the idea that a summer skirt should fulfill all the conditions of a poultice turn again and again to the model of white crepe de chine or Canton crepe. Nothing is cooler certainly and nothing more like Lloyd George in the ease with which it meets a given situation. In the morning it goes with the popular sweater of black or color. In the afternoon it yields itself absolutely to the claims of a dressy occasion.

We find it face to face with the afternoon problem in the costume at the left. Here a knife plaited white crepe de chine skirt—and the knife plaited models are more popular than the accordion plaited or box plaited kinds this year—consorts with a stunning blouse of the skirt material combined with black crepe de chine printed in white. Such combinations of printed and plain fabrics are much favored at present for the dressy type of blouse, and we encounter it in this present illustration developed with the graceful wide armhole so warmly advocated by the foreign designer. Right here let me mention, too, that some of the most stunning crepe de chine blouses now being shown have the long, wide sleeves with deep armholes that are sponsored by Jenny. With this costume here is worn a wide hat of white crepe de chine trimmed with waxed white flowers.

More prominent even than the vogue of red this season is that of lavender and mauve. This tint stipples every outdoor occasion visited by the fashionable of New York City. It is a favored color for blouses. It appears constantly in millinery, and as for the corsage bouquets now so much affected—how many of those setting off the ubiquitous black gown are made of orchids! In fact, not an accessory nowadays can escape the persistence of this wistful, poetic hue.

At the right we indicate the popularity of lavender in the motifs and pipings which diversify a blouse of white crepe de chine worn with a skirt of the same material. The irregularity of the motifs is a motif in itself—one borrowed from Paris—and, as for the skirt, this is distinguished from others by abjuring plaits in favor of a deep hem abetted by a single tuck. This last, of course, is in line with the passion for trimming skirts with horizontal bands so notable in the frocks of the summer.

July Horoscope
by Doris Blake

PERSONS born between June 22 and July 22, and including these two dates, come under the sign of Cancer, and are primarily of a sympathetic and emotional nature. As housewives and husbands they are models. They are industrious and economical. Rather plodding by nature. Their devotion to home and family comes first with them. They are saving, and anxious to provide for those dependent upon them. Frequently their saving becomes a fault to penuriousness.

They are sensitive, and, easily hurt by unkindness, the mental conditions of others influencing them to a perceptible degree. They have the strongest likes and dislikes in their choice of friends. As acquaintances they are often changeable, but as intimate friends they ore steadfast and devoted. They are not easily misled by a show of good fellowship. They have wonderful intuitive discernment as to the real character of people.

They are stubborn mentally, seldom being forced out of an opinion or conclusion they have arrived at. Their opinions are usually respected.

They love literature, particularly history and novels. They have executive and mechanical ability, and have a natural feeling of responsibility. They wish to be respected as thoroughly competent in the performance of their duties. They cannot bear to be dictated to by others. They are easily ruled by kindness, but you cannot drive them into anything.

They are peculiarly adapted to musical careers and dramatic art. The women of this sign have the strongest maternal feelings, and make the best nurses, because of their sympathetic natures. Their voices, even in speech, are mellow and full of expression. The men are naturally reserved and dignified, while the women are brilliant talkers and fond of company, especially of the opposite sex. Sympathetic friends are those born between Feb. 20 and March 21, and between Oct. 24 and Nov. 22. The birthstone is the ruby.

Colors: Orange, green, russet. When the moon is on the increase is the most fortunate time for Cancer people.

MRS. V. S.: I have sent the number of the pattern of the scalloped jacket to you, and you will have no trouble in getting the pattern.

MRS. J. T. K.: Fresh ox gall is difficult to get, and I can't tell you where you would be certain of getting it. Why don't you try some of the other things that are suggested for setting colors? Be careful in anything you use to have the compound thoroughly dissolved.

MRS. W. C. N.: I am glad you liked the ribbon alphabet and think it would be good on linen. I am sorry you have mislaid your copies of the letters, but if you will write to the circulation department, specifying the dates you wish, and enclose 10 cents for each copy, these will be forwarded to you.

Varied Activi ies of Women

Minnesota is the only state that permits the marriage of girls 15 years old without the consent of parents.

Mrs. Henry C. Wallace, wife of the secretary of agriculture, has won considerable fame as a writer for farm journals.

There are 870,140 foreign-born women over 21 years of age living in New York City, of whom 360,255 have been naturalized.

The preponderence of males over females in 1920 appears for every state in the union except Massachusetts, Rhode Island, New York, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, and Alabama, in which states the number of males to 100 females ranges from 96.3 in Massachusetts to 99.9 for North Carolina. The District of Columbia shows a greater excess of females than appears for any state, its ratio being only 87 to 100.

Three hundred and four women—former army nurses and women war workers — are among the 83,504 students in training by the federal board of vocational education.

Miss Marguerite Lindsley, a junior student at Montana State college, is the first woman ever to be named as ranger in Yellowstone Park.

Still in her early twenties and vice president of a $3,000,000 building and loan association is the proud record held by Miss Margaret Stevens of Long Beach, Cal.

Miss Katherine Coyle, day matron at the detention house at the Gloucester, N. J., immigrant station, in two weeks acted as "maid of honor and witness" at fifty weddings.

Real Love Stories

Do you know a real love story—one that is stranger than fiction? It is the idea that is wanted. No attention will be paid to literary style. The Tribune will pay $5 for every story published. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, The Tribune, Chicago.

WONDERFUL NEWS FROM INDIA.

WHILE visiting at a seaside resort in Ireland a wealthy farmer's daughter became acquainted with a private soldier in the British army. Long rambles in shady lanes and moonlight walks on the beach soon brought their pleasant friendship to the usual turn. The girl's parents tried to separate the lovers, but in vain. A most unusual marriage resulted—the marriage of a wealthy Irish girl and an English private soldier.

For some months after the young pair—though very happy—were miserably poor. The bride's relatives had considered her marriage a disgrace and in their pride had left her to her fate, but it was something quite different from what they anticipated.

A friend of the soldier's father came with wonderful news from India. His father had been a member of a titled family and he had married an English village girl, who thought him only a private soldier. A year later his regiment was ordered to India. The young wife died during his absence and he never returned.

Before his death he became heir to the title, but was too ill to return to England. He told the story of this youthful marriage and of the boy born in England, and begged his friend to try to find him. In time the boy's regiment was located in Ireland, and the friend brought the good news to the young pair.

The relatives who had refused to recognize the wife of a private soldier flocked back to congratulate the new viscountess. The young soldier became the idol of the barracks. Though his title raised him to the ranks of the aristocracy, he still remained true to his old friends, and always chummed with and entertained the boys of the common rank and file. C. H.

BLAZING A NEW TRAIL.

BLANCHE: Today as the sun sets, will find me facing westward—speeding toward the lovely mountains of Colorado—and I'm almost glad. Washington has become unbearable and I'm sort of longing to lose myself in the vast quiet of those lovely hills. Many a weary heart has found rest and ease in their shelter, and I feel I must lose myself somewhere until this terrible heart anguish has somewhat diminished. O, Blanche, I cannot tear you from my heart. You must remain there forever—your image shall, at least be mine—so I'm taking you to the mountains and there we—my image and I—shall fight it out to the miserable end.

My pride forbids me to plead further, and yours forbids you to retract your words and acknowledge error. So I guess we've reached the end. We won't quarrel and I'll try never to blame you, little girl. You will remain at home and will, I hope, eventually find happiness in the love of some good man. You are worthy of the best. But, Blanche, don't, don't ever cause another man to suffer as I do. Be sure to love him before you promise him happiness. God knows I've had a bitter lesson. Remember, dearest girl, that all my best wishes are for you. Should you ever chance to think of me at all, please bear in mind that it was a freak of fate which brought us together and then separated us, leaving me so cruelly wounded. You are not at fault—you thought you really loved me—but you didn't.

Wherever I am, I shall talk to you daily, and shall keep you always with me, so you may know that somewhere in those mighty western mountains is a man who is carrying three small pictures of a beautiful girl, close to his heart; a man whose heart is sad—whose life is bitter.

I've been gazing at a picture before me for over an hour—time is slipping away rapidly and if I would say all I desire I must write swiftly and wait until later to dream.

Let me tell you of the picture upon which I've been gazing—over which I've been dreaming. 'Tis the portrait of a beautiful girl. Dark brown hair, tender eyes, and sweet pouting lips. Sometimes it seems as though she were about to speak. I dared to love her. I have been mad enough to imagine she was meant for me. Yet—I'm glad I have loved her and dared think of a day when she might be mine, for, I feel I'm better for having done so.

One year ago I met her and she crept into my heart and remained there, a beautiful dream to me. I've told her, millions of times, how I loved her—how badly I needed her, until now—well, the dream is over, the air castles shattered, hopes departed, and my picture of happiness lies in ashes at my feet. She once told me "life was but a ciragette"—how sadly true that is! I smoked and dreamed—until the cigarette had gone—awakened to find naught but the burned end in my possession and the ashes all about me.

But the dream was worth while. I saw gloriously beautiful things as the smoke curled lazily and wafted upward, transporting me into realms of supreme happiness. And always on those journeys I was accompanied by a wondrously sweet, tender, beautiful girl—the girlishness of whom was distracting—yet, with the sweetest little womanly ways that appealed and fascinated, a girl to be wooed gently, tenderly—a woman to be won through persistency. Perhaps I wooed too ardently—too savagely. I lost my dream girl. My heart seems to mock with "she's gone, she's gone," so now there is nothing left but to say good-by. Good-by to my heart—my lopes, hopes, dreams, mad ambitions—just good-by. I've heard that all partings are sad. I wonder if ever before has man parted from his desires with a heart so burdened with sadness as mine.

I've spoken my good-bys to my friends here, and I'm locked in my rooms with you—to say that last word to you alone. Two short hours more and I shall be leaving everything behind, love, work, friends, everything one holds dear, and shall be once more blazing a new trail.

I suppose this is most tiresome to you, so I will bring my last letter to an end—but it's hard, O Blanche, it's hard to say good-by to you forever. It seems like tearing out my heart. Sometimes I fear the awful quiet of those somber mountains, the distant call of the coyotes, the scream of the bobcat. The aching heart may be more than I can possibly endure and I must try—I must.

I shall think of you, dream of you, and love you, you always, but I shall think, dream, and love alone.

I wish you happiness, joy, and everything you desire. I am glad I've loved you, glad I still do, and glad I always shall. You are not at fault; it was just a piece of fate which is so often cruel, merciless.

Good-by, dear. PHILLIP.

MAUDE MARTIN ELLIS

Why you should swim

by Antoinette Donnelly

Among Other Reasons, It's Second to No Other Exercise for a Perfect Figure.

What's your beauty ill? Too fat? Too thin? Shy on hair? Oily hair, oily skin, freckles, pimples, or blackheads? Flat chested or flat footed? Write to me. I have a tonic, a diet, or a set of exercises for what ails you and you're welcome to them and to all the advice I can give you. If you wish a personal reply, send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

FIRST, if you are fat you should swim to reduce. Then, if you are thin, you should swim to develop. If you measure to a perfectly proportioned figure, you should swim to preserve the good proportions.

It may be said of swimming that it is second to no exercise in the world in point of acquiring and maintaining physical efficiency. It has the spirit of play, of absolute relaxation; it forces pure oxygen into the lungs, and there is not a muscle in the body that the swimmer does not put to work. When you can combine an exercise that brings all muscles into play and add to that the pure recreation feature of swimming, you have the ideal form of exercise. It is pleasure plus benefit. And it is a clean, cool, fine habit.

Did you know that man is the only animal without natural ability to swim? Another good reason why you should get out the bathing suit and try, don't you agree?

And is it not the most democratic of all sports? As some jester sagely remarked: "No man is greater than another in a bathing suit." Every one is happy and young, and there is no other place where one can be as carefree and ridiculous as on the beach.

Teach the Children.

Children should be taught to swim. It teaches grace and poise. It gives confidence. The frail, sickly child may be made over into an attractive young lady via the swimming route. There have been instances of malformed bodies being righted and physical handicaps greatly improved in swimming pools. It is told of Annette Kellermann that during her childhood days she suffered frightful humiliation on account of weak and ill-formed legs, but swimming converted them into perfectly normal members of an exceedingly well formed body.

As a cure for obesity evidence a-plenty has been presented me first hand. One woman of my acquaintance lost twenty-five pounds last summer and another sent eighteen solid avoirdupois down to Davy Jones' locker. Swimming is a tremendous oxygen consuming exercise, and consequently the fat burns up more quickly. The motions are particularly effective for waist line reduction, giving health and tone to the vital organs. For the fat under the arms and on the back, a large bust, and fat legs, the muscles involved in swimming movements are invaluable.

Swim to Develop.

Developing the bust and arms and legs and waist by swimming is done through the deep breathing and the consequent exercise of the diaphragm and lungs. The abdominal muscles are used fairly strenuously in pulling the legs forward. Then it creates a healthy appetite, which, by the way, the woman fighting obesity has to remember and provide against. No big luscious ice creams for her or cones or sodas or any food that makes bulk. Water drinking will satisfy her appetite, or if that is not quite sufficient, she may eat an apple or some other unsweetened fruit.

For the business girl during the warm weather, the morning dip is particularly recommended. The fresh air inhaled and the actual physical exercise provide energy enough to pull her through an otherwise fatiguing day.

Out with the Bathing Suit.

Now, with all the advantages swimming has to offer, you are not going to leave the bathing suit in the trunk for the moths to feed upon another season, are you? When the water comes right up to your back door, as it does to many, many back doors in the land, isn't it poor management to refuse its health giving offers?

Next week I shall give you some actual swimming instructions — the breast stroke and the crawl. But in the meantime get your mind made up—and get a bathing suit, if you have none. I'll tell you what to put on your skin to keep it from burning and freckling, so your facial beauty will not suffer.

If you feel the least bit frightened that the water will not hold you up, just remember it is floating iron ships every hour of the day, so you have small reason to believe your hollow body will not float.

BEAUTY ANSWERS.

BONNY: NO, BONNY, I WOULDN'T advise. When you plan to bob your hair you have to get yourself into a June bride frame of mind—for better or for worse you take the shears in hand. Once the deed is done, there you are for six months anyway. I mean the hair bobbing, of course. It is an awful temptation in hot weather and after one has sighted one of the attractive bobbed haired girls. But I'm not going to give you a chance to blame me if it is not a success. The permanent wave is not permanent for more than six months, you know. If you have ever bleached or hennaed your hair, keep away from the permanent wave chair.

SADIE: IT DEPENDS, NATURALLY enough, on the amount of hair to be removed. If the growth is light, it may be done in a few treatments, if heavy, it may take a few weeks. I

MRS. J.: WHY PICK ON THE POOR chin? It wouldn't be there if you hadn't coddled and fed it into its present rotundity. I suppose you never trained your neck muscles to hold your head up as they were ordered to do in the beginning. But I don't think you should confine your reform movement now to that particular part of your anatomy when you register twenty-two pounds overweight. Suppose we get after the whole Mrs. J., and put her through a course of sprouts that will eventually make her a shadow of her present self? If you are on, send s. a. e. and I'll provide you the exercise and diets that will make you "that old sweetheart" of his again. No use letting a little thing like twenty-two pounds stand between you and a dear devoted.

UGLY: FOR PERSPIRING FEET apply freely a solution of alcohol and salicylic acid in the proportion of one quart of alcohol to one tablesponful of salicylic acid.

ELSA: FOR EXTREMELY OILY hair try sprinkling common salt on the scalp; brush it out thoroughly. It seems to absorb the oil. A salt rub after the bath is good. It makes the skin clean and fresh smelling.

FOR AND BY BUSINESS GIRLS BY LORETTA KING

Miss King will be glad to help business girls solve their problems. If you want a personal answer send a stamped, addressed envelope. Address Miss Loretta King, The Tribune, Chicago.

THE LONG GRIND TO SUCCESS.

AS MARION sat down to lunch with Dorothy and me the other day she heaved a sigh of evident relief.

"What's that sigh for?" Dorothy inquired.

"Well, I've had a rather troublesome morning," Marion answered, "and it's good to be here with just you two. No office worries for a little while and nothing more serious to think of," she added with a smile, "than the most appropriate menu for a hot day."

After Minnie had gone off to get the assortment of cold dishes we had ordered, I asked Marion if she would mind telling us what was troubling her or if she preferred to forget the office and talk about something else during the meal. I knew that if she were really worried or disturbed about some incident of the office she would want to talk it over with us, in spite of her protestation that she wanted to forget the office and its worries for awhile.

"Oh, I don't really mind talking about it," she said, "especially when I have such a sympathetic audience. This has been one of those all wrong mornings for me.

"To begin with, I was late getting down, and I found Mr. Downs waiting at my desk to give me some instructions on an important order that had to be made up the first thing. A little later when I had put in a long distance call for the manager of one of our branch houses and finally got him on the wire, neither of us could understand what the other was saying. All I could make out from him was that he couldn't hear me, and I guess that's as much as he got from me.

"But the thing that upset me most and that I've been trying all morning to straighten out is one of the young girls in my department—she's been with us only a few months—has got the idea into her head that I was down on her and deliberately tried to keep her out of a raise and a promotion."

"Why, Marion! How ridiculous!" Dorothy was palpably indignant at the thought of anyone accusing Marion of unfairness. "What gave her such an idea?"

"It was all imagination, of course," said Marion. "If she had had a little more experience there'd have been nothing to it."

"I took her on," Marion continued, "as a typist. She's neat and careful, and whenever there's a special and particular job of copying to be done for any department in the house I get Evelyn to do it and I know it will be done right.

"She told me, after she was with us a few weeks, that she knew shorthand and would be glad of an opportunity to use it. I told her I would give her a chance to use it at the first opportunity and tried her out to see if she was all right. She seemed satisfied at that and said nothing more about it until three weeks ago, when she asked me again if she couldn't be given some dictation.

"I assured her I hadn't forgotten my promise, and explained that as we were a little slack there was hardly enough work just then to keep the regular stenographer busy. I complimented her on her work, and she seemed grateful for the praise.

"I've noticed lately that she showed a tendency to sulk, but I didn't pay much attention or attach any importance to it until this morning, when, in the midst of all my other worries, one of the girls informed me that Evelyn was on the point of leaving because she said I didn't like her and wouldn't give her a chance at another job, even though she deserved it.

"Well, I had a terrible time getting Evelyn around to my point of view, but I think I finally accomplished it before I left. I didn't want her to leave under such a silly misapprehension. Neither did I like being represented as a petty tyrant. I had to work good and hard to disabuse her mind of the idea that I stood in the way of her advancement, and then it took some little time and a great deal of talk to persuade her to be patient for a little while and her opportunity would come. I assured her that it was a long, hard grind to success, even for the best, and that patience, as well as ability, was necessary to the process."

Marion finished the meal in silence, but as she was preparing to leave she said: "This experience with Evelyn this morning has taught me a lesson. Occasionally I've had an idea that certain people in the house were antagonistic to me and hindered my progress. Well, maybe they've been as unconscious of me as I've been of Evelyn. Hereafter I'll give them the benefit of the doubt. At least I've made up my mind that I won't talk about them because of fancied grievances."

What a Raid on the Attic, a Coat or Two of Paint, and an Amateur Brush Might Do

Breakfast room in peacock blue, trimmed in lemon yellow and vari-hued enamelac flowers.

In order to paint furniture and decorate it, vast experience is not at all necessary. Beautiful, quaint old pieces are often consigned to the attic or—even worse—to the junk heap for want of a coat of paint. But what is the sense of letting lovely things waste away in some dark, forgotten corner? Bring out all of your old pieces. Don't hide them away any longer! Renew their lives and set them up for every one to admire. Convert the shabby old things into good new ones, suitable for any room.

If you are really desirous of having a painted set, but you don't chance to have any old furniture, don't be dismayed. New, unstained furniture is made especially to be painted. In case that you fail to find any of that kind which suits you, there are always pieces of good lines selling at low prices, on account of their having been finished in some distasteful way, such as a high polish. Quantities of these are generally on the market, and their prices are set at surprisingly low figures.

After you have decided as to which pieces you are to renovate, the first thing to do before attempting to paint them is to prepare them for the first coat. The grain of the wood, in new, unfinished furniture, must be filled up before any painting is done. Any imperfections or resinous knotholes in the wood must be covered, too. These knotholes are most treacherous things in painted wood of any kind, because when they are brought in contact with heat they begin to ooze and swell the paint which is covering them, making blisters on the surface of the paint. In order to prevent this, as well as to fill the grain of the wood, new furniture must have a coat of shellac, then the paint will keep its smooth, even appearance.

Preparatory to painting, old furniture must be treated in a different way from the new. Dust has most probably gradually accumulated and worked its way into the wood, and undoubtedly the surface will show scratches and chips. Varnish or paint remover must be used to remedy this; sandpapering may be used to the same advantage, though it is a more tedious job than applying the varnish remover. After the old finish has been entirely cleaned off, a coat of shellac must be put on.

For new, varnished furniture a general light sandpapering is usually all that is required in preparation for painting. But in case that the varnishing is highly polished or heavy it is best to remove it entirely and apply a coat of shellac, such as is used for unfinished furniture.

The next thing to do, after the wood has been prepared, is to select the paint for the ground color. Turpentine and dryer should be substituted for oil in laying coats of paint on furniture. The first coat should be perfectly dry and then sandpapered lightly before the second is added, and the second must be treated in the same way as the first before a third coat is laid on. Each coat must be perfectly smooth and must have no drops or bumpiness on before the next is applied.

Two coats of paint, in most cases, are all that is necessary. When the second coat, if that is to be the last, is dry, an eggshell enamel finish should be added. One coat of this is all that is necessary, but in case the first coat is not satisfactory when it is dry, another coat can be put on right over it. Light colored furniture should be rubbed carefully with rotten stone (powdered pumice) and water. If the color is dark, oil is used for the rubbing instead of water.

When the ground paint is completely dry, then comes the problem of adding suitable decorations. The first thing to be taken into consideration along this line is the brushes which will be used in painting the designs. Oxhair or sable brushes are the best to use, unless you have applied a high polish—camel's hair would be better for pieces which have been treated in this way. A drying oil should be mixed with the paints which are to be used in making the design, in order to prevent their being sticky when it is finished.

Applying designs free hand is rather a difficult task. The results are apt to appear messy unless you have had some experience in that line of work. Disappointments of this sort do not frequently occur if cut stencils are used. You may either buy these or make them yourself. To make one you should carefully trace some design on a piece of stencil paper, and then lay it out flat and cut out the pattern with a sharp knife—one that is sharp enough to cut through the paper easily and smoothly, so that there will be no rough edges to spoil the effect of the design. The next thing to do is to hold the stencil firmly in place while the paint is laid on through the holes. You must have a steady hand in lifting the stencil, after the paint has been put on, in order that it will not smear. A few finishing touches, in color or line, may be added after the stencil has been removed.

If you are confident of having a knack for it, freehand designing may be made most effectively by copying some interesting pattern which you have seen. You may either make these exactly like the originals or vary them to suit your fancy.

Straight lines often add greatly to the charm of decorated furniture. Striping brushes are especially made for this purpose, and they usually turn out to be profitable investments.

Outer surfaces of some pieces of furniture, such as cupboards in breakfast rooms, are often painted in a rather dark, but decorative color—peacock blue, for instance, and the interiors are painted in lighter harmonizing colors, such as lemon yellow. In the case of the breakfast room cupboard to which I have reference, after the outside of the cupboard had been painted blue and the inside yellow, a decorative design of flowers in bright hues was painted on the glass doors. The foundation for this design was laid in a heavy coat of pure white paint. When the white had thoroughly dried, the bright colors were all put on over it. This treatment gave them a solid appearance. Had they been laid on in the ordinary manner they would have looked transparent and not nearly so attractive. They were all done in enamelac instead of paint, so that the doors can be washed as often as is desired without affecting the design in the least.

French gray furniture is always effective when it is stenciled with mauve. Lemon color with rust; dark blue or black with fine lines of emerald green, and other harmonizing two-toned furniture make striking and decorative sets.

Combining the colors of the draperies with those of the painted furniture is often pleasing in results. If the furniture in a bedroom has been painted Italian blue, with a dull gold design, the bed spreads, table covers, and other draperies would be lovely, made of gold colored sunfast, trimmed in bands of Italian blue taffeta. The windows should have gold colored silk gauze glass curtains, and inside draperies of the same blue taffeta that is used for trimmings. To break the monotony of the same two colors, a flash of bright rose color should be thrown into the scheme. A pillow or some other decorative piece might serve the purpose to advantage. To complete this arrangement the rug should be either of a darker blue than that of the draperies or else of a golden brown.

THE GAY AND FESTIVE LOBSTER.

We who were born on or near the seacoast are likely to sit in the seat of the scornful, or the near scornful, when residents of the Mississippi valley go into transports over lobster salad, usually about one-sixth lobster meat and the rest hard boiled egg and even less desirable extenders.

But, courage to them, these same residents are not to be bluffed out of their lobster, from the spit or blanketed with heavy mayonnaise—much too heavy in nine cases out of ten—since carloads of green and boiled lobsters are shipped inland and canned lobster is procurable everywhere.

For many years now lobster has stood for expensive and merry eating. Often it has stood for disheveled and even licentious merriment, over the table top, in "lobster parlors," but that is not the fault of the lobster. Contrasted with this are the lobster frolics on the shores of the old Atlantic, the meat of this crustacean giving joy to the most primitive epicures, like bronzed fishermen and longshoremen.

How to Buy Lobster.

Perhaps the first information needed by the inland cook is how to buy lobster, live or just boiled. In summer always the hen or female lobster is to be preferred, and most people possessed of lobster knowledge and experience prefer this lobster the year around, partly because of its beautiful coral. The claw meat, the daintiest of all when perfect, is likely to be superior in the female claws, since the males are old warriors and often lose a claw or both large claws may be injured in their battles.

Sea food experts in many parts of the world demand to see the fish which is to be cooked for them. Those who wish to become experts in sea food eating places have many things to learn before the cook may not be able to cheat them. There has been more than one entertaining short story in which the lobster has played a part, one noble crustacean perhaps being kept alive to be exploited on a great platter to a guest in a lobster palace, for which another is quickly substituted and cooked so as to save the exhibited carapace for further lure to expensive buying.

Female Lobster Better.

The eater who orders broiled female lobster need not be cheated when this shell fish, in the shell, is presented to him white hot from the broiler. The author of "The Hotel Butcher, Garde Manger and Carver" gives us an excellent paragraph on how to distinguish lobster sex. He says:

"There is an infallible way of identifying the male and female. On the under side of the lobster's tail there are some tentacles, a row on each side, extended the full length of the tail. In the male lobster you will find the first pair of these, at the end of the tail nearest or toward the head, are of a hard bone formation, while those of a female are of a soft, leathery, and pliable formation. So, when you get an order for female lobster, examine these little tentacles on the tail and choose the lobster with a soft pair."

Paying for Water.

Mrs. Glasse, in her ancient book, supposed to be the first of English cook books, which it is not but is perhaps the first book of compiled recipes, says: "Chuse them by weight; the heaviest are best, if no water be in them: if new, the tail will pull smart, like a spring; if full, the middle of the tail will be full of hard or reddish skinned meat. Cock lobster is known by the narrow back part of the tail, and the two uppermost fins within his tail are stiff and hard; but the hen is soft and the back of her tail broader."

Mrs. Glasse says "peg" a lobster before you boil it so that no water will get in. Our market people take no such precaution, so in buying a boiled lobster you should look well to see how much water will leak out of it. You can easily pay lobster prices for half a pound of water.

Roast Lobster.

Two of this ancient cook's recipes tell how to butter lobster, and of course include a wine seasoning, as do nine-tenths of all old lobster recipes, but her recipe for roast lobster is good today for us who can drop a live lobster into a kettle of boiling water, or water hot enough to kill it instantly, but do not like the idea of cutting it up while it is alive. She says:

"Boil your lobsters, then lay them before the fire, and baste them with butter, till they have a fine froth. Dish them up with plain melted butter in a cup. This is as good a way to the full as roasting them, and not half the trouble."

Lobster Caution.

Mrs. Lincoln gives some lengthy and good directions for lobster manipulation and cookery, but says that lobster should never be kept more than eighteen hours after boiling. We should know our fishman and be sure he is honest when we buy cooked lobster. In buying live lobsters we can tell by the spring in the tail and other signs of animation something about its condition. Since the tail of a lively lobster curls up stiffly when dropped into boiling water, it is a good plan to buy only such cooked lobster as has a springy tail.

It is a curious thing that many of the recipes give no other direction about the boiling than that the lobster should be dropped into boiling water and cooked twenty minutes or up to an hour. There is a difference of opinion as to how long, but the scantier time can always be used when the lobster is to be recooked, as in creaming and so forth. It will have more flavor than when overcooked.

Lobster technology is long. For instance, the stomach of the lobster is often called "the lady," but it is also called the craw, the bag, the "queen," etc. Even the shell is pounded fine and used in sauces. In fact, one writer says: "The whole lobster is good to eat, except the shell and craw, or stomach, which lies between the eyes." But the intestine on the back of the tail should be removed. By the way, there are people who do not know which end of a lobster is which. The stalked eyes and the feelers ought to designate for them which, or what, is the head part. The male lobster is called by a great number of names, including the "ram."

Boiled Lobster.

By the way, there is another way of telling when a lobster has been kept too long before it was cooked. It wastes away rapidly when kept alive without food. I have seen a cooked lobster with a big carapace, which was practically empty, though the tail and claws were well filled, which would show that this part of it wastes first. I have also known some young people who boiled lobster at the shore without salt, and were all sick after eating it. There certainly can be no harm in salting the water in which it is boiled, and one famous cook gives the following direction: "A number should be placed at one time in a basket, and that placed in boiling water, adding half a pound of salt to every gallon of water, with a heavy weight upon it. If overdone, they eat tough and thready; if underdone, unwholesome and unpalatable. One weighing a pound will take fifteen minutes, and so on in proportion." It is pretty sure that the lobster is superior when a number are cooked at the same time, but there are ways of using even less water or steaming the lobster.

Lobster Salad.

If any one wants to read a perfect diatribe on the poor lobster salads served in American hotels turn to "Salads and Sauces," by Thomas J. Murrey, an American epicure of forty years ago, who also was a great expert on American fish. But his recipe, to my mind, is not the one to use with inland market lobsters. For this meat I dilute a mustard seasoned mayonnaise dressing a half with whipped cream, because I want to get the lobster flavor, and the only thing I mix with the lobster is a little celery cut exceedingly fine. Cut up the lobster in pieces which would be called neither small nor large, sprinkle lightly with salt, and dress the last minute before serving.

Creamed and Stuffed Lobster.

Make a cream sauce or, better, use real cream, seasoning it with nutmeg, as well as salt and paprika, both of which seasonings should completely lose their identity, and add about three grains of cayenne pepper per cup of sauce. Cut up the lobster in pieces of the desired size—more digestible when cut rather fine—heat it up gently in a bit of butter, put it into the sauce, and let the two cook together until the whole is quite pink. Serve with boiled rice. A tiny bit of curry powder may be used in the sauce, especially when it is to be served with rice. For stuffed lobster, fill the shell with creamed lobster, sprinkle with bread crumbs and bits of butter, and cook in hot oven till it puffs.

Where to Find Many Lobster Recipes.

The great cook, Escoffier, in his "Guide to Modern Cookery," gives thirty-five lobster recipes, using the French name "homard" for lobster. For fancy and elaborate service go to him.

More common in France than the smooth backed lobster, it seems to me, is the spiny backed lobster, or langouste, which is always included among the ingredients of the famous bouillabaisse.

An Epicure in the Seventh Heaven.

Of all the recipes for lobster cooking I have ever seen I think one appearing November, 1919, in a story entitled "The First Lady of Cranberry Isle" interested me most. Cranberry Isle is in northeast New England, where the finest lobsters in the world are caught. Of the lobsters it said—with "are" in italics—"These are lobsters that are lobsters. To cook them a fire was built, a sheet of iron put over it, and on this hot iron a layer of rockweed from which came up great puffs of steam before the lobsters were put into it and covered with more of the weed. Then clams were dropped over this weed, another layer of rockweed added, and on top a dozen ears of yellow bantam corn with a blanket of weed over all. Lobsters are packed in this weed when sent to market, so they might be thus cooked inland and out of doors.

"Now from this dome of wet weed a smell of cooking rose, the effect of which on Mr. Rackby was to stir him like a romance. When he knew by that savor in the steam that the lobsters were fairly in the weed he drew his watch and sat down beside them. Full twenty minutes must pass before he could rake away the weed and crack his way to the substance of those steaming mandibles."

The description continues for many hundreds of words. Of the cooked lobster it says: "In all his twenty segments his mandibles, his red antennae, foot jaws, fish claws, quick claws, and numb claws, he was calculated to raise an epicure into the seventh heaven."

That was lobster as was, plain, delicious, needing no mayonnaise, no lettuce, no boiled egg, no strong condiments. Yet in the plainest of plain cooking of lobster there is much of technique, more than could be described in an article five times the length of this.

Karel's elder sister was having a new dress fitted. They were discussing how long the skirt should be, mother insisting it was much too short, sister saying it was just a nice length. After much laughing and joking upon the subject Karel was asked her opinion. "Well," said the candid child, "if you has got any more goods left I believe I'd sew it on the bottom." V. M. B.

The children were talking about a movie actor while eating their luncheon one noon. One boy was graphically describing his actions and thrilling deeds with his horse. Presently he turned to me and asked: "Miss Mary, why don't we talk about him like we do about George Washington and Lincoln?" M. L. S.

Clarence was trying to explain to his playmate the distinction between the small dog and the larger one, and this is the way he expressed himself: "The little dog is the baby dog, and the big one is the mamma dog, just like your mamma." H. C. S.

I said to my sister, Dorothy, "Well, shall we have a walk or a car ride this afternoon?"

"I'd razer walk," Dorthy replied, "if 'ou will carry me." M. C.

The Last Word in Paris Fashions

FOR A FRENCH SUMMER.

By Mary Brush Williams.

[Chicago Tribune Foreign News Service.]

PARIS.—[Special Correspondence.]—She started right in where she left off last year. The last I then saw of her was on the Champs Elysee, just before she took the boat home to pass the summer in Newport. "You know I can't find them," was her final utterance. "Here I shall be just back from the biggest fashion center in Europe to pass the summer in the biggest fashion center in America. And without any summer clothes! How can I wear serge and black silk in Newport?"

Quite by accident I met her the other day in about the same spot, and she said, "You know I can't find them. We brought over our car and we're going to Dinar for July and August, and how can I wear black—mourning—embroidered crêpe, and panne velvet at the leading summer resort of the world for this year?"

She is a blue eyed, feather top of an attractive person, and it's the first time I ever saw her seriously mystified over anything. "The summer dresses," she demanded. "Where are they?"

My reply was just the same this June as it had been last. "You know," I reminded her, "they hardly wear them at all," and in the next few minutes we had set off together to try to scare up some summer clothes for Dinar.

One of the leading discomforts of a Chicago summer, as I remember it, is to feel your organdie dress dying on you. Of course, the reason the French do not go in for wash things is because the small amount of hot weather enjoyed by them does not warrant it. They devise something with a longer span of years to live than those of a wash dress. So if you want to be economical, you can follow their way of doing. Of a consequence, they haven't much idea of summer things as a rule. With one of the smartest houses for hats, summer to them is indicated by rows of apple blossoms circling the crown and dripping over one ear.

However, I thought Jean Patou had some awfully pretty dresses in wash materials—so called, I suppose, because they hardly ever wash. The first one here shown is of green and white organdie tucked until you can think of nothing but a jeune fille. With the French the summer dress, by the way, usually seems to suggest the young girl; maybe wash frocks are not sophisticated enough for the grownups of this country. The bodice is straight in line and of the green organdie, marked by straight bands of white in groups of three down the front of it from the round neckline. This motif is repeated in a sort of harness effect over the arms, replacing sleeves, which are almost demodé for the moment. The skirt is of the white organdie with four panels of the green going at regular intervals from waist line to hem.

The second offering also is by M. Patou, and it also is of white organdie, finely tucked in the bodice. The dress depends for its character on the scallops round the bottom of the skirt, three deep, and red! As a matter of fact, the skirt is in three tiers, and these scallops give the petal effect so much in vogue now. A Cocarde decorates either hip, and each trails streamers of ribbon of varying lengths. Little bands over the shoulders mark the spot from which in some former geological style epoch the sleeves once sprang. The hat accompanying is of white horse hair trimmed with red ribbon and lots of it.

The two following offerings are more in the spirit of a French summer—the others being more a concession to our overpowering American demands. The third one, indeed, represents the spirit of summer to a Frenchman as he has known it. The present summer is an amazement to him with its dust. This is a raincoat for the summer showers in this city of temperamental climate. To be sure, this year it has taken a caprice to be hot and sunny, but I have seen the coat appear just the same—and it is admirable for dust and motoring. It is made of crêpe de chine rubberized—yes, in their present rage for rubberizing they have done it even to crêpe de chine. It is trimmed with a green leather collar and bands round the cuffs. A pocket garnishes either hip. It is shirred round the back to give the proper fullness, and the narrow belt begins at the sides where the shirrings cease.

The fourth offering is an afternoon dress for summer which can still continue long after summer has come and gone. It is of wistaria colored crêpe georgette embroidered in a Japanese motif with silk threads of grayish mauve. The belt ties over one hip in a charmingly graceful bow, the ends of which fall far below the edge of the hem. It has a panel down the other side, and bell shaped sleeves, very long, which also carry the embroidery.

Leaving Rather Early.

I am employed in a bank, and three of us were leaving quite early—really earlier than we should have. As we stepped to the front door two officers of the bank also were ready to leave, so I decided to wait until they had gone, thinking the other girls would do likewise. I stepped behind the curtains in my office.

I was standing there a few seconds when I heard footsteps, and, thinking it was the girls coming to look for me, I waited until they got close, then stepped aside from the curtains and shouted "Boo!"

I was facing the vice president of the bank, who had come to dictate another letter to me before leaving. He is a dignified, elderly man, and—well, you can just imagine how embarrassed I was. H. S.

Against the Rules.

One evening while working alone in a public school library some one came in talking rather noisily.

Without looking up I sternly said, "Will you please be more quiet?"

To my horror when I looked up I found out that it was the head librarian who had come in with the president of the board of education. A. S. E.

In the Next Room.

While taking dictation one day in the office of a large concern, where there was a row of department managers' offices along one side of the building divided by glass partitions, it happened that the department manager occupying the room adjoining had a woman visitor, a relative. As the conversation became more or less interesting and their voices occasionally rose to louder tones, with the doors of both offices open, my attention was drawn from the dictation, and as I was not much more than a beginner, I should have bent every effort to take down the dictation.

Mr. L. suddenly asked me to repeat what he had said—I think he also was paying attention to the conversation in the next room and wanted to make sure of what he had dictated.

I heard him say when I got to the fourth or fifth sentence, "Why, I didn't say that. You must have been listening to some of the conversation in the next room."

What could I do? The look I gave him was an admission, and showed my embarrassment. H. C.

What a Debut!

It was my first big recital. I was singing a song of springtime. "The buds are bursting on the trees," etc. The audience was suddenly convulsed with mirth. I found I'd been caroling that "the birds are busting on the trees." What a blow! My pleasure in the work was gone. R. P.

Taking Him at His Word.

It was my first day at the university, and I was just entering classes. I went into what I thought was my psychology class. After being enrolled the professor started to give us a preliminary talk. As he went on I gathered that I was in the wrong classroom. To make sure I asked the student just ahead of me, and he informed me that it was a class in political economy. On realizing my mistake it did not take me long to pack up my things and make a dash for my psychology class. Just as I was going out of the door every one gave me the laugh.

It wasn't until then that I remembered the professor's words as I was packing up my things for my exit. It was something along this line: "This class is going to be hard and means lots of hard work from each one of you. If you don't intend to work you can get right out now and not waste your time here."

It was just at the time he was saying the last sentence that I got out. I can truthfully say that was my most embarrassing moment. M. R. B.

To the Business Men of Chicago—

For over forty years Linoleum has been laid by methods which often led you to think it was imperfect for the reason that the goods would bulge or stretch; the seams would open up and at times crumble along the edges; water would get underneath and separate the burlap back from the body; this brought about an unsanitary condition and shortened the life of the goods.

Now all this is changed. The Richardson-Method of Laying Linoleum, by which a heavy felt lining is first pasted to the floor and the Linoleum in turn pasted and cemented to the felt, has entirely overcome all of these objections.

Gentlemen:

The linoleum laid in our Women's Rest Rooms by your special process presents a most pleasing appearance. The seams between the breadths are so tight that they are almost undiscernable and seem to present no opportunity for water to get underneath and rot either the linoleum or floor. The installation is highly satisfactory.

Yours truly,

Vice President.

One of many such letters on file in our office.

Advantages of the Richardson-Method:

1. The Linoleum at once becomes a solid, permanent, resilient floor. It cannot buckle, bulge or stretch.
2. The felt foundation, which is pasted to the floor, absorbs all expansion or contraction that may take place in the wood or concrete base.
3. The felt layer makes the Linoleum more durable, thereby lengthening the life of the Linoleum floor.
4. The possible damage from water when laid by other methods is eliminated when laid by the Richardson-Method.
5. It is sanitary because it is non-absorbent, easily cleaned, smooth and free from cracks.
6. Economical both in first cost and in the constant savings in maintenance expense as compared with other methods of laying and other types of floors.
7. In most cases the work is completed in one trip, making it unnecessary to return and disturb the room.
8. Linoleum when laid by the Richardson-Method can be removed without difficulty or damage should the necessity arise.

Gentlemen:

Referring to yours of the 22nd ult.

Beg to state that the Linoleum laid for us by the Richardson Method is entirely satisfactory in every respect. We would consider this method well worth the difference in labor cost over the old method.

Yours truly,

Business men recommend the Richardson-Method.

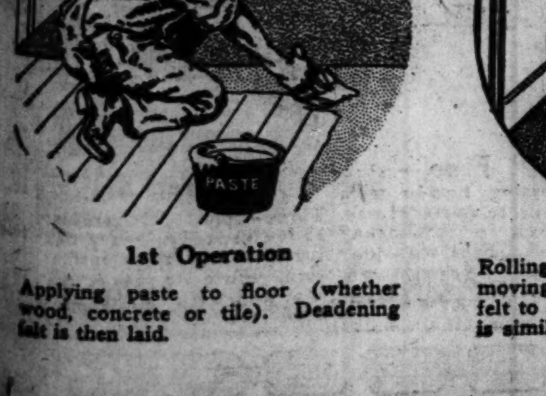
Recommended—

During the past year we have laid thousands of yards of Linoleum by this method in

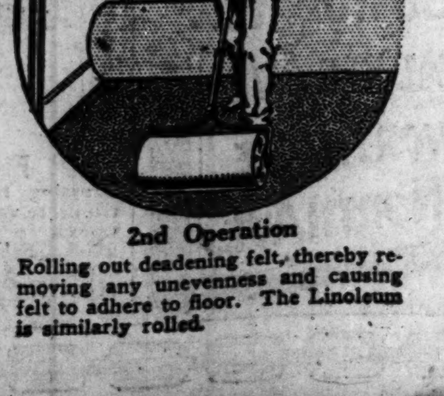
Offices, Stores, Hospitals, Residences, Billiard Halls, Theaters and Public Buildings

We will gladly furnish the names of many of our customers who have expressed their desire to recommend this method.

Telephone State 8860, contract dept., and ask to have one of our representatives call



1st Operation
Applying paste to floor (whether wood, concrete or tile). Deadening felt is then laid.



2nd Operation
Rolling out deadening felt, thereby removing any unevenness and causing felt to adhere to floor. The Linoleum is similarly rolled.

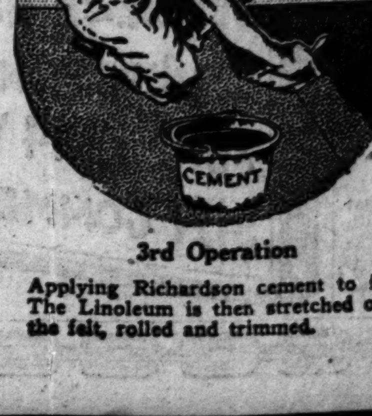
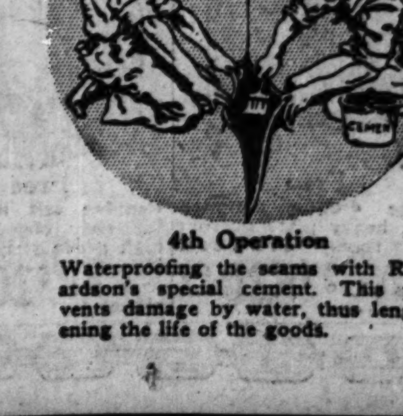
Rugs, Furniture, Carpets, Linoleum, Phonographs, Columbia Records

125 South Wabash Avenue

Just North of Adams Street



3rd Operation
Applying Richardson cement to felt. The Linoleum is then stretched over the felt, rolled and trimmed.



4th Operation
Waterproofing the seams with Richardson's special cement. This prevents damage by water, thus lengthening the life of the goods.

1060—Woman's dress. Sizes 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires ¾ yards of 36 or 40 inch material, with 3¼ yards of binding and 2½ yards of ribbon.

9576—Woman's and miss' dress. Size 16 years and 36 to 42 inches bust measure. Size 36 requires 3¾ yards of 36 inch figured material, with 1½ yards of 36 inch plain and 4⅝ yards of plaiting.

1051—Girl's long-waisted slip-on dress. Sizes 8 to 14. Size 8 requires 1⅛ yards of 36 inch material for the skirt, with the same amount for the blouse and 2 yards of edging.

How to Use the Patterns

FOR an afternoon dress to wear at home No. 1060 would be just the thing. It is simple in design, but smart and attractive looking. It is a one piece dress, with the skirt part at the sides extending beyond the waist to allow for fullness there, these parts being gathered and brought back and sewed to the bottom of the waist.

The skirt, for size 36, measures 1¾ yards around the bottom. The neck of the dress may be cut round or square across the front, and the sleeves may be long or short. If long, they are fitted to the arm by a dart between the wrist and elbow on the outside.

Linen, ratine, jersey, or pongee would make up effectively.

If the sleeve edges are bound, the scallops and top of vest and the little length across the top of the skirt where the vest ends should be bound also. Or they can be faced with the same material, which doubtless would be easier to do.

For the scalloped fronts lay a strip of the material—straight—down each front, having both right sides come together; then, holding the scalloped edge next to you, baste in a short running stitch a seam's depth below the edge all around each scallop, so the materials will not slip. Stitch on the machine, making a quarter inch seam and taking care at the corners. After the stitching is done and the bastings taken out clip at each corner almost to the stitching, then turn the facing right side out and see that the turning is made exactly on the seam everywhere; then turn the opposite edge of the facing in and catch lightly at intervals, so it will not be noticeable on the right side.

A buttonhole may be worked in each scallop, or the fastening may be done with snaps.

Embroidery is still much in vogue, and there are several ways it could be used on this dress with good effect. A string sash may be made of the material or ribbon would look well.

No. 9576 is another attractive looking design, and would be pretty made of some one of the lighter weight materials. Dotted swiss, dimity, or imported voile would look well. Brown is seen a great deal, and, if becoming, brown dotted swiss made up with brown organdie would look well. Use the dotted swiss for the lower skirt section and the plain organdie for the upper part. The body of the waist can be cut from the swiss; the vest, girdle, collar, and cuffs from the organdie.

The fronts of the waist are gathered at the shoulder seams, and the waist should fit easily everywhere, allowing it to blouse a little at the waistline. The vest is fulled into a narrow band across the top, and this band could be of the swiss. Tiny ruffles of organdie would make an attractive finish for the edges of the cuffs and collar, and a narrow ruffle could be set into the seam where the upper and lower skirt sections join.

The skirt is a two piece, gathered one; size 36 measures 2¼ yards at the bottom.

No. 1051 is a long waisted, slip-on model, closing down the back. The skirt is a one piece straight gathered one, and the kimono cut waist shapes in a rather unusual line across the bottom, and is to be made loose fitting. It would make up prettily in two materials or in one, as one fancies.

It is suitable for wash materials, such as chambray, gingham, or linen; or wool, silk crêpe, taffeta, or challis. If made of one material a piping of some contrasting color could be set in where the waist and skirt join. The collar and little cuffs could also be of the contrasting material.

It would also look well to combine two materials in the making, using a check, plaid, or some figured material for the skirt, and a plain material for the waist.

Reinforce the underarms where the sleeve comes with a bias strip of material so the waist will not give way

Deserves to Be Loved.

"Dear Miss Blake: I am 19 years old and have been going with a fellow about six years my senior. We are so fond of each other, I should not be surprised if we would become engaged pretty soon. Some of my friends say I should try to drift away from him and not become engaged, because he was in the war and while serving in France got a little shell shock and may at any time lose his mind.

"DISCOURAGED."

If you love the man as a chap who served in the war and sustained injuries thereby deserves to be loved, your friends' comment would not be given ear at all. It is only in severe cases of shell shock that the minds have been affected. Medical treatment in milder cases has restored the soldier to perfect health.

Unkind About Sailors.

"Dear Miss Blake: We are three girls past 17, and have been going out with sailors for more than a year. Our mothers object to this for two reasons. First, they say sailors are lazy and have a bad name. Second, most of the gobs are not our religion. Now, Miss Blake, during our friendship with the gobs we have found them to be honest, polite, friendly, sympathetic and everything else that a girl admires in a fellow, and if they did act as if they meant harm, we always dropped that kind. We don't think that just because the women on the block think bad of a girl that goes out with sailors, we should drop them and let them go out with bad girls, because we know that they enjoy a good girl's company, in spite of what other people say. We have decided to let you settle it for us, and promised our mothers to do just as you advise us.

"PUZZLED."

For goodness sake! This libel on the sailor boys startles me. How utterly ridiculous! A sailor's uniform could no more demoralize a boy than a soldier's or a policeman's or a mailman's or the uniform of the highest rank in the land. If the boy is right, he is. So I don't think it fair for older women to prejudice a girl's mind against the sailor. They are no different from your brothers and your mothers' sons, and you would resent any charge like that against them, wouldn't you? Besides, we don't need another war to prove just what stuff the sailor boys are made of, do we?

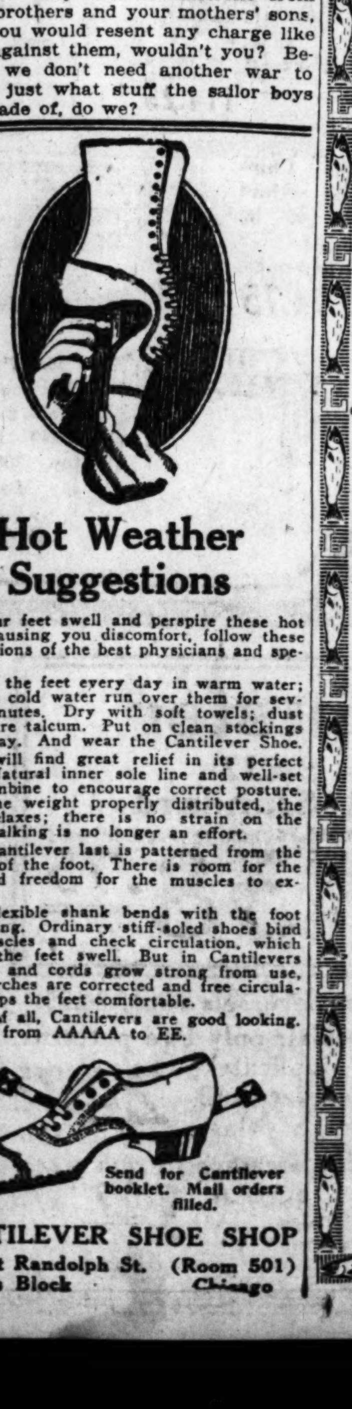
"TIZ" FOR TIRED OR ACHING FEET

Just put those weary, shoe-crinkled, aching, burning feet into a Tiz bath.

Tiz is grand, glorious for tortured feet. It draws the swelling and poisonous exudations right out. Stops the pain of corns. Ends torture and puts your feet into perfect condition.

Your shoes won't seem tight and your feet will never hurt or get sore and swollen. Think of it, no more foot misery—and you will wear smaller shoes. Get a box of Tiz at any drug store and get instant relief for a few cents.

St. Jacobs' Oil Co., New York, N. Y.



Hot Weather Suggestions

If your feet swell and perspire these hot days, causing you discomfort, follow these suggestions of the best physicians and specialists:

Bathe the feet every day in warm water; then let cold water run over them for several minutes. Dry with soft towels; dust with pure talcum. Put on clean stockings every day. And wear the Cantilever Shoe.

You will find great relief in its perfect ease. Natural inner sole line and well-set heel combine to encourage correct posture. With the weight properly distributed, the body relaxes; there is no strain on the arch; walking is no longer an effort.

The Cantilever last is patterned from the outline of the foot. There is room for the toes and freedom for the muscles to exercise.

The flexible shank bends with the foot in walking. Ordinary stiff-soled shoes bind the muscles and check circulation, which makes the feet swell. But in Cantilevers muscles and cords grow strong from use, fallen arches are corrected and free circulation keeps the feet comfortable.

Best of all, Cantilevers are good looking. Widths from AAAAA to EE.

Send for Cantilever booklet. Mail orders filled.

Our semi-annual furniture sale is more than an ordinary sale: it has become an institution, so to speak; an event looked forward to by thousands of our patrons, who have at previous occasions taken advantage of bargain values that seldom, if ever, have been excelled. Not only are the low prices a buying incentive, but, coupled with highest standard of quality, workmanship and up-to-date style, we feel that our old customers shall meet with the same satisfaction as in former sales, and new purchasers shall be convinced of our commercial supremacy.

DRY CLEANING AT HOME

by Alma Harding

This is the twelfth article of a series giving instructions in dry cleaning, fine laundry work, bleaching, and dyeing.

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF SPOT REMOVERS.

IODINE ON HANDS—Moisten with water and hold over a sulphur match.

Iron Rust.

Spread the material over a bowl having about a quart of warm water with a teaspoonful of borax in it. Drop hydrochloric acid, drop by drop, until the stain begins to brighten, then immerse immediately in the water. Repeat until the stain disappears. Use either ammonia or borax in the rinsing water. If a yellow stain remains after using hydrochloric acid, bleach with a little peroxide.

A slower method, and one less likely to injure the fabric, is to sprinkle the stains with salt and moisten with lemon juice, laying in a hot sun to dry. It may be necessary to repeat several times. For iron in wool or silk moisten the spot with warm water, then rub in equal portions of citric acid and cream of tartar. Rinse well when the stain is removed. Under "Ink" there are other directions given for use with a hot tin plate.

Stains from iron in hoppers, bowls, and bathtubs may be taken off with muriatic acid. Rinse well afterward in a solution of potash or soda to prevent harm to the pipes from the acid.

Irons.

To remove rust from irons, soak a cloth in a weak solution of oxalic acid and scour the bottoms briskly.

Ivory.

To restore it when yellow rub with finely powdered pumice stone and water and expose to the sun, while still wet under some sort of glass covering to keep it from cracking. Repeat until a good white. Sometimes solid ivory ornaments may be placed in a bath of one part peroxide to two parts water at a temperature of 120 degrees. The grease should first be taken off with ether or ammonia. It is possible to sponge this mixture on ivory, but the bleaching is apt to be streaky.

To bleach little ivory ornaments which are yellow or dingy, wash them in soap and water with a brush and place while wet in clear sunshine. Wet them two or three times a day with soap water, keeping them always in the sun. Finally wash and rub with a soft cloth. They will be beautifully white. Or they may be whitened by rubbing them with a soft flannel dipped in eau de cologne. To polish ivory, putty powder and water, if rubbed on with a piece of old felt, produce a good polish when rubbed vigorously.

Ivory handled knives may be whitened and cleaned by dipping a chamois in water, then in powdered pumice; rub hard.

Jelly.

It will usually come out with tepid water like sugar, but if the fruit juices leave a stain proceed as directed under fruit stains.

Lace.

Lace can seldom if ever be dry-cleaned satisfactorily, but every precaution must be taken in wet-cleaning that the delicate texture is not injured. To clean real lace, wrap it around a bottle, and soak in a warm soap bath with a little borax in the water for one-half hour. Gradually bring the water to a boil, and let it boil 15 minutes; then cool. When cool, rinse in three waters, take off the bottle, and pin on a flannel to dry.

For laces which are not real or are of such a firmness that they may stand a little more rigorous treatment, soak in a soap solution for one-half hour and then in eau de Javelle water for 2 minutes. Rinse in a pint of water to which 4 teaspoonfuls of borax have been added. This will both neutralize the eau de Javelle and give stiffness like that of new lace to the old lace.

For lace that is old and fragile, as well as for silk laces, which unless extremely dirty should preferably be dry-cleaned, fold up the lace and put it in a bag made of fine old linen. Sew this up and soak in pure olive oil for 24 hours. This restores elasticity to the threads which are rotten and thin from age and washing. The next day boil 15 minutes in a soap suds made of dissolving pure soap in soft water. Rinse without squeezing in several waters and pass through a thin blued starch water. Iron while damp. The boiling does not apply to silk laces, which would be made yellow. Let them soak in a warm solution and stir them around from time to time by shaking the bag up and down.

Lace can be restored to its first freshness by brushing with a gum arabic solution before ironing. Never iron lace without a cloth between it and a moderately hot iron. Put a flannel under the lace. Don't press too hard.

Silver Laces.

Some cleaners say to place these laces in curdled milk for 24 hours; then rinse well. This brightens them.

A FRIEND IN NEED

By Sally Joy Brown

When information is wanted by mail a stamped, addressed envelope should accompany the request. Please do not send parcels to The Tribune, but write for the address of the applicant and send direct.

This department appears every day in The Daily Tribune.

"I am a young girl, and fond of swimming, but I lack a suit, and I cannot go as often as I'd like to. I wonder if one of the readers has a suit to pass along. I wear a size 34 or 36. I am going to the country for a few weeks soon, and I would like to have one for the time. PEGGY."

Perhaps there is an outgrown bathing suit which could be passed on to you. In that case, you shall hear from me.

"Some time ago I had a Spitz dog for whom I wanted to find a good home. Through your help I found one without a fault. I come to you this time offering a female dog, half collie and half shepherd, to a good home where there are no small children and where there is a fenced in yard. I am giving up the dog because I have another one, and as I am just out of the hospital it is too hard for me to care for both. The dog is 11 months old. MRS. F. L. S."

If you can offer the dog what the present owner desires for her make early application.

"The young man you mentioned in your letter of July 5 had already secured a kitten at the time we called him up and, in view of that fact, I am writing you again to see if you cannot help me find a home for ours somewhere else. I assure you that anything you may be able to do for me in this regard will be greatly appreciated. D. W. J."

I print your letter to give some one else the chance to ask for your kitten.

"Do you think there is a kind reader who has a bird cage to pass on to me, as I can not afford to buy one? Mine is so badly broken that my bird gets out, and it would break my heart if he should get away. MRS. D."

Who can supply the new cage for the canary?

The Theaters

SINCLAIR LEWIS' "Main Street" has been dramatized, and will have its first performance tomorrow night in Indianapolis at the hands of Stuart Walker's enterprising stock company, which thus gets its name in the papers again for the doing of something surely interesting, and perhaps worth while. The stage version is the work of Harvey O'Higgins and Harriet Ford, playwrights of skill, experience, and a flair for what the public wants, and Miss Peggy Wood, the likable actress whom we last saw in Mr. Hobart's "Buddies," will appear as Carol Kennicott. The performance is scheduled as something more than a try-out and less than a metropolitan premiere, and undoubtedly, if all goes well, we shall hear more of the play.

Having read "Main Street"—who hasn't?—you will wonder, perhaps, what sort of a drama this most-discussed novel of the year will make. Whatever fascinating qualities it may possess, these are not, it would seem, of the sort to be set forth in acting. Minutiæ of characterization; keen, analytic description; the soul of the American hinterland bared in the endless small talk of the eternal small town—these are "Main Street," and how is one to put them on the stage?

Well, the sponsors of the new venture seem to have settled the question to their own satisfaction, and one hopes Mr. Lewis will be pleased. This footlighting of best sellers is, more frequently than not, a thankless task; no one, it may be suspected, suffers more than the author of the hapless masterpiece. Booth Tarkington's "Seventeen" made a good play, but the same author's classic "Penrod" was butchered to make a Thespian holiday. They took "Becky Sharp" out of "Vanity Fair" and it helped make Mrs. Fiske famous, but the limbo of forgotten things contains a host of dramatized novels of which you never heard.

Still, what is to be, will be, and "Main Street" on the stage was inevitable. It had to come, and we may as well have it over with. Next it will be in the movies. We can only hope for the best.

Frank Bacon and "Lightnin'," after having been tentatively headed in this direction for a year or more, are actually coming to Chicago at last. Reluctant announcement was made in New York last week that the record-breaking play will close there on Aug. 27 and will start the season at the Blackstone on Sept. 1. Only the refusal of the Blackstone management to postpone further the fulfillment of a twice deferred engagement, it was explained, keeps the play from continuing its phenomenal run at the Gaiety theater in New York, where it opened on Aug. 26, 1918, and where it has been in virtually continuous performance ever since.

"Lightnin's" plans for a western pilgrimage have come to be almost as much of a joke in the theaters as Bernhardt's farewell performances. The original contract for the Chicago engagement was signed three years ago when the play began its career. Late last summer its coming to Cohan's Grand was definitely announced, but it didn't come. John Golden, the producer, pleaded for more time in New York, and was released from his obligation. There was talk of sending a "Chicago company" with some one other than Bacon in the leading rôle, but nothing came of that. Then the booking was shifted to the Blackstone, and again there was delay. Now Bacon himself is coming in the rôle which he not only acts, but which he helped to write. When the play closes in New York it will have been seen there 1,291 times.

Mrs. Leslie Carter is to act again. After several years spent in retirement abroad, she has come out of her villa in Versailles and returned to America to begin rehearsals of "The Circle," by Somerset Maugham, in which she will begin the season early in September. The Maugham opus was one of the London successes of last year.

"Smooth as Silk," going along equably at the Cort, bids fair to have a longer life in Chicago than that originally allotted it. The engagement was to have ended Aug. 6, but there is talk of extending it four weeks, or until Sept. 3. If this course is decided upon the coming of "The Champion," with Grant Mitchell, which is next on the schedule at the Cort, will be delayed a month.

Taylor Holmes, it is reported, likes "Smooth as Silk" well enough to have persuaded its producer, H. H. Frazee, to begin negotiations for the presentation of the drama in London and Paris. If nothing goes wrong the London engagement will begin in the spring of 1922, with Mr. Holmes as the star, and a Paris showing will follow some time later.

The Colonial, which is to open its new season with the coming of Fred Stone and the Dillingham extravaganza, "Tip-Top," has postponed its inaugural for a week. Stone and his cohorts will arrive on Aug. 7, instead of July 31, as first announced.

"Snapshots of 1921," another of the revues, is scheduled for arrival in Chicago on Labor day—minus the services of Miss Nora Bayes, one of its leading lights in the east, who is off to fill an engagement in London. Lew Fields and De Wolf Hopper, the other luminaries of the show, will be here, it is said.

Fiske O'Hara, who always relights the Olympic in the late summer with a new Irish play, will do it this year with a romantic concoction entitled "The Jolly Cavalier." As usual, it's by Anna Nichols.

New York's first glimpse of George White's "Scandals of 1921" was the event of last week in the eastern metropolis. The entertainment proved to be the usual sumptuous affair, with an impressive list of performers, most of them retained from last season's "Scandals," and a kaleidoscopic variety of scenes having to do with soviet Russia, the South Sea islands, Panama, Persia, Longacre square (New York), and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien's Madison Square Garden (New York) gymnasium.

"The Skylark," a three act comedy by Thomas P. Robinson, who was awarded the Harvard prize for this year, went into rehearsal last week for its presentation in New York on July 25. . . . Harry K. Morton and Miss Zella Russell, two of the players left in the lurch when "The Sweetheart Shop" gave up the ghost so abruptly in Chicago, have found refuge as leading man and woman of a stock company in Newport, R. I. . . . The new comedy by Sabbatino Lopez, in which Leo Ditrichstein is the principal figure, was performed for the first time last night in Stamford, Conn. Its title, originally "That Homely Henriquez," has been changed to "Face Value."

Ravinia's Opera Company Small but Zealous; Gossip of Music

By Edward Moore.

ONE of the surprising things about the compact opera company now at Ravinia is that it is able to function with so little apparent friction. Whether it is the north shore air or the other reasons why people refer to Chicago as a good summer resort, only one performance so far has been changed because of the illness of a singer. That was on Wednesday night, when Charles Hackett was unable to appear in "Romeo and Juliet."

It is something of a record for a season to have gone a bit more than three weeks with no more casualties than that. When one remembers what happens continually during the winter season of opera at the Auditorium, how artists are out of the casts for weeks on end, how performances are changed at short notice, how casts are changed at no notice at all, the Ravinia company seems rather wonderful, more like a summer camp than a hard working operatic organization.

They work hard and they accomplish things at a minimum of lost motion and temper. Probably they have their differences of opinion—no performance is said to be good unless every one concerned has raged a bit in rehearsal—but it would seem to be kept well within the family. Mr. Eckstein has apparently learned the secret of engaging artists who want to come to Ravinia and who want to work after they get there. It is a small company as opera companies go, and its deeds are greater than its numbers.

Three operas will be added to the list this week. Mr. Hackett has recovered, so that the postponed "Romeo and Juliet" will come to fulfillment, also "Manon." On the Italian side of the répertoire Italo Montemezzi's "L'Amore dei Tre Re" will likewise make its appearance for the first time this season.

The operatic schedule for the week follows:

Tonight—"The Barber of Seville," with Florence Macbeth, Charles Hackett, Riccardo Stracciari, Paolo Ananian, and Leon Rothier.

Tuesday—"Aïda," with Frances Peralta, Morgan Kingston, Alice Gentle, Picco, Ananian, and Louis D'Angelo.

Wednesday—"Manon," with Anna Fitziu, Hackett, Rothier, Graham Marr, D'Angelo, and others.

Thursday—"La Boheme," with Marie Sundelius, Margery Maxwell, Mario Chamlee, Riccardo Stracciari, D'Angelo, Picco, and others.

Friday—"L'Amore dei Tre Re," with Miss Peralta, Rothier, Kingston, Marr, and Giordano Paltrinieri.

Saturday—"Romeo and Juliet," with Miss Sundelius, Hackett, Marr, Rothier, Paltrinieri, D'Angelo, Ananian, Miss Maxwell, and Anna Correnti.

The Thursday afternoon children's concerts, with explanatory lectures by Mr. and Mrs. Marx E. Oberndorfer, rank among the most popular features of the season, closely followed this year by the dinner-dance and moving picture entertainment on Monday nights. Regular concerts by the Chicago Symphony orchestra are given on Saturday and Sunday afternoons.

American Prix de Rome.

At length the time has come for American composers to compete for a Prix de Rome in the same manner that it is done in France. The American academy in Rome announces the addition of a department of musical composition providing three fellowships. One has been established in the name of Frederick A. Juilliard, who recently pledged the sum of $50,000 for its support.

Among other contributors were Mrs. Willard D. Straight and Mrs. E. H. Harkness of New York, Mrs. Thomas H. Emery of Cincinnati, Mrs. E. W. Bok of Philadelphia, Cyrus McCormick Jr., Mr. and Mrs. H. H. Flagler, Paul D. Crabvath, Chief Justice William H. Taft, and Henry Seligman. Finally the Carnegie corporation, through James R. Angell, president of Yale university, provided a fund supplementing other donations of sufficient size to assure the fellowships.

They are to be awarded in a manner similar to the existing fellowships in architecture, painting, sculpture, and landscape architecture.

This is intended as an effort to stimulate creative art. "The academy was not established to give instruction to budding artists," says the statement. "It was established in order that picked men who had proved in competition here their capacity for their professions might gain in Rome the refinement and inspiration flowing from the monuments of the past."

One Prix de Rome fellowship will be awarded each year, providing three years of residence and study in Rome or two in Rome and one in Paris. After three years there will be three American composers constantly studying in Rome with the aid of the music department of the academy. Felix Lemond, director of the music department of Columbia university, has been appointed professor of the American academy in Rome and is on his way to his new duties.

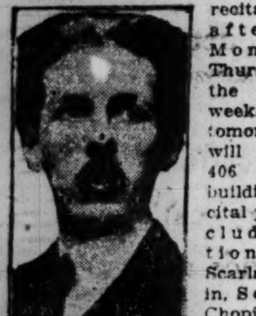
Recitals of the Week.



E. ROBERT SCHMITZ.

E. Robert Schmitz, the French pianist, announces a series of four lecture recitals on the afternoons of Mondays and Thursdays during the next two weeks beginning tomorrow. They will be given at 406 Fine Arts building. The recital programs include compositions by Bach, Scarlatti, Couperin, Schumann, Chopin, Liszt, and the modern composers.

Three other recitals are scheduled during the week, all to take place in the morning. In detail they are:

Tuesday—Rudolph Ganz and Edward Collins will give a two piano recital at the Ziegfeld theater. Works by Bach, Mozart, Grieg, Mendelssohn, and Saint-Saëns will be played.

Wednesday—Silvio Scionti, pianist, and Marie Sidenius Zendt, soprano, will appear in joint recital at Kimball hall.

Thursday—Louis Victor Saar will present a program of his own vocal compositions at the Ziegfeld. The composer will be at the piano, assisted by Naomi Mary McLain, soprano; Anne Leonard, mezzo soprano; and Fleeda Newton Alberti, contralto.

With the Melody Makers.

General Director Mary Garden has emerged from Germany bearing with her quite a sheaf of contracts with new singers for the Chicago Opera association. Among them are Richard Schubert, a tenor from Hamburg; Tino Pattiera, another tenor from Dalmatia; Claire Dux, lyric soprano from Dresden, and Eleanor Reynolds, an American contralto who has been living in Berlin. The name of Josef Schwarz, baritone, from the Berlin Opera house, was also mentioned in the dispatch, but he was engaged in this country; in fact, he sang with the company in San Francisco last spring. Schubert is rated as the leading tenor of Germany. He will be cast as Tristan and in various other Wagnerian rôles.

Where some of them spend the summer:

Frances Alda, Enrico Caruso, Marguerite D'Alvarez, Emmy Destinn, Florence Easton, the Flonzaley quartet, Alfred Hertz, Frieda Hempel, Ethel Leginska, Francis Maclennan, Benno Moiseiwitsch, Josef Stransky, and Reinald Werrenrath are in Europe. Carlos Salzedo and Harold Bauer are at Seal Harbor, Me. Ernestine Schumann-Heink is in the orient. Tamaki Miura is at Rio de Janeiro. Giorgio Polacco and his wife, Edith Mason, are at Buenos Aires. John McCormack has a summer place at Noroton, Conn. Leopold Auer goes to Lake George, N. Y. Olive Fremstad is in Maine. George Hamlin woos melody at Lake Placid, N. Y. Tito Schipa is singing in South America. Harrison M. Wild is up at Sayner, Wis. Frederick J. Wessels has just departed for his summer home near Stamford, Conn. Frederick Stock has discovered a quiet island up in Lake Superior where he can plan his orchestral programs for the coming year without fear of interruption.

Charles F. Bostetter, office manager of the Chicago Symphony orchestra, was married on Thursday to Miss Magdalina Dietsch, 1301 Cornelia avenue, at St. Andrew's church. They will spend their honeymoon among the Wisconsin lakes.

The ballet is the all important musical topic in Paris at present. Armen Ohanian is presenting a set of Persian dances at the Comédie-Montaigne. Anna Pavlowa has been appearing at the Trocadero and is announced at the Opéra in Dukas' "Peri" and Ravel's "Daphnis et Chloe." Another Russian company is presenting ballets called "Marie Taglioni and Fanny Elssler" and "Russian Games and Dances from the District of Riazen."

Isabel d'Etchessary, at the Théâtre de l'Oeuvre, dances without music in such subjects as "The Woman Before the Mirror," "The Tragedy of the Wind," and "The Man on the Tower." Jean Nouguès' choral ballet, "A Night at Thebes," has been revived at the Gaumont palace.

Finally there is "Man and His Desire," with music by Darius Milhaud, at the Champs Elysées. Here the music was greeted with cries of disapproval. It is being presented by a Swedish company and is the translation, by a being in movement, of the soul symbolized by a nude human body, while experiencing a thought, an emotion, and a state of passion.

Igor Stravinsky's new symphony for wind instruments, dedicated to the memory of Claude Debussy, was played in London the other day and did not appear to please the audience. They found it a matter of senseless ugliness. Ernest Newman is quoted as saying that he did not know Stravinsky disliked Debussy as much as his symphony seems to show, and that if his own memories of a friend were equally painful he would try to forget him. The British sense of humor appears in the further comment that perhaps it is Stravinsky's art which is at fault, not his heart, and that his music, which used to be original, is now only aboriginal.

Giacomo Puccini has been studying the music of China in preparation for the score of his new opera, "Turandot," which is founded on an old fairy tale of China. Simoni and Adami have made the libretto. He expects to have the music done by autumn, and there is talk of a dual first performance in Milan and at the New York Metropolitan.

Church organists will have a convention at Philadelphia July 26-29. It will be the fourteenth meeting of the national association. Among other features promised will be a recital program transmitted by wireless from the Carnegie institute at Pittsburgh.

Stella Lamont, coloratura soprano and the wife of Forrest Lamont, tenor of the Chicago Opera association, plans to make public appearances during the coming season. The forerunning news of her plans states that she will be a member of one of the two leading opera companies of the country or else in an operetta.

ANNOUNCING
Cole Aero-EIGHT
$700 to $455
Reduction in Price

COLE engineers with a solid conviction that piston perfection is the most vital element in the delivery of continuous economical power, have developed The Constant Clearance Piston—which is fitted into the cylinder with less clearance than has ever been known to the automotive industry.

The scientific construction of The Constant Clearance Piston automatically equalizes all expansion and contraction.

There is perfect and constant compression with consequent gas and oil economy; and smooth noiseless power at all speeds and at all times.

These are "Built In" assurances of your permanent satisfaction in ownership and, considering the economy, safety, flexibility and comfort of the new Cole Aero-EIGHT, the present reduction in price is exceptionally notable.

Think This Over Before You Buy

From all sides you hear assurances of "savings" in motor car prices.

True, automobile prices are lower—Auburn prices included.

But when you buy a car, buy with an eye to lasting value—not merely a saving in price today.

Be sure there is the material and workmanship in your car that will protect your original saving against later expenses for service.

Consider the Auburn, for example. You may buy cars comparable in size at lower prices—but have you ever heard of anyone incurring any considerable expense on an Auburn after purchase?

Think that over before you buy.

You Love 'Em You Love 'Em You Love 'Em

"MOTHER O' MINE."

Produced by Associated Producers. Directed by Fred Niblo.

THE CAST.

Robert Sheldon	Lloyd Hughes
Dolly Wilson	Betty Ross Clark
The Other Woman	Betty Blythe
Willard Thatcher	Joseph Kilgour
Mrs. Sheldon	Claire MacDowell
District Attorney	Andrew Robson
Henry Godfrey	Andrew Arbuckl

By Mae Tinée.

HERE'S a picture that's bound to prove popular because of the sheer lovableness of everybody in the cast.

The story is derived from Kipling's "If I should hang from the highest hill, mother o' mine, mother o' mine, I know whose love would follow me still, mother o' mine, mother o' mine."

A son bravely faces the electric chair rather than tell a story that would absolve him of blame, but would blacken his adored mother's name. The mother, learning, when it is almost too late, of her boy's impending doom, goes to the district attorney with her tale.

Follows a wild ride to the penitentiary through a raging storm that has made telephone or telegraph communication impossible. The gates of iron open, of course, just in time to save the boy, who is already in the chair.

Old stuff—but good stuff as manipulated by the aforementioned cast. Lloyd Hughes is a son for any mother to adore, any girl to lose her head about, or any district attorney to mourn over.

Claire MacDowell is a great mother. Betty Ross Clark, as the sweetheart who stands by to the almost bitter end, is the kind of lassie to interest any nice chap, and Joseph Kilgour and Betty Blythe as the bad uns do splendid work.

If you like tears and dramatics "Mother o' Mine" will please. Chances are it will whether you do or not.

CLOSEUPS

When you see Priscilla Dean in her coming picture, "Conflict," your heart will be torn between pity and a desire to give her a bath. The young woman is, I am told, compelled to wade in mud to give some scene or other "realism."

While Anita Stewart takes her vacation, she forgets not that food to be eaten must be paid for. So she rents her home in Hollywood for $1,000 monthly. How much rent would you pay to be able to say that you lived in Anita's house?

The Photodramatist announces that it pays 2 cents a word for articles, preferably under 2,000 words, written by representative newspaper and magazine writers. (if they're accepted, of course.) Did anybody EVER have anything accepted by a magazine? this party rises to inquire.

Just got a letter from a man. Here it is:

"Dear Miss Tinée: At dinner last evening Wally asked me to advise you that he regretted exceedingly his inability to call upon you, inasmuch as his time was monopolized by the local Famous Players-Lasky office.

"Mr. Reid was very, very sorry, and asked me to inform you that upon his next visit to Chicago he would not only pay you a visit but would be more than pleased to have you as his guest.

"With four appearances at the McVicker's theater today and several other pressing engagements, not forgetting your past kindness to me, you can readily understand the delay in getting this message to you.

"Very sincerely yours,
"SMILING BILLY MASON."

Just had a letter from a beautiful woman. This is it:

"My Dear Miss Tinée: Your criticism on 'The Way Women Love' is worthy of a note. I agree with you—it's terrible! And inasmuch as your criticism is the only one that coincides with my personal viewpoint, I want to tell you I never read anything so amusingly interesting. Miss Tinée, please don't think I am trying to make excuses, because there 'ain't none.' A few more writeups such as yours, and maybe we won't have to do any more bad pictures.

"Sincerely yours,
"RUBYE DE REYMER."

In Hollywood there is a woman who operates a full fledged picture organization. Her name is Edna Schley, and she is getting out film versions of the "Scattergood" stories that have appeared in weekly and monthly periodicals. Miss Schley has her own studio, conducts her own scenario department, hires her people, cuts her pictures, and gives a helping hand with the titling of them. She is under contract to produce twelve a year. Irving M. Lesser will distribute them.

"The Three Musketeers," which in the implacable Milady has one of the most interesting feminine "heavies" of literature, will feature Barbara La Marr in that rôle. Douglas Fairbanks, you know, is the star.

When You Need Assured Power

"A motor may knock going up hill; a man knocks when he's going down hill." We can Trindlize your motor and obviate the first.

Hill climbing searches out the weakness of a motor. If it pounds, misses or balks at the grades or runs sluggishly and with an utter loss of the "pep" you look for, it's a sign it should be Trindlized at once

A Trindlized Motor is as Good as New.

Trindl shops are the largest in the world devoted to the rejuvenation of motors. Their up-to-date equipment is operated day and night. The Trindl Co. are specialists in this work, with all the specialist's skill, equipment and experience. Repair men who are keen on turning out the best work know and recommend the Trindl Service.

Ask Me! Ask Me! Ask Me!

PATRICIA: Don't know of any way you can "leap to fame." My guess is you have a long, hard climb ahead of you. Most people do who really make good. Meteoric success isn't as a rule lasting. Glad to send you the list of studios if you'll mail me a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

CARRIE: There is a rumor that Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford will appear together in a picture, but that's all I know about it. Mr. Fairbanks denies the stork hovers over the Fairbanks home.

D. E.: Forwarded your letter. Nope. Pretty crazy. How are you?

GENEVIEVE: We haven't pictures to give away or sell. Savy.

GENESCE: Ralph Ince is supposed to be just a director, but he fools folks now and then and does a little acting. He played the lead in "Wet Gold." What does he look like? O, a tall, solemn, dark gentleman, that looks like he'd just bought stock that went down a point.

EMMA: The little bird told you all wrong. A-L-L WRONG!

FAN: They didn't exactly feature him, but he was considerably in evidence, don't you think? Perhaps they overadvertised a little, but not enough to kick about, I reckon.

O. M. A.: Cross as a bear, aren't you? It's the heat.

TROUBLED: Don't worry. If your son's got the right stuff in him he'll turn out all right. Any boy gets a little giddy now and then. What you've told me doesn't sound serious. Don't nag. Treat him like a human being and you'll see he'll be all right.

B. C. D.: Following is the cast of "Through the Back Door": Mary Pickford as Jeanne Bodamers; John Harron, Billy-Boy; Gertrude Astor, Hortense Reeves; Wilfred Lucas, Elton Reeves; Helen Raymond, Marie Reeves, and Elinor Fair, Margaret Brewster. Glad to oblige you.

W. R. F.: We have your stamp but not your address.

LENA H.: Tim Murphy was never in the movies that I know of. In fact, I am sure the handsome hero you describe must have been some other beautiful brunette. Too bad you can't go to the prize fight, but it won't be long before your favorite theater will be flashing the whole business on the screen. And then think how much happier and cooler you've been staying right at home before the electric fan instead of sitting around in Jersey!

News of the Stage in New York

NEW YORK, July 16.—[Special.]—At this time when the producers are busy planning their August offerings, definite announcements reveal seventeen plays and musical comedies scheduled for the month. Whether some of the productions listed will ever see the light of Broadway is another matter—but here's a summary of those that have come as close as promissory notices, anyhow:

A. H. Woods will offer the Collison-Hopwod farce, "Getting Gertie's Garter," on the 1st. Chicago has already seen it. His second offering will be Fannie Hurst's first original play, "Back Pay," with Miss Helon MacKellar in the leading rôle.

On the list the Selwyns have Roi Cooper Megrue's comedy, Honors Are Even," with Miss Lola Fisher and William Courtenay in the cast, scheduled for the 8th. George V. Hobart's comedy with songs, "Sonny," with Miss Emma Dunn, Ernest Glendenning, and Carl Randall as its principal players, is due on the 15th, and "The Poppy God," a Chinese tragedy, is scheduled, with no date as yet announced.

The first musical comedy to be produced in August will be "Tangerine," by Phillip Bartholmae, Lawrence Langer, and Guy Bolton, with Miss Julia Sanderson and Jack Hazzard in the cast.

"Dulcy," the comedy by George S. Kauffmann and Marie Connelly, which was so well liked in Chicago, will open on the 8th with Miss Lynn Fontaine in the title rôle.

Marc Klaw will present "Sonya," a play from the Polish, with Alfred Lunt and Miss Violet Heming in the cast, on the 15th. "Love Time," a musical comedy which Oliver Morosco will present, is scheduled for the 23d. "Tarzan of the Apes," a dramatization from the Edgar Rice Burroughs book of the same name, is due late in the month.

David Belasco will present his first play of the season, "Kiki," a French farce, which made a hit in Paris. John Murray Anderson's "The Greenwich Village Follies" is another offering in prospect, as is William Anthony MacGuire's comedy, "Six-Cylinder Love," which was tried out in Asbury Park last Monday.

L. Lawrence Weber will present William Le Baron's "Nobody's Money." "The Night Cap," by Max Marcin and Guy Bolton, is announced for the first week in August. "Minus Marriage," a comedy by Lawrence Grant Springer and W. D. Heppenstall, and "The Mask of Hamlet" are also due next month.

The prolific Winchell Smith is at it again. This time the play is entitled "Tips" and John Golden will produce it soon with Frank Monroe, Harry Davenport, George Schiller, Miss Blythe Daly, and Frank McCormack in the cast.

Burst of Speed Puts Wisconsin Abreast Traffic

25,000 Men Employed in Enormous Highway Campaign

BY J. L. JENKINS.

MADISON, Wis.—[Special.]—Wisconsin, the highway demonstrator, has written "Q. E. D." after another mooted question in modern road building. The state this year has proved beyond all doubt its own contention that the best highway maintenance organization in the field cannot hold a gravel roal in shape under 1921 heavy duty traffic demands.

A ride over state trunk highway No. 20 or over No. 10, south of Madison, is full and sufficient proof. The first road carries little more than farm to market freight, but has been pressed into service for several months as the detour route for passenger travel from Chicago and Illinois generally, because of extensive paving work on other, more direct routes through the state. The second bears heavy freight and passenger traffic from the great southwest territory. Both roads are heavy, rough, and destructive to all sorts of travel, despite the fact that some of the crack maintenance men of the state are patrolling every foot of them weekly.

Their condition is one of the reasons why the state highway department is pushing through the biggest hard surface paving program it has ever attempted and advocating gravel and other secondary types of road only as necessary traffic relief while paving programs are under way. The state learned long ago that its big trunk lines could meet traffic demands only after they had been paved with the best materials available, and has properly used its facilities for gravel surfacing only on its secondary system and for temporary service on its main roads.

A. R. Hirst, state highway engineer and the biggest figure in highway building circles in the middle west, is emphatic in his demand for immediate action on the roads everywhere on the basis of economic value and not cost per mile.

"Close observation of the building up of American traffic has convinced me that as long as everybody producing these roads is getting only a fair profit we can't pay too much for them," he declared in commenting on the cost of concrete surfacing this year. "Because, no matter how fast we may go, there is no American state that can produce the highway system it ought to have as soon as it ought to have it, and we cannot see one or two or three years drop out, a dead loss in our highway improvement program. So we in Wisconsin are paying the price. We are building almost three times as many miles this year as we did last year and twice as many as we did in any year of our history, because our people need employment and because we are convinced that, no matter how fast we go, we can never produce the roads as fast as we actually need them to carry on the state's business.

"Our work is not confined to the few miles of concrete surfacing alone. We are building something like 2,000 miles of other types simply because we cannot furnish money and mechanical equipment fast enough to build concrete roads fast enough to accommodate traffic of the state. Our little job right now includes construction of 280 miles of concrete, 8,000 culverts and 600 bridges, building of 1,000 miles of gravel road, grading of 2,200 miles of earth road, and patrol maintenance of 7,500 miles of the state system. In all about 25,000 men are engaged in the work."

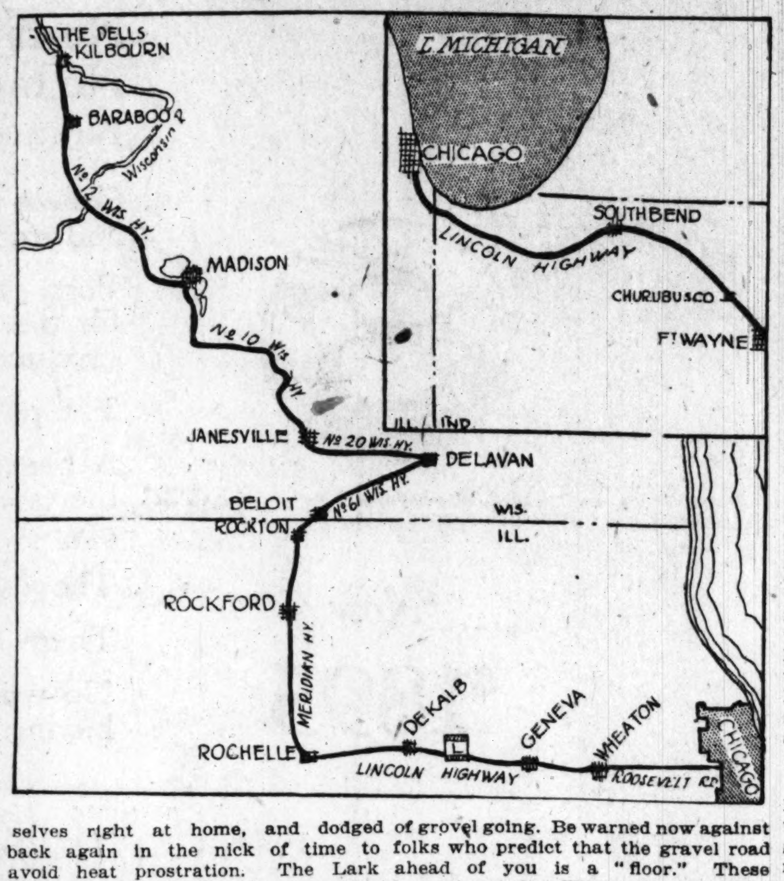
This enormous enterprise is going forward as rapidly as human ingenuity can push it in order to take care of the 350,000 motor vehicles registered in the state and the additional 100,000 visiting cars. The Wisconsin cars alone travel more than 1,000,000,000 miles over the highways, creating a traffic problem greater than that faced by any American railroad. Illinois, it is remarked, registers nearly one-third more motor vehicles and has already wasted the essential building months in political conversation. National figures show that more than 9,000,000 vehicles are being cared for elsewhere by a road construction outlay of nearly $1,500,000,000 and that the majority of states concede that this amount is nothing more than a beginning for the highway system adequate to the traffic needs.

"It isn't a question of debating whether or not we shall pay $30,000 or $37,000 a mile for some of the links of our trunk highway system," Wisconsin sums the situation up; "we must get the traffic through. For the traffic of any state and of any nation is bigger than all of the petty economies that have handicapped the world since time began."

TALES OF THE TRAIL

by Jenks

This is the third chapter in a rambling story of the open road, lived by The Tribune party charged with advancement of the national Memorial Tree movement on the country's main highways. The trip is being made overland in a new "Lark" model Lexington car. So far the trail has led east through Indiana and Ohio, returning to Chicago through the north central sections of both states. It has turned north now to make a circuit of Wisconsin's famous highway system.



VACATION COUNTRY.

WEDNESDAY, July 6.—A summer squall rode out of the western sky today and broke in a fury of rain and hail over the sun parched stretches of Hoosierland. It stopped us in South Bend and proceeded to tear down trees, crack window glass, and drench the big company of tourist campers who daily take advantage of the progressive city's delightful camp grounds. Later the heat swung back and sent the town steaming and simmering to bed.

The day's short run proved that the Lincoln highway can be made a fair road even in Indiana if one happens to run across a newspaper man in Fort Wayne who knows the good detour between that city and Cherubusco.

Thursday, July 7.—Chicago welcomed at least one party of dusty trail people today with a newly born lake breeze and a rain storm that made the city smile from the loop to limits. Even Evanston indulged in a dignified grin of relief. And now our trail leads north through the land of lakes and vacation folders.

Monday, July 11.—A will-o'-the-wisp is showing an elfin light over whispering reeds at the lake's lower edge. A few lazy fish are breaking the surface now and again under a moon that strikes silver from a flashing fin. The throb of an orchestra comes faintly over the water from a pavilion dance floor, and a breeze laden with perfume from sleeping grain fields ruffles sheer curtains at my elbow. Summer has come to Wisconsin and—"summer comes but once a year," as the innkeepers observe in presenting their bills.

The Lark and its wards of the open road took up the trail again this morning and skimmed over the smooth miles of Roosevelt road through lovely Wheaton to Geneva, where a rough and broiling gravel detour circles through Elburn to reach the new paving again. Memorial trees are the talk of the Lincoln highway west through Illinois, and now that the great trunk line is practically complete to the Mississippi, the green sentinels are all that is needed to make it perfect.

In DeKalb a friendly citizen dodged from his retreat under a store awning long enough to advise us that DeKalb offers a new camp ground for tourists who like to make themselves right at home, and dodged back again in the nick of time to avoid heat prostration. The Lark registered a 40 mile an hour average on the practically deserted road to Rochelle, and turned north over the ridges and canyons of the typically bad Illinois dirt road marking the Meridian highway to Rockford. Superheated dust hung over baking fields for mile after mile of ruts, holes, and heavy, unrolled gravel until the Kishwaukee hills with their welcome concrete road brought pleasure to the world again.

Through Camp Grant and its military snap the trail led past scores of busy, new manufacturing plants to the friendly streets of the Illinois city that will never grow too big or too busy to welcome the stranger. The people who have built Rockford from a sleepy Illinois town to a great manufacturing center in a few short years are heading into the memorial tree movement with characteristic energy, and its success in the state's northwest is assured.

North to the Wisconsin line, the Meridian road is under construction, and a whimsical option leads straight through the hills via the Rockton to Beloit. It can hardly be called a road. Rather it is a winding path that meanders through beautiful country, climbing ledges blindly, dashing down steep inclines, and bumping over all obstructions without a care in the world. In Beloit they told us that the road to Delavan is a regular floor of grovel going. Be warned now against folks who predict that the gravel road ahead of you is a "floor." These humorists infest Wisconsin as well as Ohio and, when you have finished following their recommendations, you would not retrace your steps over the floor even to gain sweet personal vengeance. The road to Delavan from Beloit is not a floor. At one time it was excellent gravel and there are fair stretches of macadam even now, but the end of the run today is certainly the best thing about it.

Tuesday, July 12.—In the early morning a mist, tinted by rosy messages from the sun, rises from Delavan lake. Clear, still water invites a lone swimmer, and the breakfast bell is the only attraction that could possibly overcome the lure of the lake. It is a ceremonious breakfast hereabouts. First of all, it demands a coat, preferably a coat buttoned tightly, the heavier the coat the better. In approaching the dining room it is the habit of guests to bow three times to the solemn head waitress, and to stop for a moment of silent meditation before the picture of the great Delavan bass flanked by fresh fruit. Also, they will tell you, fishing in the lake is practically useless. These fish are epicures to a degree. They are said to browse on nabiscos and goose liver preferably, and they are so well fed that a painted fly affords them considerable amusement, but absolutely no gastronomic desire.

From Delavan to Janesville, heavy gravel takes its way past huge country estates and rolling fields to connect with worn gravel and macadam into Madison, the clean, wholesome capital of the state, whose three lakes make it an ideal summer city. Roads and trees are the fad here. Public donation has built wonderful boulevards through the great green tangle bordering the lakes, and officialdom is behind the memorial tree campaign for Wisconsin's famous highway system.

Wednesday, July 13.—State highway No. 12 running north from Madison through the heart of vacation land goes far to redeem the state's gravel road fame. It is a perfect highway in excellent repair and taps some of the natural scenic beauties that make Wisconsin worth while. Through Baraboo on its thousand foothills to Kilbourn few drives are more attractive. And at the end lie the Dells of the Wisconsin, weird, fanciful, and delightful to a degree. Nature's fancy ran riot in this country 10,000 years ago when she turned a mighty ice floe aside and let the river carve the face of the earth into a thousand elfin shapes, using a million pounds of iron tinted water as a buffer.

Gangway!

Every mile of new hard-surfaced road constructed in this country makes a market for twenty-five additional cars, says Paul Clay in Forbes Magazine in a recent issue.

GOSSIP OF THE AUTO TRADE

THAT "1921 is rewarding fighters" is demonstrated by the statement issued by the Studebaker Sales company of Chicago, covering the first six months of this year, as compared with the first six months of 1920. In the first six months of this year their business showed an increase over last year of 124 per cent in cars sold and 104 per cent in money.

Substantial reductions in the prices of its twin six models, inclosed single six models, and motor trucks were announced by the Packard Motor Car company, and became effective July 1. The revision shows a reduction of from $200 to $1,700.

Price reductions ranging from $150 to $200 were announced last week on the Elcar, which is a product of Elkhart, Ind.

L. B. Miller of Chicago bet a friend $600 recently that he could drive his new Elgin coupe from Chicago to San Francisco in eleven days. He started on his long trip early on the morning of Saturday, June 25. On Friday evening, July 1—seven days later—he rolled down Market street in San Francisco. He had covered 2,345 miles and used only 123 gallons of gasoline—an average of 19 miles to the gallon—and in a closed car. He used only three gallons of oil.

Old Roman Road.

Discovery has been made in England of another old Roman road hitherto unknown. Workmen who were digging manholes on the Alton road where the latter joins the roads to Bentley and Bordon, near Farnham, Surrey, unearthed, five feet below the surface, part of what appears to be an old Roman road that ran from London to Manchester. The road was in an excellent state of preservation, the surface layer being a foot in thickness and composed of flints. In order to penetrate the surface the workmen had to use drills and steel wedges.

WILLS SAINTE CLAIRE
The Mo-lyb-den-um Car

No. 7—Lighting Arrangement

THE lighting of the Wills Sainte Claire is the result of months of exhaustive and costly experimenting. A Mangin mirror magnetically controlled from the steering column enables the beams of the headlights to be depressed or elevated, thus insuring safe driving under all conditions.

A bright backing light placed beside the red tail light and switched on automatically when the control lever is in reverse adds greatly to the safety and convenience in backing or turning on a narrow road.

Another exclusive feature is the Courtesy Light which we will tell about next week.

In the meantime we invite you to see the car itself—Ride in it—Drive it. You'll find it its own best spokesman.

After War— A Better Car

A CLERK resigned from the Patent Office 70 years ago because "Nothing more can be invented." Benjamin Franklin was urged not to start a newspaper because three good newspapers were already printed in America.

Many people think motor car perfection stopped when the world war began. True, war stopped progress—temporarily. But now the spirit of leadership lives again, and we are privately showing to those who enjoy superiority a highly advanced car. Sales Opportunity
Here is an immediate opportunity to earn from $1,000 to $5,000 per month in a legitimate selling field.
We are ready to market the GoSlo Safety Signal, a rear end automatic safety device which every automobile owner needs and ultimately will buy.
We have untouched territory open for men who can produce results. Such men should own an automobile and be able to finance themselves for a short period. Men who know the accessory, hardware and garage field would be especially well qualified. We don't want men who expect to earn less than $1,000 to $5,000 per month.
The men who get territory must convince us of their responsibility and capability.
The Central National Bank of Cleveland is our reference.
The examination of a sample light will convince anyone that this is an unusual opportunity. We will send one on receipt of $5.50 the retail selling price.
If you want territory and can qualify, write

Mechanics School at Chanute Field Teaches 24 Trades

700 Students Learn by Practical Work

CHANUTE FIELD, Rantoul, Ill.—A university education based on three-fourths practice and one-fourth theory, in twenty-four different trades, some of which are yet unknown, in practice, to big state colleges, is the reward within the grasp of every enlisted man of the United States army, now stationed at this field.

Last April the air service mechanics school completed its task of moving from San Antonio, Tex., to Rantoul, Ill. Every piece of equipment needed in the twenty-four courses was removed from Kelly field to Chanute. Included in the shipments were many unfinished experiments of the students.

When the school reopened at Chanute, three months after closing at Kelly field, every student, when the first day's study started, went to the bench he had left at Kelly field, and except for the fact that it was mentally noted they were in Illinois, there was nothing to indicate that the school had traveled half across the continent.

Only army men may become students in this university of the army. They are being sent from the various air units of the United States army, to become educated as specialists in one branch of the air service, and to be given more than a theoretical knowledge of the other necessary branches.

Immediately upon entering the school the student is given a preparatory training of one month in military and mathematics instruction. Then the student becomes intimately acquainted with the trade test board. He might enter the school with an ambition to become a general clerk. His ambition might survive until he reaches the test board. Here it might suddenly develop he would make a far better blacksmith than general clerk, and, while in his own mind the army is wrong in so deciding, it generally happens that the man develops into a first class blacksmith. The test board is for the purpose of determining the exact qualifications of every man. No student ever undertakes a course in which he could not succeed. When he is turned loose by the test board he begins work on any one of the twenty-four courses which are listed as:

Armorer; blacksmith; cabinet maker; carpenter; coppersmith; clerk (general); clerk (stock); draftsman; electrician (ignition); fabric worker; instrument repair man; mechanic (airplane); mechanic (airplane engines); mechanic (auto); mechanic (carburetor); mechanic (radio); machinist; metal worker; propeller maker; rigger (airplane); rigger (parachutes); typewriter repairman; vulcanizer; welder (gas).

From four to twenty men may be entered in any of these courses at one time, at periods of from one to two months apart. The length of the courses is four months. The number to be graduated yearly ranges from nine propeller makers to 480 airplane mechanics. The school is equipped and in position to turn out 2,004 graduate specialists yearly for Uncle Sam's air service.

A synopsis of one course—armorers—is indicative of requirements of others:

For six weeks the man studies machine guns; two weeks are given to small arms; two weeks to bomb and bomb releases; two weeks to fire control gears and ring sights; two weeks to ammunition and pyrotechnics; two weeks to field work and shop practice.

The word "study" is easily confused with the work at the school. The student does not take a text book and read it and answer questions from it for a period of sixteen weeks. Instead during his six weeks' "study" of machine guns, he handles them, tears them apart, puts them back together, learns every part.

In the airplane rigging departments a similar plan of instruction is followed. The students are not told how to rig the body of a plane—they simply get busy and do it. They are required to be able to build the plane's body from a pile of wood, wire, and bolts, to a point where it will be ready for use if necessary. The rigging department is one of the largest and most important of the schools.

The school has at its disposal between 300 and 400 motors of various types. Students of the various branches in which motors are the subject not only know parts, but they know how to make them.

What is true of courses just described is true of all others at the new university. The men taking the instruction in courses which demand from four to five years in state universities, complete the same work from four to five months in the army school. Machinists who have "studied" four to five years in civilian life have increased their efficiency from 65 to 75 per cent in the four months' course given by the mechanics school.

It is not at all a question of telling how it should be done. It simmers down to the actual doing of the thing. If a man fails to do it, he does not graduate, that's all.

The school is the only one of its kind in the United States. It is maintained exclusively for the air service, and develops specialists for that branch. The men, after graduation, return to their units, or if not assigned, are given a permanent squadron to which they are attached, and go to them as specialists.

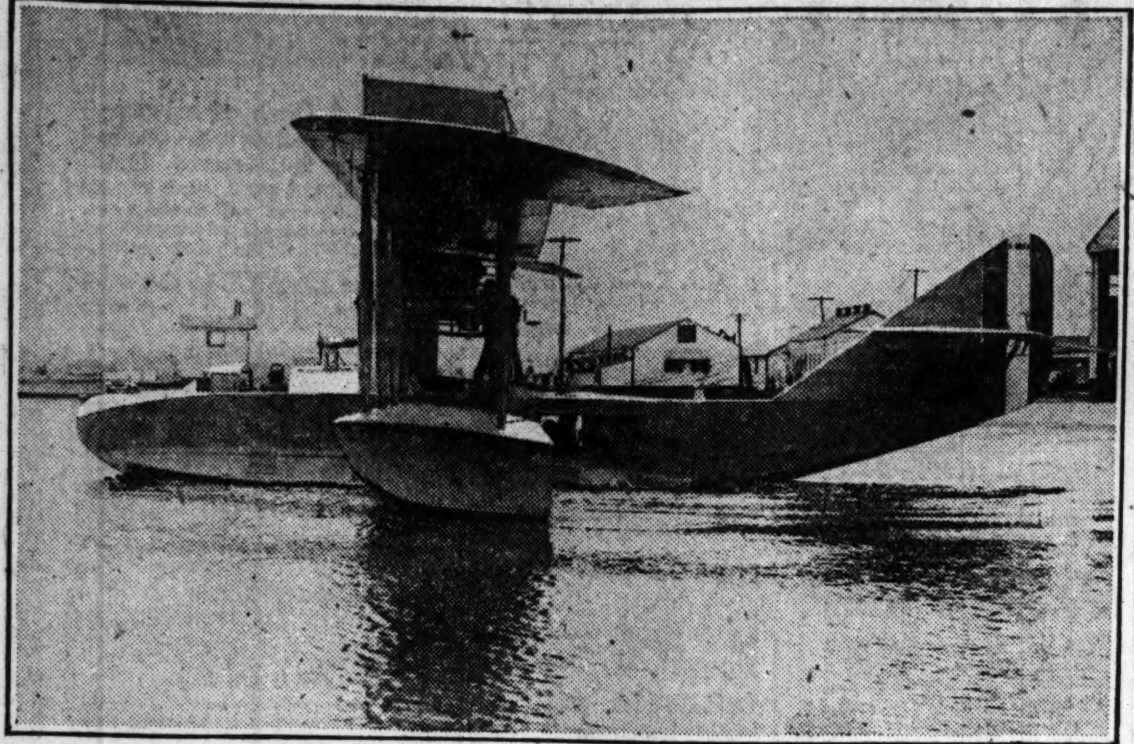
The instructors are civilians. They are the highest type obtainable, and receive their positions under civil service rules. At the present time the school is short more than fifty of them.

A visit through the school easily convinces one that the army recruit who can land there for instruction and receives it as it is arranged, has prepared for himself an education for a lifetime.

Other countries have apparently noted the work of the school, as a lieutenant of the Ecuador army is numbered among the students. All the men are not privates of the air service. Many are officers.

All are given the same instruction and when they graduate they know, and their instructors know, they can, if given the tools and parts, demonstrate, convincingly, effectually, and efficiently, "how it is done."

THE F-5-R—THE NAVY'S STAR SHIP



Should an enemy force appear off the coast of America the naval air forces would immediately send out a squadron of F-5-R ships, loaded with 163 pound bombs, to beat off the attacking forces. The ship shown above was used in the recent bombing tests and proved quite successful.

To Make Rain.

To Canadians goes the distinction of proposing one of the most novel uses ever conceived for an airplane. Winnipeg men are reported to be organizing an aerial irrigation company. The aim is to cause the rain by spraying liquid air in the clouds from an airplane, thus causing the moisture to condense. Recently dust was thrown from an airplane on the clouds 5,000 feet high in an unsuccessful attempt to cause rain in Pretoria.

Wooden Wings.

Wooden winged Fokker monoplanes are being operated daily between London, Rotterdam, and Amsterdam by the Royal Dutch Air company.

Most Beautiful Air Lane in U.S. Is Over Potomac

Capt. Moffett and Party Fly from Norfolk to Capital

BY MORROW KRUM.

THREE huge F-5-L navy ships stood on the cement dock at the naval air station, navy base, Hampton Roads, Va., on the 22d of last month, awaiting the arrival of Capt. William A. Moffett and his party. Capt. Moffett had watched from a cockpit in an NC ship the naval aviators bomb the German submarine U-117 the day before and was returning to Washington.

At last the head of the naval air service arrived and the mechanics commenced to spin the Liberty motors on the three big ships. Soon the six motors were roaring and the mechanics were busy stuffing cotton in their ears.

With Capt. Moffett was Capt. M. C. Mustin and several navy and naval air service officers. They climbed into the ships to which they had been assigned. I was assigned a seat beside a window in the fuselage of one of the ships. The flight commander gave the starting signal and one after another the ships taxied down the incline and into the water.

Ten minutes later all of the ships were in the air, flying up the Potomac river to Washington. The river, its large bays, the beautiful country, the farms, the country roads, the trees, all dropped below until the ships reached an altitude of 2,500 feet.

Any one who has ever taken the boat up the Potomac from Hampton roads to Washington knows the beauty of the trip. The towns, the farms, the little settlements, Mount Vernon, and George Washington's home all passed underneath.

Finally the Washington monument, the capitol building, the library and the other landmarks of Washington appeared. No city in America is as beautiful from the air.

The party stepped ashore at the Anacostia air station, close to the navy yard, two hours after the ships left Hampton roads, and the officers hurried into the capitol. The night boat takes twelve hours and the trains more than half that time.

"That's a saving of time, isn't it?" asked the former commandant of the Great Lakes Naval Training station. "Soon the world of business will learn that it cannot do without the airplane and American commercial aviation will commence to grow in leaps and bounds. In two hours of flying we tore the train schedules in half and cut the boat time in a sixth. Yes, aviation is bound to grow."

The commanding officer of the Hampton roads air station is Capt. Stafford H. R. Doyle and the executive officer is Commander T. A. Ellyson. There are attached to this station, which is recognized as the most important on the Atlantic coast, 100 flying officers and 800 enlisted men.

Lieut. Rufus H. Bush is the commanding officer of the Anacostia air station, the station complement of which is thirteen flight officers and 250 enlisted men.

Limit Profits.

The department of civil aviation has limited the profits of subsidized aerial transport companies to 10 per cent.

67 DEGREES COOL IN MINNESOTA

What Do You Want for Your Vacation?

WHAT is it worth to you? Have you valued it highly enough? Recollect it's just the one, all too short space of time during the whole, long, weary year which you have for uninterrupted leisure. Therefore, plan carefully; give the place you are going to full consideration.

Compare Minnesota with the other resort territories. Recollect that no other recreation district close at hand is so well watered and wooded. There are 10,000 lakes in the "Land of Hiawatha," where the thermometer averages 67 degrees cool all summer.

Minnesota provides just the welcome change in daily habits. You can "rough it" in the woods and rustic camps; or "smooth it" on the lakes, the links and big or small hotels.

You can enjoy every game, every sport, every excercise. You can catch bass, trout and "muskies," but not hay fever. You can see deer in forest paths and sometimes moose and bear. A few moments later you can be at your hotel or on the golf course.

Minnesota is fascinating. It is not over-patronized. There is a wealth of unexplored attractions. There is ever a new beauty beyond the next turn of the trail: at the end of the next portage.

So when you are asked what you want for your vacation, answer "Minnesota," and TAKE NO SUBSTITUTES.

The WELL-DRESSED MAN

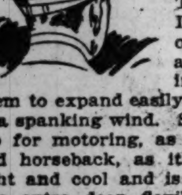
Linen Caps Light and Cool for Sports Wear

By Alfred Stephen Bryan.

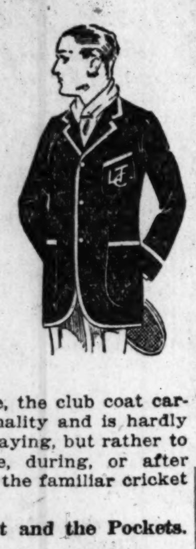
NEW YORK.—Wherever ships point their prows; wherever, even, caravans wend their way, the Englishman has gained the name of being the best dressed man. He owes this not to the circumstance that his clothes might fit better or look better, but to the fact that he chooses them, with rare perception, to tally with climate, season, and occasion. He excels in knowing what to wear and when and where to wear it.

The Frenchman goes in for an effect overly ornate, and he takes dress too seriously; the American does not take it seriously enough. The silk hat, that highest symbol of the man bent upon gay and gracious leisure, is to be met everywhere abroad during autumn and spring, even among business men, yet how comparatively seldom does one chance upon it this side of the sea? How many of us ram our hands into our pockets when they should be gloved and, perhaps, carrying a stick? Why should one who wears spats feel as though he were the target for mocking eyes? All this is wrong and must be set right if the fine art of dress is not to become a lost art over here.

Sticks Fast in the Wind.

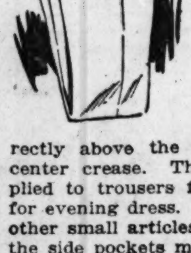


Among the newest introductions to accompany the linen knickers, now the vogue, are linen sporting caps of the sort pictured. They are made of Irish linen, white or natural color, and the box plait in the back allows them to expand easily and to stick fast in a spanking wind. Such a cap is tiptop for motoring, as well as for golf and horseback, as it is uncommonly light and cool and is readily cleaned. The extra deep flexible visor shades the eyes and lessens sunblink. Other smart sporting caps are made of brightly checked Scotch shawlings. These may be rolled up right and tight and pocketed like a handkerchief.

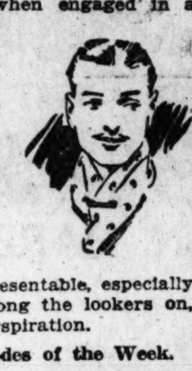


Fashionable country clubs, following the practice in Europe, are adopting distinctive club coats, as illustrated. These are picturesque and sportsmanlike and serve to differentiate members from guests. Such a coat is made of lightweight flannel in a variety of shades, taped with a contrasting color at edges, pockets, and sleeve-bottoms. Sometimes the club device is embroidered upon the breast pocket, as shown. To be sure, the club coat carries a bit of a formality and is hardly to be worn when playing, but rather to be assumed before, during, or after taking the place of the familiar cricket or tennis blazer.

Easy on the Waist and the Pockets.



Plaiting the tops of trousers, a French idea, permits extension at the waist and prevents the cloth from pulling or puckering, as it has a disconcerting trick of doing, especially at sports. This plaited effect is portrayed here. It may be placed at the sides or it may be set directly above the termination of the center crease. This idea is also applied to trousers for town dress and for evening dress. Handkerchiefs and other small articles may be carried in the side pockets more conveniently, if trousers are plaited at the top.



Many men like to dispense with collar and cravat, when engaged in a game of rapid give and take, like tennis. The rather untidy look, which some find objectionable, may be avoided by wearing a light woolen muffler fastened with a gold safety pin, as reproduced here. This not only makes one presentable, especially if women are among the lookers on, but is absorbs perspiration.

Last Minute Modes of the Week.

Silk foulard handkerchiefs, patterned in Persian and Paisley designs of brilliant colors, are much in vogue to carry in the breast pocket of sport jackets like tweeds and gabardines.

Field waistcoats of corduroy, either tan or gray, are a recent revival, borrowed from the sporting kit of the huntsman.

"What were you doing there?"

"What do you mean by nothing to speak of?"

LIBERTY SIX

Why is the biggest word of the day among car buyers. The time when money was lavishly spent on flashy things that merely pleased the eye is gone. The practical man of today wants to know why—before he signs the order.

Why Is the Liberty Six an Unusual Value?

It is built upon the Liberty policy of "Engineering First." In this car the greater percentage of cost is concentrated upon wonderful engineering and fine materials. It is built from the "insides" out to serve even better the second 10,000 miles than the first.

Why Is the New Liberty Triple-Head Motor Remarkable?

Three detachable cylinder heads solve the problem of securing six absolutely uniform combustion chambers. Maximum power and smoothness assured. Inspection of any two cylinders made easy.

Actual building cost is 23% greater than average motors, due to added engineering quality, finest materials, and most precise machining. Designed entirely by Liberty Engineers. Used only in the Liberty Six.

Why Is the Liberty Triple-Head Motor Powerful?

Has six powerful, long-stroke pistons and six uniform combustion chambers. The new Liberty Dry Gas Vaporizer and Special Manifold delivers an even flow of Dry Gas to all six cylinders, at all speeds.

These two features are largely responsible for its unusual power.

Why Is the Liberty Dry Gas Vaporizer a Triumph?

To get an even flow of Dry Gas to six cylinders has always been a problem. Perfect, smooth operation is impossible without it. The Liberty Dry Gas Vaporizer and Special Manifold have definitely solved this problem.

Why Is This Important to the Car Owner?

It means a tremendous increase in flexibility. The Liberty Six has a speed range of from 2 to 60 miles per hour on high. Idles at 1½ to 2 miles per hour on high. Picks up smoothly, after long periods of idling.

Why Is the Liberty Triple-Head Motor So Quiet?

Because it has a big, perfectly balanced, four-bearing crank-shaft, with 33⅓% more bearing surface than average motors, eliminating vibration.

All motor parts are carefully selected and weighed for accurate balance on delicate scales. Together with precise workmanship and perfect lubrication this insures a sweet-running, quiet motor.

Why Is It Free from Lubrication Troubles?

Lubricated by perfected Force Feed Oiling System, oil is forced to each bearing UNDER HEAVY PRESSURE. The entire quantity of oil in the motor, six quarts, is circulated through the motor each minute at average driving speed. A special oil regulator automatically insures correct oil pressure on every bearing at all times. No part can escape proper lubrication. 800 miles per gallon is average consumption. No other motor in any medium-price car has this complete lubricating system.

Why Is It Economical of Fuel?

Due to uniform combustion chambers, the Dry Gas Vaporizer and the Special Manifold fuel is completely utilized. The fact that this big, powerful 53 H. P. motor averages 18 miles per gallon proves economy.

Why Is the Liberty Six Easy to Drive?

Because of Liberty finger-weight controls, gears shift easily and quietly; clutch is unusually soft, yet engages with over one-ton pressure; steering mechanism works with wrist action; brakes, due to perfected leverage principles, set easily. Driving seat and control positions have been carefully placed for perfect comfort.

Why Does It Ride So Comfortably?

Proper distribution of weight combined with scientifically designed spring suspension makes the Liberty Six one of the easiest riding of all cars. A ten-minute ride will convince you.

Why Is It So Easy to Stop the Liberty Six?

Because of carefully calculated leverage principles, and 16% oversize brake drums, a light foot pressure sets the service brakes at any speed. Emergency brake is mounted on the rear of the transmission case—away from dirt and mud—always clean and in condition for positive action.

Why Are You So Sure the Liberty Six Will Stand Up?

Liberty Six records have proved it. No Liberty Six has ever retired from service. Many owners have driven 20,000 miles without even taking up motor bearings. The first Liberty Six is still in use by the original owner after five years of hard, daily service.

Why Should I Accept All These Claims?

You are not obliged to. Ride in the Liberty Six. Drive it. Question owners. All this will only confirm our enthusiasm. We will match this car with any car within $1000 of its price. Come over and see us or phone for a man.

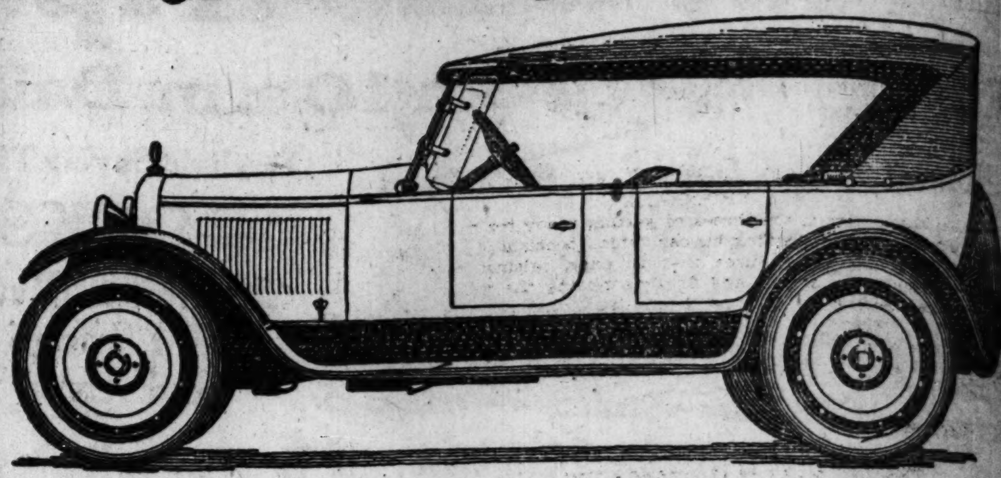
Saxon-Duplex



One, of Many Features, No Other Car Has

That statement probably surprises you a little.

In fact you secretly smile to yourself feeling the statement is probably far fetched or that it even borders on the absurd.

But far from it.

We mean just that. For the Saxon-Duplex has many features not found on other cars in the $2000 class and has some features not found on any other car in the whole wide world, regardless of price.

You start to wonder how that can be. Never mind that. That's a long story in itself which we will be glad to explain to you but just remember that no other car has this important feature.

On all cars you have the bother of regularly adjusting or turning your grease cups.

Not so with the Saxon-Duplex. This car has the exclusive right to the Romon Chassis Lubrication system. This means that you just flip a small lever and instantly oil is pumped to all chassis bearings! A child can operate it.

This device is just as advanced as was the introduction of the electric starting system.

Remember—found only on the Saxon-Duplex!

The entire Saxon-Duplex design is just as up to the minute.

Its motor performance will take your breath away. Stack it up against any $2000 car on the market and then you'll begin to realize what a very real automobile value the new Saxon-Duplex is.

They Have an Outing or Something.

PROLOGUE.

We see the Potters in the throes of getting ready for the Sunday auto outing. Pa has been overhauling his car, which consists of walking around it twice and kicking all the tires on both trips, raising the bonnet and looking severely at the engine, and finally screwing the radiator cap down tight. Ma is dressing the Baby with one hand and packing the baskets with the other. Mamie is dolling up—try to stop her—while Bill is pacing back and forth talking to himself about families who insist on taking a guy away from the city when he's got a date.

Scene I.—The Start.

PA (worried):
I wonder if we ought to go—
That left rear tire is sure to blow.
BILL (savagely):
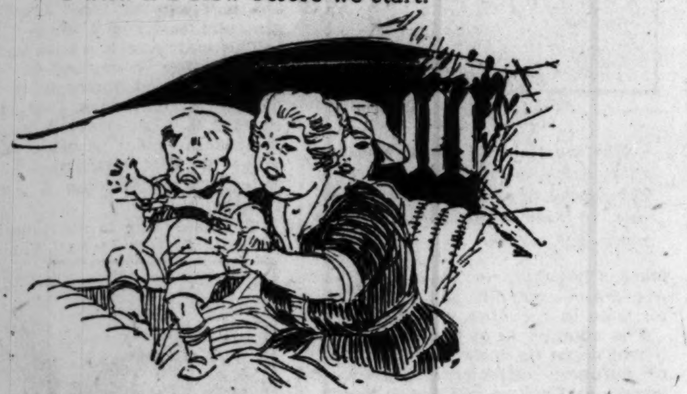
I wish it'd blow before we start.



"Here, take the Baby up there with you."

MAMIE (kidding):
Aw, have a heart, Bill, have a heart.
BILL: Have a heart? Say, waddye mean?
I wish somebody'd have a bean—
Queering my date for a regular lark
To eat with a clutter of bugs in a park.
MA (from kitchen):
I wish somebody'd give me a hand—
I'm working out here to beat the band.
William, you come take the Baby from me.
BILL (exiting):
Give him to Mamie . . .
MAMIE: No, sir . . . eee.
Nothing doing . . . I'm not dressed yet—
Give him to Bill, Ma . . . he's all set.
PA: You'd better move if you're gonna go.
(to himself)
I betcha that left rear tire'll blow.
MA: A little more help is all we need,
And not so much talk about "rush" and "speed."
Here, take the Baby . . . I've gotta dress.
PA (exiting):
I betta look after the car, I guess . . .

(Well, finally the baskets are packed, the Baby dressed, Mamie togged and powdered, and Ma inserted in her Sunday garb. . . . It is decided that Ma, Mamie, and the Baby will sit in the back, with Pa and Bill up in front . . . Ma will hold the Baby (it will rest her after packing the lunch) . . . they're off . . . a couple of hours late, of course, but who isn't?)

Scene II.—Five Miles Out.

PA (drawing up to side of road):
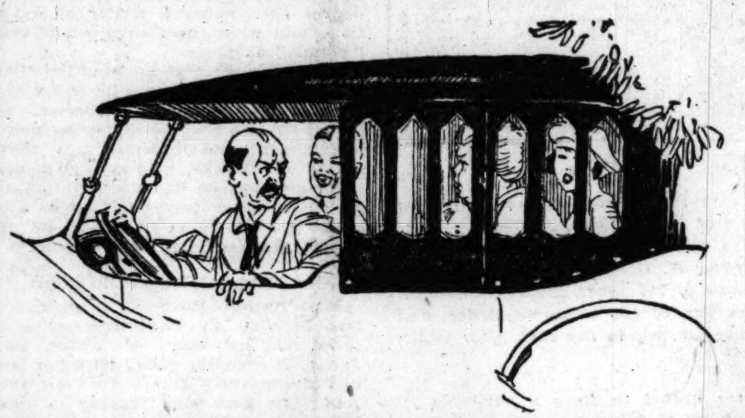
Gee, it's getting hot!
Let's put down the top.
MA: Well, I guess you'll not;
Don't you dare to stop.
PA: But, gee, it's hot, let's get some air—
The wind ain't going to ruin your hair.
MAMIE: It'll ruin my wave . . . make 'em leave it up, Ma.
MA: I want the top up; do you hear me, Pa?

(This is a regular Potter controversy—the Top Up? or the Top Down? Pa always compromises by leaving the Top Up.)

Scene III.—Ten Miles Out.

MA: Here, take the Baby up there with you.
PA: Say, I've gotta lot more things to do.
MA: Well, he likes to ride up in front, you know.
PA: As soon as he's here he wants to go—
I betcha that dam rear tire'll blow.
MAMIE: You hold him, Bill; you've nothing to do . . .
BILL: Hold him yourself . . . what's the matter with you?
I can't watch him and the country, too.



Pa: "Take 'em down." Ma: "Leave 'em up."

MAMIE (to Baby):
Sister'll hold the poor little scout . . .
(to Pa) O, Pa, STOP THE CAR—his hat blew out!
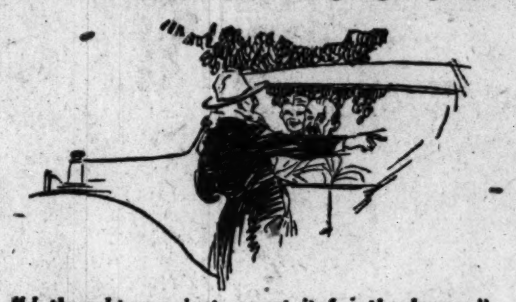
(That's twice already.)

Scene IV.—Twenty Miles Out.

(One of those instantaneous summer showers has blown up, and after a feverish struggle Pa and Bill get the curtains all hung and buttoned into place . . . but by the time everything is snug—and hotterenell inside—the rain has gone away and the sun is shining bright again.)



"I thought you just meant it for the horses."

MAMIE: Why don't you take the curtains down?
What's the use of driving aroun'
With the car closed up like a doggone hearse?
It's fierce enough now without making it worse . . .
MA: But it may rain again; let 'em stay for a mile . . .
BILL: Yeh, we just got 'em up . . . leave 'em stay for a while.
PA: Let's take 'em down now.
MA: O, let's leave 'em up.
PA: Take 'em down.
MA: Leave 'em up.
PA: Down . . .
MA: Up . . .

(They stay up . . . until even Ma can't stand it, and then they come down. Of course they have to be put under the back seat . . . everybody out again.)

Scene V.—Twenty-five Miles Out.

(Pa has been going too fast through the village of Highland Park, and Officer Sullivan overhauled him and is asking him how come.)

SULLIVAN: What's your hurry? What's the rush?
PA: Who, me?
SULLIVAN: Yes, you . . . Whaddye mean tearing through the town like that, huh?
PA: Who, me?
SULLIVAN: Yes, you . . . can't you read? Can't you see the signs?
MA: Tell him who you are, Pa.
SULLIVAN: I don't care who he is. He's gotta observe the speed limits, that's all; do you understand?
PA: Who, me?
SULLIVAN: Yes, you. Didn't you see that sign back there at the village limits—"12 Miles an Hour"?
PA: Sure I saw it.
SULLIVAN: Well, what about it? Don't you think we mean it?
PA: Sure, but I thought you just meant it for the horses.

(Pa gets away with it this time, but he'd better not try that stuff in Glencoe.)

Scene VI.—The Picnic Grounds.

(The panting bus is drawn up to the roadside and everybody crawls out—dusty, tired, baked, and starved.)

PA (picking out nearest tree):
Let's eat right here . . . this is good enough for me.
MA: Not here beside the road; let's hunt another tree.
BILL: Let's not go far . . . I'm all tired out.
MAMIE: Bill worked so hard . . . the poor old scout.

Chic Garages and Stables Play Role of Summer Home

By Mme. X.

Do you live in a stable or garage or a porter's lodge? If not—well, all I can say is that you're just not in the very latest mode. Of course, I mean a transmogrified stable or garage or lodge, one that has been translated into a habitable dwelling. No palace has just the subtle air of superiority, of sophisticated understanding, of originality that such an abode radiates.

It is with a certain indefinable but unmistakable sense of elation that the guests repair to one of these transformer desidences for any festivity. No palace gives quite the same fillip to a social occasion as is the inevitable acomapniment to the enjoyment of hospitality in such a whilom shelter of the faithful horse, the trusty automobile, or the lowly gate keeper. (The latter is quite extinct, but his shelter remains.) It's as exhilarating as the once abundant cocktail which used to set the social ball a rolling.

The latter, by the by, is not extinct, but because of the eighteenth amendment, has become almost a sacramental rite instead of a joyous occasion. The writer was at a party lately, a birthday gathering, where the host served the last drop of his supply of baccardi rum in some extra delicious cocktails. It was a solemn moment, for the purveyor of this seductive beverage is a New Englander, and his Puritan conscience will not permit his even trying to break the law by securing any more of this or any other liquor which he happens to lack.

Royalty at Rustic Tasks.

To return to the moment's fancy in dwellings: It was the fair and unfortunate Marie Antoinette, queen of France, who set the fashion a hundred and fifty years ago of abandoning palaces for humbler dwellings, when she made a temporary home in the sublimated farm house, "Le Petit Trianon," and turned her maids of honor into haymakers and milk maids, delighting to share their bucolic tasks with them.

I wonder what she would think of some of the transmuted stables, garages, and lodges of today. They are so much more comfortable than even her grandest palace, that she would marvel at them. Their numerous bathrooms, their gas stoves, their electric lights, their telephones, and other modern improvements would amaze her.

Examples of this enlightened form of summer housing are the present abodes of Mr. and Mrs. James Keeley, Mrs. C. M. Ely, Mr. and Mrs. Watson Armour, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel T. Chase (there, I forgot that I promised Mrs. Chase not to mention her name this week!), Mr. and Mrs. Volney Foster, and Mr. and Mrs. Robert G. McGann. All these are in Lake Forest. The last named residence, to be sure, is not quite yet ready for occupancy, but will be in a week or two. It is a stately garage, which looks commodious enough to house many a car when the McGanns no longer need it for a summer home.

Mr. and Mrs. Foster, who rented their charming house in Lake Forest recently to Mr. and Mrs. Potter Palmer, expecting themselves to go east, found that they would have to stay in this part of the world. They therefore leased Dr. George Fiske's residence on Sheridan road, a remodeled garage, which has been the Fiskes' home since their house was burned down some years ago.

Rooms Overlooking the Skokie.

It is not very long since Maj. Frederick McLaughlin was a great and famous polo player and had a show stud of polo ponies. He built to house them a model stable on the western edge of Lake Forest, overlooking the meadows of the Skokie. In the second floor of this stable he had made for himself an airy suite of good sized rooms. These he furnished sumptuously and completely. It made delightful bachelor quarters.

But, in time, polo palled on the gallant major, and he disposed of his ponies. He continued to live a little while longer in his rural abode, then let it to Clive Runnells for one summer. Since then it has not been occupied until this season, when the gay and numerous Keeley family make that quiet, fragrant bit of countryside echo with the sounds of cheerful family life.

Maj. McLaughlin, having taken his belongings to his exotic apartment in the top floor of that smart looking little white building which is such a feature of the southeast end of the boulevard link bridge, Mrs. Keeley brought out from her town house enough furniture to fit up the place for the Keeley family. She has made it one of the prettiest and most habitable in that community of attractive homes.

On the second floor of the building is an unusually long, airy room with windows opening out to the east, south, and west. This she has furnished with comfortable easy chairs, low tables, pretty cretonne covers and curtains, books, flowers, pictures, and all the oher paraphernalia of a charming home, and so made it a favorite gathering place for people of all ages.

The room is of such generous proportions that parties of thirty or more can sup there easily at one end, leaving the other free for a gathering of the clans before and after the meal.

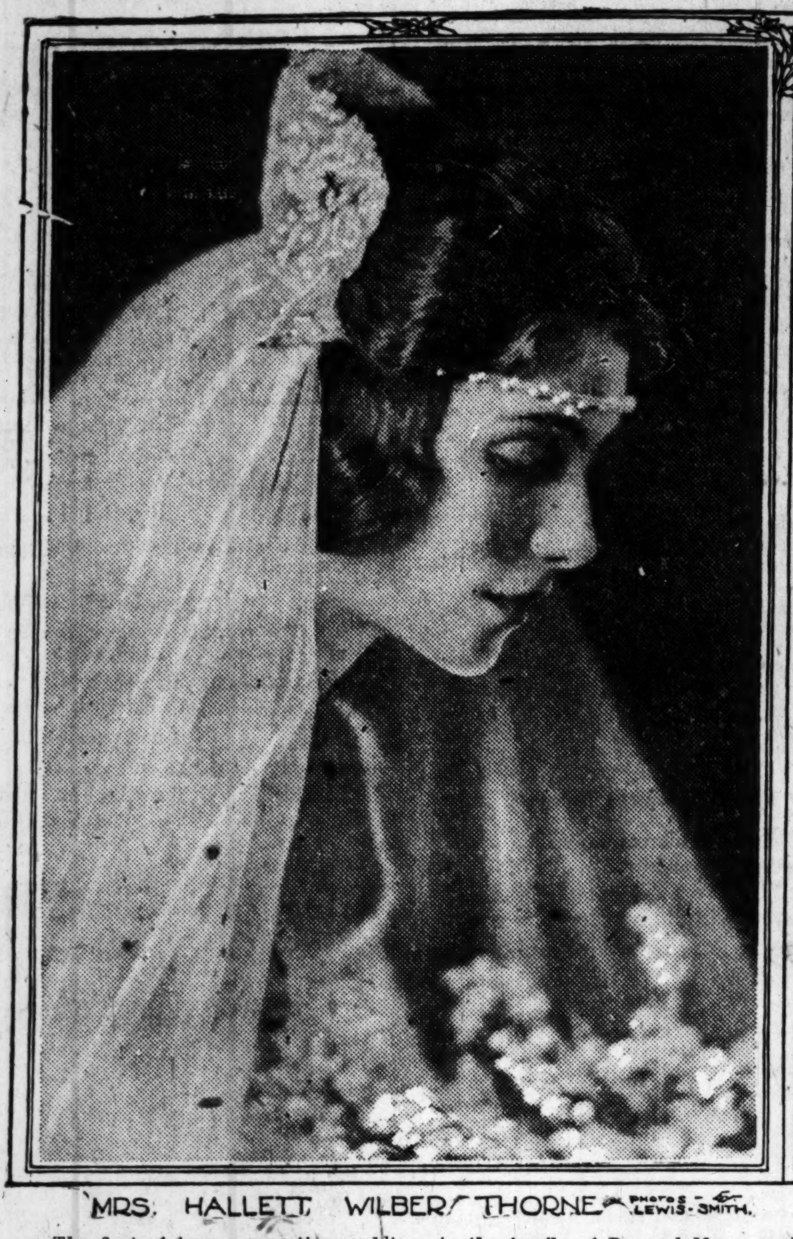
Where Quiet Reigns.

The place is in a secluded spot off Green Bay road, where the outlook from the windows is over green fields, and the only sounds are the early crickets at night and the earlier birds in the morning. By the way, the cricket is sounding the summer's knell a full month ahead of time. What does it mean, Watson?

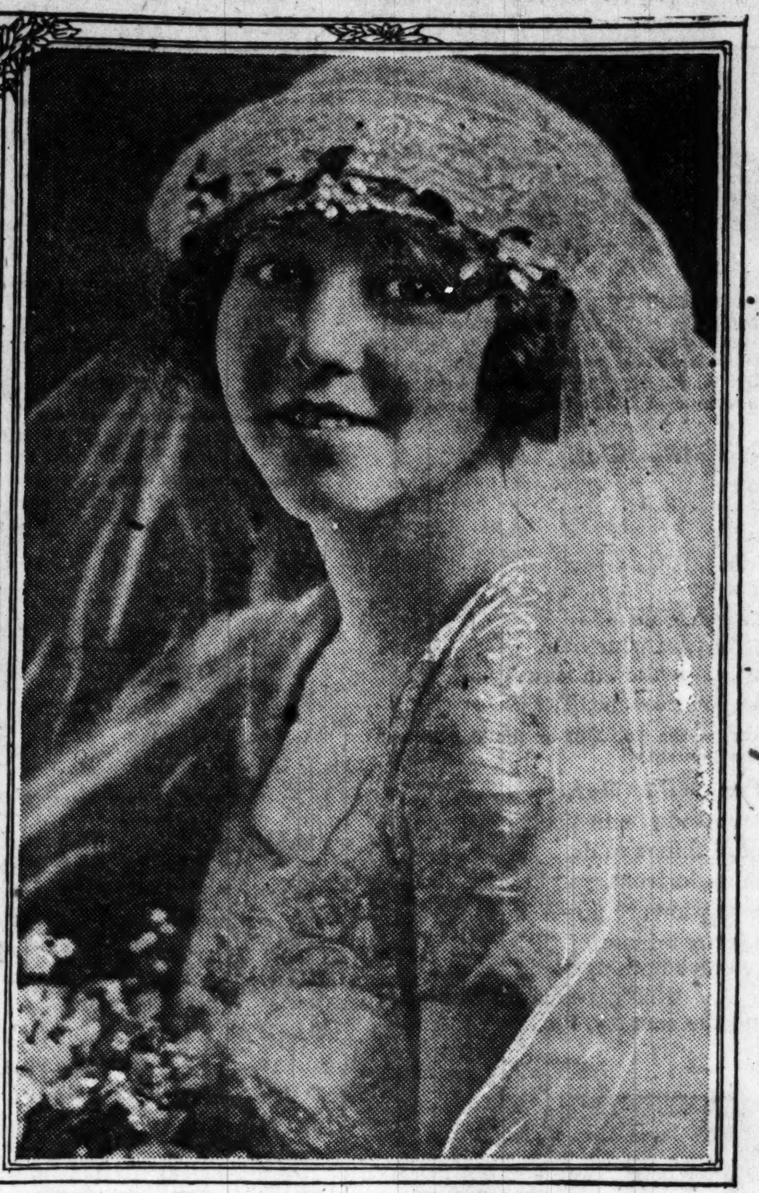
The Samuel Chases (I beg your pardon, Mrs. C.) are housed for the season, with their faithful chow dog, Ching, in a domain at once tiny and chic. It is the garage attached to the residence occupied this summer by the Owen Joneses on Vine avenue, Lake Forest.

This is a three room, ground floor dwelling, very complete as far as it goes. Its chief characteristic is its elasticity, for its hospitable mistress treats it as if it were a full sized chateau, and gives in its pretty combination sitting and dining room the jolliest parties enjoyed by the gay world of the north shore.

Not far away, within a stone's throw of their present dwelling, is the new house on Oakwood avenue which the Chases bought this summer and which they are remodeling. It will be ready for occupancy some time in August and promises to be a delightfully colonial affair. Mrs. Chase is an enthusiastic collector, and colonial furniture, wall papers, and ornaments have long been a passion with her. As they have rented their town apartment for a year and a half, the Chases plan to spend next winter in their new home.



MRS. HALLETT WILBER THORNE — PHOTOS—LEWIS-SMITH.



MRS. BENJAMIN MORRIS THOMAS.

The first of four prospective weddings in the family of Dr. and Mrs. Frank Taylor Andrews of 448 Barry avenue took place on June 27, when their only daughter, Miss Susanna Elizabeth Andrews, became the bride of Hallett Wilber Thorne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Thorne of Lake Forest. The wedding took place at the Fourth Presbyterian church, and among the attendants were the fiancées of the bride's three brothers, Miss Elora Perkins, Miss Elizabeth Thorne, and Miss Marion Evans of Scarsdale, N. Y. Mrs. Thorne wore her mother's wedding gown, and an interesting feature of the reception was the serving of wedding cake which had been saved from the wedding of Dr. and Mrs. Andrews.

Before her marriage on July 9 Mrs. Thomas was Miss Theresa Rew Gross, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred H. Gross of Evanston. Mr. Thomas is a son of Morris St. P. Thomas of 745 North Michigan avenue. The wedding was celebrated in the garden of the Gross residence, and Mr. and Mrs. Thomas left for a wedding journey in the east, after which they will reside in Cincinnati.

Their next door neighbors on Oakwood avenue, the Leander McCormicks, are also expecting to spend the winter in the pretty white pillared house they now occupy. A few doors to the north two young bachelor cousins, Wolcott and William Mitchell Blair, are keeping bachelor hall. So what was a few months ago a quiet street has become the rendezvous for many lively young Chicagoans.

Two White Cottages—Twins.

Of another type of architecture are the two charming gate houses which Mrs. C. M. Ely occupies at present. Her place is situated in the leafy groves on the northern boundary of Lake Forest. When finished it promises to be one of the loveliest of its kind in this part of the country, as its mistress is noted for her unerring taste. As it is, there is no more entirely delightful summer abode than these two white cottages, twins, standing on either side of the entrance gate, close to the road, but sheltered from it by thick hedges and big gates. An awning connects the two cottages, so that one can pass under it from one to the other.

The drawing room and bedrooms are in one of the white cottages, and the dining room and kitchen are in the other. Behind each is a delicious little formal garden with fountains, paths, hedges, flowers, and stone seats. In one there is a big striped umbrella and table where one can sit and watch the flowers grow, the butterflies feed, and the birds bathe in the pool.

Within the little houses are a marvel of taste and comfort. In fact, one wonders whether their mistress can ever have so desirable, so entirely chic an abode in the lovely Georgian mansion which David Adler is planning for her further up her driveway at the end of a velvety "tapis vert." The lime avenue which encircles this green stretch of lawn is going to be a lovely feature of the place, and up to the present is unique in that region of up to date gardens. Not far away is her orangery, a delightful building of white brick like the cottages, and set in one of the prettiest gardens of the neighborhood.

Universal Cry for Smaller Homes.

On the other side of Lake Forest on Green Bay road is the Watson Armour place, where they, too, are living in what in time will be their gate houses, or abodes for their gardener and chauffeur, attractive, cozy red brick cottages.

Life has grown so complicated in the last few years that every one is reluctant to make it more so by setting up housekeeping in large houses which will demand lots of service. Sizable establishments are at a discount now to the average housekeeper. Smaller dwellings and fewer servants is the desire of the wise and experienced. It is the cry all round the world.

Over in England big estates are a drug on the market. Great mansions which have been in the possession of ancient families for centuries glut the real estate offices and can be had now for a song. I doubt if they will ever be considered desirable. The tendency is all toward concentration and such a sharing of the burden of living as is exemplified in a large, up to date, well managed apartment house.

A Nest in the Aldis Garden.

Even haylofts are being turned into summer homes. Some years ago Mrs. Arthur Aldis transformed the hayloft of the Aldis stable, which once sheltered the family hunters (the Aldises were early patrons of the hunt), into an artistic abode for the then newly wed John Roots. An Art institute student adorned the hanging balcony with quaint and delicious frescoes depicting young love in various aspects, and the loft that once held the fragrant hay was transmuted into parlor, bedroom, and bath, besides other such needful things as kitchen and dining room. This delightful nest is sequestered in the depths of the Aldises' lovely garden. A so-called literary woman now occupies it with great contentment, and sends forth important messages to a waiting world. This is one of them.

The old standards of luxury are rapidly changing. All the form and state of large establishments are growing too burdensome to be considered desirable. Enormous suites of salons and drawing rooms, such as are to be found in villas and châteaus of olden times, are no longer demanded. In their stead numerous bathrooms are required. In place of large retinues of retainers modern equipment such as electric washing machines, dish washers, vacuum cleaners, gas ranges, steam heaters, etc., are provided in the establishments of today.

This is what our inventive democracy has done for the world. We have made domestic service unpopular with those who would naturally seek it, and have devised machinery to dispense with much of it.

Cowboy Contest at Grant Park.

There never was a more splendid union of a fine charity with a thrilling spectacle than the world's championship cowboys' contest now going on at Grant park for the benefit of the Illinois Children's Home and Aid society. The contest is an entirely amateur performance, which insures its sincerity and a certain spirit only to be found in such trials of skill and strength.

The Children's Aid is one of the best institutions of its kind in the country. It finds homes for children in temporary or permanent need of such. It also shelters and gives medical assistance to those youngsters who require it before being placed in good homes. In the past year 3,018 children were helped, which included 8,311 visits to parents and children from representatives of the society.

Robert J. Bennett is honorary president, John Alden Carpenter is vice president, A. F. Shiverick is treasurer, and John H. Winterbotham is secretary.

The cowboy contest is a great event among the western cowboys, who bring their ponies and equipment here at their own expense and enter into the tournament with a zest seldom to be seen nowadays. Not even in the haunts of the old wild west was there better horsemanship than is being exhibited at Grant park during the eight days of this championship contest.

Roping and throwing steers are among the feats of skill exhibited there. Some of the stiffest propositions in the way of refractory ponies and bucking bronchos are being handled by the visting cowpunchers. Be sure to go to one or more of the contests, both for the sake of the charity to be aided and for the excellence of the show. The contest began yesterday and continues for a week.

Archibald Marshall in Lake Forest.

Much the most interesting visitor which Chicago has had for some time was Archibald Marshall, the well known English novelist, who spent a few days here last week. Having met in turn Arnold Bennett, Galsworthy, Hugh Walpole, and W. L. George, the writer must confess that of them all Mr. Marshall was easily the most companionable and accessible, from an American point of view. He has a simple, friendly, quiet quality which is delightful and restful.

He spent last week-end as the house guest of Arthur Aldis, and in the two days of his stay, although the weather was of the hottest brand that a heat stricken summer could provide, he showed great equanimity and fortitude on his tour of all the Lake Forest show places. He admired with intelligence everything which he saw, and expressed interest and pleasure in his active sojourn, although the thermometer continually tried to monopolize attention.

Last Monday evening he was the special guest of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Hamill at their apartment, 199 Lake Shore drive. From their windows, eight stories above the ground, he viewed what he declared was the most interesting and amazing spectacle he had seen in America—namely: the vast throng of people—10,000 was the computation—which was disporting itself on the shore and in the water from North avenue down to Walton place.

The sound of their voices and laughter united to form a veritable symphony of many melodies as it rose to the onlookers up above. It floated on the air with an occasional dominating strain rising above the rest, then sinking and mingling as some group or other of more than usually sonorous voiced foreigners passed on.

A Close-Up of Our Lake Shore.

The western sky was all aglow. Against it the city buildings and the park foliage rose soft and misty, while the shimmering lake stretched in opalescent loveliness to the horizon. Glittering little pleasure steamers and throbbing motor boats broke its glassy surface. The drive below and leading up to the park was a mass of swiftly rushing motors, whose lamps flashed in dazzling fashion in and out of the trees and bushes which border the roadway. It was such a scene as you could not match in any other great city. As Mr. Marshall expressed a desire to view the throng from a nearer point, the party descended to the street. The English writer studied the immense and varied throng with keen silence. Every nationality and tongue was represented there. Most wero in decided déshabille, and looked as if the excessive heat was their chief preoccupation. There were some splendid physical types among them, bronzed Apollos, though there were not so many Venuses. A few couples from the nearby Drake hotel were being pushed up and down the esplanade in the wheel chairs, which are becoming such a feature of the lake walk.

It was a heterogeneous crowd. The smartly dressed dinner company looked out of place, and, it may have been only imagination, but one had the feeling that the denizens of the shore did not fancy what they probably looked on as an unwarranted intrusion of an alien element.

The Charm of Tranquility.

Archibald Marshall is often called the Anthony Trollope of today, which means that his novels deal with the quiet, rather uneventful lives of the upper middle class in English society. The value of the story is in the telling, in which he is like his predecessor in entirely subordinating himself to his characters. It is a style of writing which grows in charm on the reader as he becomes acquainted with the author's manner and viewpoint. Like Trollope, he did not achieve fame until he was 40 years old, although he had been writing for many years.

The first of his romances to attract wide attention was "Exton Manor," a charming story of rural England. He carries his characters through book after book, as did Trollope, and gives one a sense of intimacy which engages the interest of the reader to a greater degree than many a writer of more force and what the slangy would call "punch," achieves.

It is with especial anticipation that we look forward to what he will write about his impressions of America. It is to be hoped that he will show more discernment and understanding than did W. L. George, who seemed never to forget that he had a reputation as an epigramatist to support. There is nothing so fatal to literature as an unrestrained passion for epigrams.

So, next day, Mary came to the Peoples Gas Stores.

ART AND ARCHITECTURE

How the Chicago Municipal Flag Came to Be Chosen

By Eleanor Jewett.

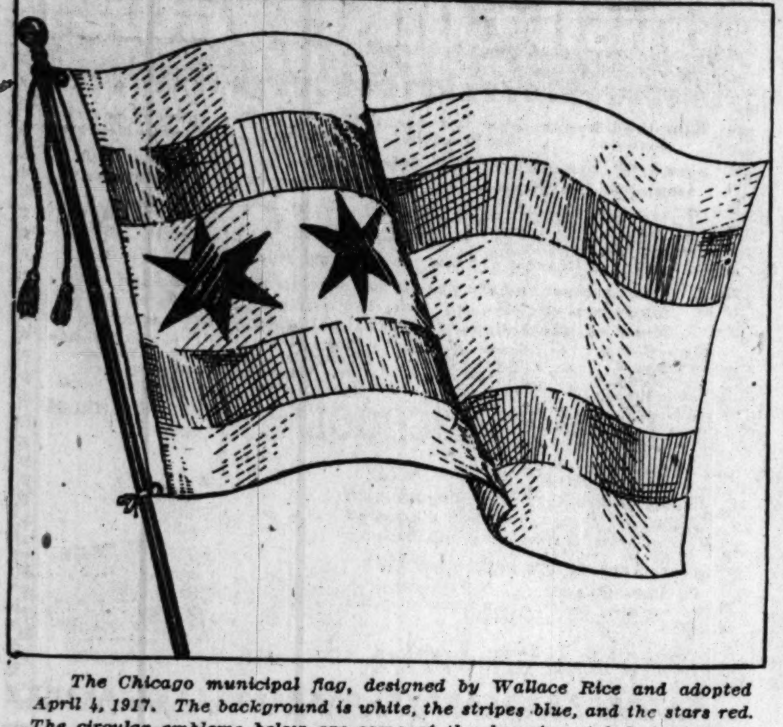
SOMETHING which is more or less always taken for granted is the possession by a country or a municipality or a community of a flag. Colleges have flags; schools have flags; nations have flags; all the everyday assemblies of people, which one easily imagines, apparently have flags to distinguish their particular species of assembly from every other kind. And yet, up to April 4, 1917, Chicago did not possess a flag of her own! It is only since that date that Chicagoans have been able to claim a municipal flag.

But we have made strides in flag ownership. Now nearly every branch of public service has its own distinguishing flag. The following account of how Chicago's flag and the special city flags came into being is so interesting that I quote it in full:

"Chicago has a municipal flag since April 4, 1917, made so by unanimous vote of the city council and the approval of Mayor Thompson two days before the United States declared war upon Germany.

"It has just been made the official flag as well of the Pageant of Progress, instituted to commemorate the fiftieth anniversary of the great fire of 1871. This opens July 30 on the Municipal pier.

"Chicago's flag owes its significant, appropriate, and beautiful existence to the efforts of James A. Kearns, now clerk of the Municipal court, but at the time of its adoption and for several years previous alderman from the Thirty-first ward. Knowing that many other cities at home and abroad had similar emblems, he proceeded in an orderly and intelligent way to secure one for the city of his birth.



The Chicago municipal flag, designed by Wallace Rice and adopted April 4, 1917. The background is white, the stripes blue, and the stars red. The circular emblems below are some of the departmental designs to be shown on the edge of the municipal flag, between the stripes.

"On his motion in the council made July 12, 1915, Mayor Harrison appointed a Chicago flag commission, of which Mr. Kearns was made chairman. In accordance with the terms of the motion, two other aldermen, John A. Richert of the Fourth and Herman E. Miller of the Twentieth ward, sat with him, together with Miss Mary E. McDowell of the Woman's City club; Charles L. Dering, who later gave place to William Hudson Harper of the Chicago Association of Commerce; Allen B. Pond, who similarly gave way to Henry K. Holsman; the late Charles Francis Browne, and Lawton Parker of the Chicago art commission; Clarence A. Burley for the Chicago Historical society, John Fitzpatrick of the Chicago Federation of Labor, and Mrs. Lewis K. Torbet of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

"At the same time Mr. Kearns had Frederic Rex, in charge of the municipal reference library, prepare a report published by the city as Municipal Reference Bulletin No. 5 in November, 1915. Mr. Rex entered into correspondence wtih other American cities, and learned that forty or more had already adopted municipal flags, including New York, Philadelphia, Boston, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Baltimore, San Francisco, Richmond, Va., and many more. This number has been greatly increased since, as by Fort Wayne, Springfield, Ill., and Santa Barbara, Cal.

"Somewhat later Lawton Parker, esteemed as a painter at home and abroad, asked Wallace Rice, who lectures on heraldry and flag designing at the Art institute, to draw a set of rules for the guidance of the open competition which the flag commission decided to establish. Twenty rules were formulated, and for the first time in the history of American municipal flags it became possible for a city to secure a design which would look and act like a flag as distinguished from almost anything and everything else.

"Hundreds of designs poured in upon Mr. Rex, who was made secretary of the flag commission. Not more than three or four of the total number, exceeding a thousand, showed any perception of the prime fact that flags are intended to fly in the air, either from a short pole carried by hand or from a longer one set in the ground or on a building. Many of them looked pretty well on paper, where every part of the pattern is seen equally well, but would not have shown to any advantage dancing in a variable breeze, which is the only test of a flag. This may be termed the literary fallacy, the unconsciousness on the part of the inexperienced that the chief value of any flag lies next the staff, that the middle third of it is far less visible, and that the outer third is of least consequence. Many more showed the other fallacy, that everything in Chicago is peculiar to it, including its river and old fort.

"One indignant competitor, when asked by the commission if his design, borrowed from the Y-shaped device which THE TRIBUNE had adopted just before the World's Columbian exposition, indicated that such a stream as ours is exclusively significant of Chicago, replied that some cities were built on rivers lately, but that this was not true of ancient cities. As a matter of fact, almost his identical design had been made the flag of Fort Wayne in the summer of 1916, commemorating the geographical fact that the St. Joseph and St. Mary rivers united in the center of that city to form the Maumee. More than a score of American municipalities have forked rivers within their corporate boundaries, though hardly to so marked a degree as Fort Wayne, and the statement of that fact in a flag design cannot possibly have exclusive local significance.

"The question of putting old Fort Dearborn on the flag was raised by the commission itself. Apart from putting anything implying the stability of fortifications on a flowing, dancing bit of bunting, just such a blockhouse as Chicago's old fort was built in every frontier village across the American continent, from New England to California. Furthermore, Toledo had just adopted a city flag, which showed such a blockhouse, shared in common with a thousand other places in the country.

"Many designs submitted showed from eight to twelve different and conflicting colors—as many as the designers happened to have in their boxes of crayons or paints. One ingenious person, who had heard of Chicago as a melting pot of humanity, placed a large black pot in the middle of his design, with red flames overflowing from it. Proceeding by elimination, it was not difficult for the commission to arrive at a result, which it did in March, 1917, after several hearings.

"The design accepted was the work of the man who had drawn the rules for the contest, and was in no sense the result of chance. Mr. Rice spent six weeks in making more than 300 combinations of shapes and colors, finally arriving at one which seemed satisfactory. Taking the best of all, enough to fill the floor of his living room, he asked the opinion of everybody who came to the house—visitors, delivery boys, milkman, grocer, and the rest. Without fail they chose the one which best pleased its designer and which is now the Chicago municipal flag.

"It shows a narrow white stripe at the top, rather less than a sixth of the whole surface. Below it is a bright blue stripe, exactly one-sixth. Next below this is a broad white band, more than twice as wide as the blue. Below this again are bright blue and white stripes, like those above. On the broadest band are two red stars with six 30 degree angled points each. The top stripe stands for the north side of the city, the upper blue band for Lake Michigan and north branch of the river, the broad white band for the west side, which is larger than the other two sides put together, the lower blue stripe for the south branch and the drainage channel, the lower white stripe for the south side, the first star for the Chicago fire of 1871, and the second for the Chicago fair of 1893. White, the composite of all colors, prevails, standing for the admixture here of all the nations; blue is the color of water, and red is the color of fire and of festivity. If anything is done to Chicago as notable and epoch making as the fire, or if Chicago does anything as notable and epoch making as the fair, another star can be added.

"New York adopted a flag open to several valid criticisms, chief of which is permission granted by the enabling ordinance to the various city departments to use it with the name of the user lettered on the flag. Letters have no place on flags—unless three thicknesses are stitched together to form them they do not read alike on the two sides; they are difficult and perplexing to read, and they interfere with the free stream and flow of the flag itself.

"So with the Chicago flag went a set of twenty-four designs for as many city departments, and separate devices for the three branches of the city government: the mayor has a mural crown, as of republican Rome, on the blue stripe above the stars; the city council a red liberty cap between the stars, and the Municipal court the zodiacal sign of the balances, for the scales of justice, in the same position. There are also designs for notched and pointed banners, to be hung vertically, and for pennants, two feet wide and fifteen or twenty feet long, coming to a point.

"The departmental designs largely explain themselves and are all round, to be shown on the edge of the flag farthest from the staff—the fly—between the blue stripes.

"The city clerk, who keeps the record of the council, has two crossed silver quill pens on blue; the city treasurer a gold coin bordered with blue, and the city controller a gold coin bordered with red; the city collector, in charge of vehicle taxes, has a red wheel with six spokes; the city engineer, whose chief concern is with bridges, shows a golden bridge or bar, across blue, for water; the city law department bears a golden fascis, symbol of magistracy in ancient Rome, on a red roundel; the department of public service, which holds the public utilities to their duties, has a golden star on blue, the color of fidelity, and the department of gas and electricity shows a thunderbolt in a ring, all red.

"The department of public works has crossed black crowbars in a green ring; the department of buildings a white tower on a blue field; the department of health, a golden caduceus, symbol of the art of healing, on blue; the police department shows the six pointed police star on blue; the fire department flames in a ring, all red; the election commissioners a red liberty cap in a blue ring, the national colors taken with the white background; the civil service commissioners a silver key on a green background, since they open the door to the novices in the city's employ, and the board of education a golden lamp of learning on a royal purple ground.

"The public library board has an open golden book on similar purple; the paymaster's bureau a silver coin with a green border; the bureau of water the six wavy bars of blue and white which are the heraldic symbol of water, and the bureau of sewers the same design colored black and silver, while the bureau of rivers and harbors has six equal sectors alternately silver and blue, still the colors of water; the bureau of streets has checkers of black and white; the bureau of parks, public playgrounds, and bathing beaches shows five stripes, blue in the middle for water, yellow next for sand, and green on the top and bottom for grass and trees, and the board of local improvements has a white star on red, since its achievements may some time entitle the city to another red star on its flag.

"The ordinance adopting the flag and these devices to be used by the city departments in connection with it forbids the use of the flag for advertising purposes or by lettering it in any way and provides a fine for such abuse. For commercial and all similar use the Y-shaped figure adopted through THE TRIBUNE's efforts in 1892 is officially made the city device and still serves for all unofficial purposes."

"Once Our Superior— Now Our Equal"

By Guy Lee.

On fields of sport and marts of trade
  Fare forth our sweet patooties;
No more in cloistered realms they shade
  Their rare, exclusive beauties.
They once were delicate and fair,
  Almost angelic treasures;
But now we meet them everywhere,
  In business and in pleasures.

Wisconsinites have passed an act
  Declaring gals our equal.
For men this is a welcome fact,
  A very happy sequel
To past conditions. We can't fuss
  At such amendment nifty—
They used to be too good for us,
  But now it's fifty-fifty.

Riders Crowd Miles of City Bridle Paths

By Frank Ridgway.

HORSEBACKERS EXHIBITING THAT DISTINCTIVE FEEL—This party was out for a breezy jaunt over the bridle paths that wind among the trees, shrubs, rose gardens, and over lagoon bridges in Washington park. Left to right: Miss Gussie Ravenscroft, Gen. Abel Davis, Miss Catherine Rosenwald, Miss Eleanor Rosenwald, and Morris Rosenwald.

IT was a wise old Arab who once said, "The most exalted seat in the world is the saddle of a swift horse." In spite of this old proverb's being contradicted by evidence coming from mossy river banks, plush upholstered cushions of limousines, cock pits of airplanes, and prize fighting arenas, 5,000 turf enthusiasts scramble for the 1,000 exalted seats now existing in Chicago.

Even in this era of iron, steel, and gasoline when air lanes are filled with planes and boulevards with automobiles, there is a general revival of equestrianism wherever there is space for bridle paths. A few years ago it was easy to imagine that the automobile would soon crowd the saddle horse out of this country, but to the surprise of many it has served to popularize him. Everybody wants to ride, for on top of a horse they get that distinctive feel when they swing into a gallop by the side of sluggish automobile traffic, moving at intervals between whistles on the boulevards that parallel the bridle paths.

More Paths for Gotham.

In dozens of cities riders are appealing for more room on the bridle paths. They are crowded in the parks in New York. They lack room even in Central park, where there is space for more than 2,000 riders. The same is true in Pelham Bay park and Riverside, Prospect, and Van Cortlandt parks, where the riders are so thick that they are crowded throughout the day. In all of these New York parks riders are begging for an extension of the paths and connecting links between the parks.

Horses keep the dust kicked up from sunup to sundown on the thirty mile bridle path in Potomac park in the District of Columbia. There is a revival in riding and driving in Philadelphia, St. Louis, Kansas City, Minneapolis, and, in fact, practically all of the larger cities. Out in California—Los Angeles and San Francisco, particularly—horsebackers ride and jump the rear round, and this sport is on a bigger boom than ever before in many of the western cities.

Shortage of Horses.

In Chicago there are five riders for every horse. It is estimated that there are only about 1,000 riding horses in Chicago, and half of them are owned by the riders themselves, leaving a comparatively small number in the riding academies to be hired.

Evidence of the popularity of horseback riding is seen almost every morning when the Chicago stables are emptied and the gray, bay, brown, and black beauties are out cluttering their 4,000 hoofs on the cindered paths, giving their riders a blood tingling gallop through shady nooks along the lake shore or over rustic lagoon bridges in the parks.

There are approximately twenty-five miles of bridle paths in the parks of Chicago, and plans are under way to lengthen them and build new arteries that will accommodate the increasing number of riders.

Chicago Parks Crowded.

It is estimated that there are now more than 5,000 who use the bridle paths in Chicago, and this number is expected to be doubled within the next few years if horses are obtainable and the proposed extensive bridle paths system is built.

The big parks on the south side—Jackson and Washington—are already streaked with cinder paths. The two parks are connected with wide paths that run along the south edge of the Midway, giving south side riders a jaunt of approximately eight miles without having to double back. They get a long, country-like ride around the big meadow at the north end of Washington park and a cool, breezy canter along the path near the lake shore in Jackson park.

A similar stretch is on the north side. Riders can start at the municipal pier and ride along the north shore and over the paths that wind among the trees and shrubbery in Lincoln park for almost five miles.

Planning More Cinderways.

Those who ride in the Edgewater district and on the west side use the country roads that lead into the Cook county forest preserve.

The cinderways in Chicago's parks average about twenty feet in width, allowing plenty of room for riders to pass or ride four and five abreast. Such wide paths will be built in carrying out the new plan.

It was once thought impracticable for the north and south sides to be connected so that riders could go on cinder paths from one side of the city to the other, but now equestrian enthusiasts are hopeful that the two parts of the city will be linked together when the lake front plan is completed. By connecting the north and south sides and opening a continuous pathway into the forest preserve, as is anticipated, Chicago riders will have free access to a bridle path system of more than a hundred miles in length, the most extensive in America.

Since horseback riding has become so popular and riders are no longer safe on the streets, bridle paths have had to be lengthened. Within the last decade, and particularly within the last two or three years, many miles have been added to the black turf in almost all of the larger cities over the country.

"We need many more miles of bridle paths," said C. Groverman Ellis, secretary of the Chicago Equestrian association. "Horseback riding in Chicago is more or less restricted to those who live on the south side and north side, and those who live near the center of the city are not able to use conveniently the bridle paths. With the new plans thousands of people, who have heretofore not been able to use the paths, will be given an opportunity to ride. While our present bridle path is one of the best in the whole country, our riders are seriously handicapped because the paths are not properly connected. Riders are forced to stay on their own side of the city, for there is no safe way of crossing on horseback from the north to the south side, or vice versa.

Not Enough Breeders.

"Out of town visitors and those who live nearer the loop would be able to ride if bridle paths and stables were available," added Mr. Ellis, who has been riding on Chicago's streets and bridle paths for twenty-five years. "A pathway built along the outer drive of the lake front would give many thousand a chance to ride who are not able to use the paths in our parks. We need arteries into the Cook County Forest Preserve. The 17,000 acres in the Forest Preserve offer a wonderful opportunity for horseback riders, but there is no way of reaching the preserve except over hard automobile roads."

Perhaps the greatest handicap to this field of outdoor sport is that Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, and other southern states, where most of the good riders and drivers are produced, breeders have gone out of the business. Saddle horses are scarce, and with the supply gradually dwindling, the demand is rapidly increasing, adding prestige to the sport of kings. Unless there is something done to stimulate interest in the breeding of good light horses, the joy and benefits of horseback riding will be seriously interfered with in the future.

Slams of Life

By J. P. McEVOY

THE HAPPY LIFE GUARD.

Observe the handsome Life Guard,
He hates to wear his clothes,
Because beneath his street attire
His muscle never shows.
And he has lots of muscle—lots,
As everybody knows.
(Including himself.)

How happy is the Life Guard,
How saturate with glee,
The while he saunters to and fro
Where all the maids can see,
And titilate their ganglia
With swooning ecstacy.

Along the beach he saunters,
Along the beach he goes,
And girlish hearts go pittity—
And girlish ardor glows,
For they love to watch him pose and pose
And pose and pose and pose.

HOW AN ASTRONOMICAL TELESCOPE IS CONSTRUCTED
BY S. F. MAXWELL

MAKING A TELESCOPE.

ONE day while I was riding on the train I met Charlie Bernaur. He came over and sat down beside me.

"I hear Elmer Douglass has a new telescope," he said. "Have you looked through it? Is it any good?"

I replied that the new telescope was an excellent one for its size, and that although its mounting left some things to be desired, I had spent several enjoyable hours trying it out on the moon, planets, and stars.

"I have always wanted to own a telescope," he said, "but I fell that I cannot afford one. They say Douglass paid $400 for his."

"If you want one, why don't you make it?" I asked. "You can make a fairly creditable glass for a few hundred pennies."

"I have a spy glass now," he answered. "What I want is a real astronomical telescope, one to show Saturn, Jupiter's moons, sunspots, double stars, and all such things."

"Exactly," I said. "You can have just that kind if you really want it."

"How?"

"Go to some good optician's shop and buy one of these big goggle sized convex spectacle lenses. Get one of from 60 to 80 inches focal length. Never mind the reasons for such specifications, they will come to you in due time, and the thing for you to do is to buy the lens. Then get one of these little hand magnifying glasses, the kind with lenses a little larger than your thumb nail. Get two or three of different strengths, if you want to, for they will be handy to give different strengths of magnification to your telescope.

"Now buy a length of pipe a little shorter, say four or five inches, than the focal length of your big lens. Mount the big lens squarely in one end and be sure that it is square. Roll up some paper for a draw tube, and put your little lens in. Stick this draw tube in the piece of pipe, and slide it back and forth until the images of distant objects appear sharply. This is your telescope, and it will work."

"Will it show Saturn?"

"It will. It requires about thirty diameters of magnification to real it. Thirty diameters means that it will make the Saturn in the telescope look as big as thirty real Saturns would appear if set side by side, or thirty trees to one, or thirty men. The magnification of a telescope is determined by dividing the focal length of the front lens by the focal length of the eye lens.

"You will notice the big lens magnifies very little. This means it has a long focus. The small lens magnifies strongly because it has a short focus, and the stronger the shorter. If your object lens has eighty inches focal length and your eye lens one, then the telescope will magnify eighty diameters, which ought to satisfy any one for a start.

"You can tell what the focal length of a lens is with no trouble at all. Take it out in the sun, throw a "burning spot" on something, and then measure the distance from the spot to the lens.

"How will the telescope you describe work?"

"It will be what is called an inverting telescope. Everything will appear upside down. This may seem a disadvantage on earth, but it is none in the sky. All astronomical telescopes are built that way, and no one ever sees the real sights of the sky except upside down. It makes terrestrial objects appear as they do in a camera. And if you must look at chimneys, steeples, and such things, I can assure you that in a few days you will forget entirely that you are seeing them upside down. I have watched birds, boats, distant skaters, airships, and such things many times through astronomical telescopes, and although I must have seen them upside down I remember them right side up."

"If I make the kind of a telescope you describe, can I carry it right out and look?" he asked.

Yes, but you had better make some sort of a mounting, for it will not be easy to hold so heavy an object in your hand. You can rest it on something; make a "Y" staff for it like an old-fashioned gun rest, or fix up a real mounting. The astronomical mounting will be a little more complicated, but it will repay you. Get the front fork and bearings, of an old bicycle, and mount them on a block of wood so that the fork sticks up at about half a right angle, 42 degrees, to be exact. When it is set, facing north, it will point at the north star. Hang your telescope tube between the forks, by bolting it to the axle from which spokes and rim have been cut. Screw the whole thing up tight, and when you look at the stars with it you will have a real telescope."

"I think I will try to make one, if it is as easy as you say."

"And don't forget to let me know how it turns out, so that I can give you a list of objects to see and tell you where to find them."

This Generation Wins High Praise from President

By Rev. Gardner MacWhorter.

"I HAVE faith to believe that success, in the minds of educated young people today, means less in terms of dollars than it did two generations or a generation or a decade ago, and that it means more in terms of sincere human service than it ever did before," declared President Harding, speaking at the recent convocation of the American university at Washington, D. C., to the graduates, faculty, and a distinguished audience, including the French ambassador, M. Jusserand, the Hon. Newton W. Rowell, K. C., of Toronto, Canada, and Bishop John W. Hamilton of the Methodist Episcopal church, chancellor of the university.

The full text of President Harding's speech was received last week by the committee on conservation and advance of the Methodist church.

"I have known somewhat intimately a good many young people who have been growing into their years of maturity within the time of the great crisis through which the world has been and is still passing. My observation of them and their attitude toward life has given me, I may tell you, a greater confidence in our future than seems to be reflected in the pessimistic observations of some who would have us believe that, because our young people nowadays see things differently than we older ones saw them, the youth of today must somehow be a bit degenerate.

"On the other hand, I am convinced that their early introduction to the realities of life has given to the youth of our day a truer perspective—a better appraisal of human and social values. I have faith to believe that success, in the minds of educated young people today, means less in terms of dollars than it did two generations, or a generation, or a decade ago, and that it means more in terms of sincere human service than it ever did before. If I am right, then surely we have accomplished much for the betterment of mankind; for it is a great thing to have implanted such a purpose, such a vision, in the minds and souls of those who are to direct our future. This we have done to a greater extent in our generation than ever before in a like period.

"The world and its experience constitute the greater university in which all of you have yet to complete, so far as it is humanly possible, your education. I pray you to go out to it without too much thought of personal rewards, of individual gains; and yet, not to thrust these considerations entirely aside.

"Be generous, but do not dissipate your capital of knowledge and ability in aimless, useless generosities; hold true to those ideals which your own country and its institutions represent. We Americans will best help mankind at large if we most earnestly sustain men immediately about us. Let us make our America the best place on earth in which men and women may dwell. Let us make it an example to all others, an inspiration and a model.

"It has been our privilege to see this country which we love called upon to redress the wrongs of a world, to restore the balance of civilization. We could not have played that part had we not first been true to ourselves, confident of our destiny, assured of our righteousness and of the power inherent in our concept of righteousness. Let us go on, holding fast to what, in the great trial, has been proven good, seeking to make it better, stronger, and more unselfish. Let us place a firm reliance in our destiny, and let us seek to realize that destiny through effort and unfaltering devotion."

THE REV. W. E. BARTON.

The Rev. William E. Barton, D. D., pastor of the First Congregational church of Oak Park, was recently chosen moderator of the National Congregational council at Los Angeles, Cal., on the first ballot by the 900 delegates from nearly 6,000 Congregational churches throughout the United States.

The Rev. Dr. Barton has been the pastor of the First Congregational church of Oak Park for the last twenty-two years, coming to Oak Park from a six years' pastorate in the Shawmut church in Boston, Mass. He was formerly first assistant moderator of the National Council of Congregational Churches and the chairman of the committee that prepared a new constitution and confession of faith.

The Rev. Dr. Barton is a native of Illinois, though he attended Berea college in Kentucky, from which he was graduated in 1885. His early ministry was served in the mountains of Kentucky and Tennessee, where he gathered the material for his later stories—"A Hero in Homespun," "Pine Knot," and other stories which deal with the loyal south.

The world conference on faith and order, the chairman of which is the Episcopal bishop of western New York, the Rt. Rev. Charles Henry Brent, D. D., LL. D., senior chaplain of the A. E. F., on Gen. Pershing's staff throughout the war, is maintained by a continuation committee representing the following communions: Anglican, Armenian, Baptist, Congregational, Czecho-Slovak, Disciples, Eastern Orthodox, Friends, German Evangelical, Lutheran, Methodist, Moravian, Old Catholic, Presbyterian, Reformed, and South Indian United churches, besides the Episcopal church in the United States, at whose general convention in 1910 the conference was first proposed. The secretary of the conference is Robert M. Gardiner of Gardiner, Me., and the treasurer is George Zabrizskie, D. C. L., 49 Wall street, New York.

The thirty-third annual convention of the National Young Peoples' Christian Union of the Universalist church has been in session at St. Paul's Universalist church, 60th street and Dorchester avenue, since last Wednesday, and will continue through today, with meetings this morning, afternoon, and evening, and an address at 7:30 o'clock by the Rev. John Smith Lowe of Boston, Mass. Monday and Tuesday will be given up to excursions and pleasure trips, with musical programs each evening given by Mr. Craven, Miss Mote, and Miss Bessie Marie O'Brien, harpist.

Special preachers at the Hyde Park Baptist church, 5600 Woodlawn avenue, today and next Sunday will be Prof. Gerald B. Smith of the University of Chicago, on "The New Day in Religious Thinking," and Prof. Allan Hoben of Carleton college, Northfield, Minn., on "Play or Delinquency."

With over 100 acceptances from out of town ministers, the midsummer conference for ministers and religious workers, which began last Tuesday at Union Theological seminary, probably will break all records for such gatherings held before at the seminary.

The members of the conference who have signified their intention of being present hail from all over the country, one guest coming from as far west as Wyoming. Ohio will have a large representation, with Pennsylvania also supplying a good proportion of the attendance. But one minister from New York has made application, this being due to the fact that many of the New York members will live at home while attending the sessions, while it is necessary for visitors to reserve their rooms in advance at the seminary dormitory. It is expected that New York ministers will register immediately preceding the conference. Most of the dormitory accommodations are now gone.

Although the lecture course of the conference did not begin till Tuesday morning, the official start was at 6 o'clock Monday night, when all met at supper followed by a devotional service with an address by Prof. Henry Sloane Coffin. Sessions were held from Tuesday to Saturday of last week, and will continue from Monday to Friday of this week, the meeting closing on Friday.

Speakers include, besides Dr. Coffin, Prof. Benjamin W. Bacon of Yale university, Prof. Eugene William Lyman, Prof. Kemper Fullerton of Oberlin school of theology, Prof. Daniel Johnson Fleming, and Prof. William Adams Brown. With the exception of Dr. Fullerton and Dr. Bacon, all the speakers are professors at Union Theological seminary. Each will deliver five lectures on theological and kindred subjects. There will be several informal evening conferences, and the members also will visit a number of New York's social institutions.

BILL: Aw, where'll I go?

PA: How should I know, boy, how should I know?

(They finally get water and eat their luncheon under the shade, interrupted only by the occasional visit of an acrobatic bug who has been doing somersaults and full twisters overhead and missed connections . . . there are ants, too . . . and mosquitoes . . . and the Baby sneaks off with two pickles, each of which is good for two stomach aches . . . All in all, a very successful picnic—there's enough left to feed three more Potter families—there always is . . . Pa and Bill fall asleep . . . Mamie and Ma gather up the débris—they are not the poisonous variety of picnickers that leave a nice place looking like a pigpen . . .)

Scene VII.—The Return.

(It is getting dark and the Potters are still many miles from home. Everybody is tired and cross . . . the only thing that keeps Pa awake is worrying about the left rear tire. . . . The roads are choked with cars homeward bound and everybody is choked with dust.)

PA (honking horn):
I wish that hog would keep to the right—
I'm not gonna eat his dust all night.

BILL: Aw, go right past 'im . . . give 'im the air.

MA (from rear seat):
You'd better go real slow up there—
We'll be in a ditch first thing you know . . .

PA (worried):
I know that tire is going to blow;
I'm glad I didn't inflate it higher.

MA: You make me sick with your darn old tire.
It's the same old wail wherever you go—
You're always hoping the tire won't blow.
B-A-N-G! Ps-s-s-s-s-s-s-s . . . BLUMP!
BLUMP! BLUMP!

PA: What did I tell you? That's the one!
The Blankety-Blankety Son-of-a-Gun!

(Pitch dark . . . everybody out while Pa jacks up car . . . Ma, Mamie, the Baby, who has been sleeping and howls blue murder . . . Pa finally gets car jacked up.)

PA (starting to take rear tire off rack, discovers some one let all the air out):
The spare is flat! If I ain't a chump!

BILL: And that isn't all—we haven't any pump.

PA: Blankety-Blankety! There you are!
I KNEW I WAS GONNA HATE THIS CAR!

(And that's that.)

Pale rose georgette crepe combined with Binche lace and rose satin shoulder straps. Keep it always dainty rose and white for 15c

Today—

HALF the beauty of dainty georgette underthings is the fascinatingly feminine colors contrasted with sheer white laces.

Tintex is the dye powder that in the lighter shades does not affect the lace, unless the garment is left in the solution too long. Then too, Tintex is not a soapy dye. You tint in the clear rinsing water. No soapy muss, no cloudy water to confuse you in getting the exact delicate shade you want and no alkali to injure the fabric.

Keep your summer gowns and lingerie always new and fresh with Tintex.

Tintex may be obtained at all drug and department stores, at 15c a package. 15 fashionable colors.

A BETTER CHANCE!

[This ad will possibly only be of interest to one out of a hundred, but to those few exceptional men I can talk brass tacks pretty quick.—Sales Manager.]

A chance to make better money than he is now making—I mean for the man who has shown he's got downright selling ability and can get orders where other birds fall down but is handicapped with his present line. He's got a dominating personality that's hard to get away from, a go-getter, a tireless worker—in fact, a better man than his job. And if he had a line that had it over any competition in price and quality and was a big seller—he'd make a killing! He may now be selling something entirely different, but that cuts no ice providing he has shown he's SELLING IT. One who is a top notcher on groceries to the retailer or with similar experience would probably have an initial advantage, but not necessarily. Nine of my men in Illinois are daily putting it across big and our heaviest selling season is still before us. But they have a way of getting what they go after. I want three more men of that caliber. They will make around $4,000 clear the first year. Maybe $5,000. Some of our men will run close to $6,000. This is no shyster proposition. I am state manager for one of the big concerns in the U. S. and have sold the line for six years. I know what can be done. If you are the hefty kind of man I am looking for, around thirty or thirty-five likely, have an auto, and want to earn what you are worth on straight commission—I can show you where the money is. Downstate men may send photographs, which will be safely returned. Local men give telephone numbers, BUT WRITE ME FULLY. Address O N 267, Tribune.

ADVERTISING SOLICITORS.

One of Chicago largest newspapers can place two or three unusually high grade men in positions that will enable them to expand to the limit of their ability. This is not an ordinary advertisement for professional job hunters, and we do not want ordinary men. Compensation will be on a straight salary and expense basis.

To qualify you should not be over 35 years of age, also have good education, command of English, neat appearance and above all an earnest desire to make a reputation for yourself in the advertising field.

The men we select must be able to deliver an intelligent and convincing solicitation to the highest type of Chicago business man.

Apply to Mr. Armstrong, 12 to 4, Sunday or Monday. Rm. 213, 326 W. Madison-st.

DOGS, BIRDS, POULTRY, ETC.

MILK GOATS—A RARE OPPORTUNITY— Cook County will on Saturday, July 23, sell all of this season's buck kids—14 in number—at about one-fourth to one-half their real value. They will be placed on sale at 3 o'clock and none will be sold before that. Should there be more buyers present than there are goats for sale, they will be sold at auction.

It is an exceptional opportunity to secure fine stock at a fraction of its value; as it is the desire of the County Board to distribute them through the territories where they will do the most good.

Pure bred buck kids, no better than these, bring from $100 to $300 each. These are as near pure bred as can be, that is, they are mostly 31-32 pure, but because they are not pure bred they will be sold at from $10 to $50 each.

We reserve the right to limit the sale to one to a person.

Kids ready for inspection at 1 p. m. Saturday, July 23d.

Sale begins at 3 o'clock and will be held at the Oak Forest Infirmary, Oak Forest, Ill.

Oak Forest is located on the C., R. I. & P. Railway, 20 miles S. W. of Chicago.

PAIGE REBUILT CARS

Prices Reduced

When Bird-Sykes says "rebuilt Paige" they do not mean merely "shined up," "tightened up" and "tuned up." Rebuilt in the Bird-Sykes shop means taking apart motor, transmission, and rear axle—measuring or testing parts to determine wear—replacing worn parts with new—rebuilding—adjusting—tuning up—repainting body—refinishing top and upholstery. That is why a Bird-Sykes rebuilt Paige satisfies the eye as a new car and its performance is the same as new.

Guaranteed by Bird-Sykes.

Every rebuilt Paige is guaranteed by Bird-Sykes to be as represented and in perfect mechanical condition, and if anything turns out unsatisfactory within a reasonable time Bird-Sykes make it good without cost to the purchaser.

Easy Terms—No Brokerage Charge.

We do not ask our customers to pay the exorbitant rates charged by so-called automobile bankers in order to buy of us on deferred payments. You can buy a Bird-Sykes Rebuilt Paige on easy terms, paying only ordinary bank interest rates on deferred payments.

PAIGE 6-55—6 cylinder, 7 passenger touring car [Continental engine]. Rebuilt and refinished a rich Burgundy. This car has 7 inches more space in the tonneau than any of our other models. An ideal vacation car; it has room enough for the entire family and luggage. Equipped with 5 good cord tires and wire wheels, spring bumper, lock, full factory equipment of tools. It is apparent that this car has had careful handling. Top and upholstery in excellent condition. Easy riding. Easy handling. Just a couple of months ago we sold this type of car for $1,850. Our reduced price today is $1,450.

PAIGE, 1919 SPORT MODEL. Rebuilt in our own shop. Repainted recently. This car is known throughout the land as the most beautiful sports model on the market today. Has black pencil grain leather upholstery in excellent condition. Top is also in fine shape. Has a good set of cord tires, very desirable spare tire. Equipped with lock built in the transmission, also spring bumper, full factory tool equipment. This is a most satisfactory car to drive because of easy riding qualities and snappy Continental motor. Very reasonably priced at $1,600.

PAIGE 4 PASSENGER COUPE, 1920. Model 6-42. In excellent condition. Thoroughly overhauled and rebuilt wherever necessary; 5 good cord tires. Velour upholstery. Coach condition excellent. This car will make a very fine family car, and to be appreciated must be seen. Price, $1,900.

PAIGE LARCHMONT, 1920, Model 6-55. In excellent shape throughout. Original finish. This is the famous sports model known as the most beautiful car in America. Easy riding on account of long rear Cantilever springs; leather upholstery with the famous Marshall spring cushions; has a Continental 10-D engine; powerful yet economical; car is ready for the road; 5 good tires, bumper, etc.; top and upholstery in good condition. Here is a car that has had unusually good care. We consider this car a very wise purchase at $1,900.

PAIGE, MODEL 6-55, 1920, BROUGHAM, 5 Passenger Coupe. Rebuilt and refinished same dark blue color as our 1921. Ideal all year car for a small family. One of the most popular cars in our line. Equipment most complete, including 5 good tires, bumper, heater, spotlight, cigar lighter, vanity case for the ladies, and other accessories. Top a taupe color; velour upholstery; Continental engine. Car has our famous cantilever springs and makes a very easy riding automobile. Ample carrying space in rear to accommodate two suit cases. Account of reduction in prices we can sell this for only $2,550.

PEERLESS, 1921, 8 CYLINDER, 7 PASSENGER. Practically a new car. Delivered April 27, 1921. Car has been run less than 3,000 miles; just enough to properly wear the motor in. This car is in a 100% condition throughout. Its equipment is most complete, including a bumper, motometer, spotlight, mirror, cord tires, etc. The original finish is perfect—a light maroon color. We consider this a most unusual offering of the season. Price $2,450.

CADILLAC'S 7 BARGAINS

STUTZ TOURING CAR, 1920, MODEL H. You would hardly know that this car had been used. Paint, upholstery, and tires show practically no wear. Has 5 wire wheels, one extra tire, bumper, clock, etc. The mileage is exceptionally low, as this car has only been delivered a short time. If you are looking for a high grade Stutz, do not fail to see this car before you make your decision. Our price is so low it will move it to the first person examining the car. Price $2,000.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, VICTROLA COUPE. This is a double letter and latest of this series. Equipped with an excellent set of cord tires, one extra tire, tire cover, bumper, clock, etc. Velour upholstery shows practically no wear. Paint which is dark Cadillac green is in excellent condition. This is probably one of the most popular models ever built by this company in a roomy 4 passenger coupe. Mechanical condition of this car we will guarantee, as we have just made a thorough inspection and replacement of worn parts. You probably will never have another opportunity of buying this series at this price, so you will have to act quickly. Special for this sale, $2,900.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 57, TOURING CAR. This is a double letter series. As this series is the latest series of the type 57, the purchaser is going to get something way above the average in a used car. The tires on it are exceptionally good. Has seat covers, bumper, clock, and an extra tire. This is the first opportunity that we have had to offer a double letter series Cadillac Touring Car at this low price. For this reason you will have to act quickly. Special for this sale, $1,900.

DODGE COUPE, 1920, equipped with 5 wire wheels and a good set of tires, one extra and velour upholstery. Body and paint condition exceptionally good. Mechanical condition excellent. This will be your opportunity to buy a Dodge Coupe at a ridiculously low price. Special for this sale, $1,100.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, ROADSTER. This is the latest and current series and selling new today for over $4,200. This car does not look like a used automobile. Customer is exchanging for a Cadillac with larger seating capacity. Goodyear cord tires now on car show no wear; has one extra and bumper. Painted standard Cadillac blue with hardly a scratch on it. This car has been used so little that it can hardly be told from a new automobile; has not been run enough to thoroughly limber up the motor. If you are looking for a roadster greatly reduced in price, but still like a new automobile and carrying a new car guarantee, do not fail to see this car at once. Special for this sale, $3,250.

STUTZ 4 PASSENGER SPORTS MODEL. This is the Model G delivered very late in 1919. The original owner of this car has not driven it a great deal and has given it most excellent care. In fact, the car does not look as though it had been used very much. Mechanical condition is exceptionally fine, and paint is good. Has a set of wire wheels. Has an excellent set of cord tires and bumper. We are offering this car at way below the market price. If you are looking for a snappy, up to date, high grade, slightly used Stutz, do not fail to see this car. Special for this sale, $1,500.

CADILLAC 8, TYPE 59, SPORT PHAETON. This is the latest and current series that we are delivering new today, costing $4,200. Customer is exchanging for another Cadillac and we are able to obtain this car at a very low figure. Painted dark Cadillac blue. Has an excellent set of tires, bumper, spare tire. In fact, the entire car does not have the appearance of the ordinary used car. Is guaranteed by this company. This is the first opportunity we have ever had to offer a current series at this very low price of $3,100.
